Trade Accord Seen

Times News Services

OTTAWA (CP) — Meetings in Washington have left Prime Minister Trudeau and senior ministers looking for an end in the near future of international trade and money crises and the U.S. surcharge on dutiable imports.

Although differences apparently remain on the future exchange rate of the Canadian dollar, trade disputes between the U.S. and Canada are expected to be resolved simultaneously.

But Mr. Trudeau said the greatest significance in his one-day meeting with President Nixon Monday was the U.S. president's assurance that his country had no wish to dominate Canada economically or politically.

That statement, made at a Washington news conference Tuesday and reiterated in the Commons, brought howls from NDP Leader David Lewis that Mr. Trudeau humiliated Canada on his trip.

The prime minister's report was "one of the most distressing declarations by any prime minister of this country."

STANFIELD MILDER

Opposition Leader Robert Stanfield, however, criticized the Commons statement by Mr. Trudeau more mildly.

The prime minister was to be commended for bringing back good news of Mr. Nixon's attitude toward Canada. But Mr. Trudeau provided too many generalities and not enough specifics.

Mr. Trudeau said the purpose of his trip had been to seek reassurance from Mr. Nixon that the U.S. had no desire to infringe on Canadian economic independence.

Mr. Lewis said Canadians did not want assurances from the U.S. about their independence. They wanted assurances from the Canadian government that it would "not continue to sell Canada out to the multinational corporations and so destroy our independence.

Andre Fortin (SC-Lotbiniere) said Mr. Trudeau had come back empty-handed. An artificial crisis had been created to take attention from domestic problems.

U.S. EAGER

Finance Minister Edgar Benson said outside the Commons U.S. officials were eager to reach agreement on the international monetary crisis and there is a "very real possibility" of a settlement before the end of the year.

"There is a very real possibility that a settlement can be reached in the next month or two—if not at the Group of Ten meeting in Washington Dec. 17 and 18, then very soon thereafter."

Benson also indicated progress was made towards changes in the 1965 U.S.-Canadian auto trade agreement. He gave no details however, and said officials would still have to work out many aspects.

NEWS BRIEFS

Fire Emergency

LOS ANGELES (UPI) — The fire department declared a "major emergency" today as gale force winds spread a score of brush fires through the populous northeastern rim of the Los Angeles basin, but firefighters held off the flames and only a few homes were damaged.

No Estate Tax

CALGARY (CP) — Alberta will not introduce a provincial estate tax when revision of the federal tax system takes effect Jan. 1, says provincial treasurer Gordon Miniely.

Currently, estates not passing between spouses are subject to federal succession taxes of which the provinces receive 75 per cent.

Dollar Tumbles

LONDON (UPI) — The U.S. dollar tumbled to a new four-year low in relation to the British pound today but the price of the U.S. currency improved in West Germany, Switzerland, Belgium and Holland.

HORSING AROUND in the snow can be fun and a sure way of getting to school no matter how deep the snow gets. Vicke Cook gets a sure-footed ride aboard Tammy in the Royal Oak area. From three to seven inches of snow fell in the capital region overnight.

Snow Will Go, Says Weatherman

Snarled traffic, cancelled air flights, power outages — that was the dismal picture today after winter's first icy curtain enveloped Vancouver Island overnight.

Greater Victoria escaped comparatively unscathed, with only a few inches of snow in most areas, but up-Island communities reeled under heavy falls up to a foot deep.

Snow tires or chains are mandatory on the Malahat which, RCMP said, has a "heavy snowpack," and also on the new Cowichan Valley highway.

Motorists violating the law will be charged, police warned.

Snow was still falling steadily this morning, but the forecast was that it would turn to rain by afternoon and decrease to a few showers tonight, with low temperatures in the mid-thirties.

OTHER AREAS

The snow began to fall Tuesday evening in Victoria and Tuesday afternoon in other areas.

Police today reported a rash of minor accidents mainly caused, as one police spokesman said, "because motorists were caught napping without their snow tires."

Tow truck operators were kept busy hauling cars out of ditches, and most police stations had reports of rear-end collisions.

Victoria, Oak Bay and Esquimalt all had clean accident slates this morning, but Saanich police reported one minor accident involving no injury.

Most of the problems on the roads were in the outlying areas. Colwood RCMP said: "We've had a lot of cars in trouble, mostly ditch calls and rear-enders."

FIVE INCHES

At Sooke, where the snow covering was about five inches, RCMP said many motorists got into difficulties as they headed for work from their homes on side roads.

B.C. Hydro bus services were running to schedule, but the Sooke Stages 7 a.m. run from Colwood Corner was delayed 20 minutes by a fallen tree on Latoria Road.

Driver Jim Golightly didn't wait for help to arrive. Aided by a passenger, he got to work with an axe until he'd cleared a path for his bus.

Trees falling on power lines were also blamed by B.C. Hydro for power outages this morning affecting Sooke, Sasenos, Colwood and Langford. Residents were without power from about 6 a.m. to 10 a.m.

Tuesday night Victoria was hit by a power blackout in an area within Government, Douglas, Herald and Bay streets, lasting about two hours. Parts of Blanshard, Queens and Victoria West were also affected by the blackout.

Air Canada said its early morning flight to Vancouver today was cancelled and another was 75 minutes late.

Pacific Western Airlines reported several flights cancelled with no air traffic able to use the airports at Campbell River, Powell River and Port Hardy.

There was scant consolation for would-be passengers phoning the airline's office in Victoria. After the usual explanation that the line was busy, the recorded female voice said in seductive tones:

"If you are not looking forward to winter this year Pacific Western has some fabulous sunny holidays in Mexico, Hawaii and Jamaica . . ."

STAY HOME

In Duncan today RCMP were advising motorists to stay home if possible, and only to drive if it was really necessary.

Overnight snowfall ranged from five inches in Ladysmith to over 16 inches on the Old Lake Cowichan Road.

All schools in Chemainus except St. Joseph's Roman Catholic school remained open, but buses were running late.

PC Policy Shadowed By Hoopla, Election

OTTAWA (CP) — Progressive Conservatives closed their two-day policy convention Tuesday with the hoopla of pre-election optimism and the election of a new executive over-riding the policy talks themselves.

Over and over the 1,500 delegates repeated the prediction of Leader Robert Stanfield that with hard work and unity the party would form the federal government after the next election, widely expected next year.

They went on to elect Don Matthews, 45, a London, Ont., businessman, as national association president to give campaign strength to the party's organization.

But, as a western MP put it, the hours of poorly-attended policy discussions Monday, and the 370 resolutions voted on Tuesday did not "mean a damned thing."

RESULTS NOT BINDING

Most of the resolutions were written by a headquarters committee headed by Thomas Symons, chancellor of Trent University, and which included Mr. Stanfield.

The rest were added after committee debates Monday.

Results of the balloting—which may not be known until February—will not be binding on the party's Commons caucus.

The resolutions ranged over the whole field of public policy, including foreign investment, legalization of marijuana and the right of any province to self-determination.

China Won't Allow India Occupation

MOSCOW (AP) — China will not permit India to maintain a military occupation of East Pakistan, informed non-Soviet diplomatic sources reported Tuesday.

The informants, who are in regular contact with Peking but declined to be identified, said the Chinese government will not intervene militarily in the war as long as Pakistani forces continue fighting.

However, should Pakistan show it is unable to hold out against the Soviet-backed Indian war machine, one said: "We will have a tailor-made situation for a people's war.

"China is not going to give it up."

The sources would not detail what form the Chinese action might take, but indicated that Peking would support and supply guerrilla forces that could turn East Pakistan into an Indian-style Vietnam.

The Chinese have firmly supported Pakistan in its conflict with India and sharply castigated the Soviet Union Tuesday for "bullying Pakistan . . . in collusion with the Indian expansionists."

"There is very little that Moscow has done for India, that Peking has not done for Pakistan," one source remarked.

The Pakistani government is reported to be maintaining continuous consultations with Peking on the war and the developing situation in the United Nations, where the Soviet Union in the last two days has vetoed two ceasefire and Indian withdrawal resolutions in the Security Council.

The Kremlin expressed fear Sunday that China may act even before East Pakistan falls to Indian troops.

Diplomatic observers pointed to Moscow's declaration Sunday that the war constituted a threat to its security because of its proximity to the Soviet frontier. Moscow also warned that all countries should stay out of the conflict.

Indians Nearing Dacca

Times News Services

Indian troops thrust to within 22 miles of Dacca today, an official spokesman reported in New Delhi, as 20 invading columns fought their way across river obstacles in the heart of East Pakistan.

Judging by official Indian reports, the race to get first to Dacca, capital of East Pakistan, is going to the troops driving west from Assam, who have reached the river towns of Daudkandi, Chagpur and Brahmanbaria.

The first is 22 miles from Dacca, the two others each 40 miles from the provincial capital. India also reported capturing the airport at Comilla, 30 miles southeast of Dacca.

The loss of the important military bases of Jessore and Sylhet as well as of Brahmanbaria now is admitted in Dacca, but on the western front the Pakistanis are still deeply entrenched in the Chhamb sector of southern Kashmir, captured from India in a fierce tank battle.

More than 1,000 miles separates East and West Pakistan. India-held Kashmir borders West Pakistan to the north.

An air force spokesman in Rawalpindi, Pakistan, reporting that more than 250 Pakistani civilians had died under Indian air attack, said if the raids continue the Indians will be given "a bit of their own medicine."

SAYS NAPALM USED

This is the biggest civilian death toll announced by Pakistan so far and is more than double the 112 reported killed in a raid on Karachi Monday night.

An army spokesman declared that the conflict with India was now a Moslem holy war and said "any Pakistani who lays down his life in the conflict lives for ever in glory."

Only a few hours after the "cabinet" of the self-proclaimed government of Bangla Desh (Bengal nation) held a meeting Tuesday on East Pakistani territory captured by Indian troops, President Yahya Khan announced the creation of Pakistan's first civilian government since 1958.

It will be headed by an East Pakistani, 78-year-old Nurul Amin, a veteran politician who will have as his deputy premier and foreign minister the able and ambitious Zulfi-

Baird Funeral Friday

Victoria Ald. Robert Baird died suddenly Tuesday night in St. Joseph's Hospital.

Funeral services will be held at 2:30 p.m. Friday in St. Andrew's Presbyterian Church.

Baird, 65, collapsed in a city restaurant while addressing the annual meeting of the Capital City Speakers Group. He was taken to hospital by ambulance.

Baird suffered a severe heart attack in early September in Seattle and his speech, as guest speaker Tuesday night, was about his illness.

Mrs. Baird was at the Golden Cup Restaurant on Yates when her husband collapsed.

Baird was entering his eighth year of service as alderman on Victoria city council.

He had attended a few civic functions since his September heart attack and had recently been told by his doctors he could begin to work again and drive a car.

Baird was an investments salesman with Doherty, Roadhouse and McCuaig.

Police Asked Twice To Forget Charges

Mayoralty candidate Foster Isherwood said today he asked city police to drop charges against opponent William Scott after Scott was arrested Monday night while singing to symphony patrons entering the Royal Theatre.

Scott, 73, pleaded not guilty Tuesday in court to a charge of assault by trespass and was remanded to Jan. 3.

Isherwood, who was handing out electioneering material to patrons at the time of the incident, said he contacted police immediately afterwards and suggested to an inspector "the affair was not so serious from what I could see and that the matter should be dropped."

Isherwood said he then made a second attempt to have the charges dropped and was told that because the manager of the Royal Theatre, M. W. E. Cave, had laid the formal complaint, and because the police had formally laid charges, the matter could not be dropped.

Scott said today that he has had about 50 phone calls from people asking him who prompted the manager to lay the complaint.

Cave refused to discuss the matter today but the court clerk's office verified that the charges were laid by the police acting on Cave's complaint.

Scott said it's "an unsolved mystery" to him how and why the theatre's management was so prompted to act. He said he and everybody entering the theatre were in "a good mood."

"I assaulted them with culture and was imprisoned for it," Scott added that he wasn't trespassing because he had a season's ticket. He said he also had tickets for the two university students who were helping him to distribute pamphlets.

In his statement today on the incident, Isherwood said "I was not involved in any impromptu debate nor was I involved in any of Scott's actions. How he conducts himself is his own affair."

Isherwood said he prepared his statement because "Mr. Scott involved me in the incident and the press did not contact me for verification."

'SHOW CULTURE'

Scott said his performance started after he invited Isherwood "to show our cultural attributes to the patrons of the arts" instead of handing out political propaganda.

Scott said he never had another word with Isherwood but added that his opponent was "quite friendly" and never made any objections to his performance.

Scott said he was treated harshly by the police and made to stand for two hours, without shoes, in a cell before his bail was arranged.

Publisher Faces Monopoly Charges

BURTON, N.B. (CP) — K.C. Irving Ltd. was charged in provincial court here today under the Combines Investigation Act with operating three New Brunswick publishing companies as a monopoly.

And, in the Commons, the consumer affairs branch disclosed it is investigating sales of newspapers to the Thomson and Southam groups.

Donald Tolmie, parliamentary secretary to Ron Basford said details cannot be released until a report is made to the restrictive trade practices commission or court action is taken by the justice department.

The N.B. charges, laid beore Provincial Court Judge Charles Tweeddale, allege that the company operated the New Brunswick Publishing Co. Ltd. of Saint John, Moncton Publishing Co. Ltd. and the University Press of Fredericton as a monopoly.

Judge Tweeddale set Dec. 22 for the next court appearance.

The New Brunswick Publishing Co. publishes the Telegraph-Journal and Times-Globe in Saint John; University Press publishes the Daily Gleaner in Fredericton and Moncton Publishing publishes the Times and Transcript.

The newspapers, the only five English-language dailies in the province, are owned by interests of Saint John industrialist K. C. Irving.

SEARCHED OFFICES

Today's court action follows searches made by federal combines investigators and RCMP officers of newspaper offices in the three cities in April. The investigators were acting with a warrant signed by Judge Tweeddale.

In Fredericton, they searched desks and files of a Gleaner executive with a warrant giving them authority to look for documents pertaining to the sale of University Press to Irving interests.

In Moncton, the warrant authorized a search for documents and other company records relating to the incorporation of Moncton Publishing and to the exercise of control over it by K. C. Irving Ltd. from Jan. 1, 1947.

Similar searches were conducted in 1969.

Following last spring's searches Mr. Justice Albany Robichaud of the New Brunswick Supreme Court ruled against an application by K. C. Irving Ltd. to quash the search warrants.

But Mr. Justice Robichaud did quash three warrants used to search the homes of Saint John publisher Ralph Costello, Mr. Irving and Michael Wardell, publisher of the Daily Gleaner at that time.

On Oct. 22, 1969, F. C. Gascoigne, deputy director of investigation and research of the Combines Investigation Act, signed an order authorizing an inquiry into the production, supply and distribution of newspapers in New Brunswick.

Young Main Issue

John Young, controversial Campbell River Senior Secondary principal, has become the main issue in Saturday's school trustee election here, and his job may depend on who is elected.

Harold Newman, who has another year to go as chairman of the board, is openly dissatisfied with Young but, up to now, he has had a board which is split in its support of Young.

ACCREDITATION

Three persons who would support Newman are running, and three who would back Young are opposing them for the three open seats.

Young, an outspoken critic of the provincial department of education, has been hitting the headlines recently following the department's decision this fall to take away the school's accreditation.

The three "traditional" type candidates, which the two Campbell River newspapers have called "negative thinkers", are Sayward incumbent J. F. J. Johnson, Arnold Cameron and Tom Waring.

The progressives: Marianne Otterson, who is running against Johnson for the Sayward seat, and Mrs. Penny Liegel and Mike Henderson.

Johnson said if his group wins Young will be asked to either comply with the board's wishes or be dismissed.

BUCKS BOARD

Newman Tuesday agreed with this viewpoint and added that Young is still bucking the board.

For instance, Newman said that the provincial government last month orded Young to administer a survey test to all Grade 11 students, and when Young asked the students to write it, about half of the 164 students showed up for the test.

"The issue in this election is the administration of the school," Newman said. "The breakdown in administration is affecting students." He added that he had no argument about the teachers or the courses.

Cameron, a wholesale automotive dealer, said today he takes exception to the "negative thinker" tag applied to his side of the camp. "Waring and I have done fairly well in business, so how can we be negative?"

He said, as for Young, "the tail is trying to wag the dog. I just won't be pushed around by anybody.

Cheque Boosts Appeal

A $5,600 cheque from employees of all Canada Safeway Ltd. stores in Greater Victoria boosted the United Appeal total to $610,000 today.

But campaign chairman Eric Charman said the trend in the closing stages of the appeal still indicates the final figure will be around the $625,000 mark he predicted some weeks ago.

Charman added, however, that if those who still haven't given anything to the appeal will help at the last minute, it is still possible to equal the $651,000 raised last year.

In reviewing the situation across Canada, with United Appeal totals generally down due to economic and other factors, Charman said Victoria has no reason to be ashamed of its efforts.

Vancouver has collected or pledged about $4 million, Charman said. But he noted in an area including Burnaby, New Westminster, Surrey and Richmod, which also has a great deal of industry and commerce.

"Compared with that I think we come out shining," he added.

He said one of the big disappointments in the campaign has been the professional division, which at $31,000 is 20 per cent down on its 1970 contribution.

. . INDIANS NEAR DACCA

kar Ali Bhutto, leader of the People's party and most powerful political figure in West Pakistan.

Bhutto, a former foreign minister who recently led a mission to Peking to seek Chinese support for Pakistan, is reported to have agreed to serve under an East Pakistani in order to give the outside world an image of a united country.

News of fighting on the Western front is scantier than the battle reports from East Pakistan. But India claimed eight more Pakistani tanks destroyed, bringing total Pakistani losses in six days of fighting to 146.

THREE PLANES DOWNED

Three Pakistani aircraft shot down during the night brought their total losses to 60 against 25 Indian losses, a spokesman in New Delhi said.

Authoritative sources in Rawalpindi claimed today that Soviet personnel were flying Indian aircraft inside Indian territory and manning Indian missile sites and patrol boats.

Sylhet fell to Indian paratroops in the first airborne assault of the war in East Pakistan, reliable sources said in Dacca today.

Dacca airport was under attack Tuesday for the third time in as many days, but waves of Russian-designed MiG-21s of the Indian air force failed to cause any major damage until later in the afternoon, when the runway was crated in four places.

With the bombing of the airfield runway, the evacuation of 215 foreigners, mostly British, Americans and West Germans is not possible at present. The hotel where they are staying is running short of food.

In Dacca itself, population over 560,000, prices of essential goods have risen by up to 300 per cent in the last few days.

With no supplies reaching the eastern wing because of the Indian naval blockade and with little produce coming in from the countryside, the position in Dacca next week is likely to be grim.

An Indian government spokesman in New Delhi said fighting was still going on in the Chhamb region, where Indian troops were pushed back to defensive positions Tuesday.

"This is a pretty big attack," he said. "The Pakistanis have thrown more than an infantry division and three armored brigades into the attack."

The Pakistanis appeared to be trying to cut New Delhi's only road link with Srinagar, the capital of Kashmir. The highway is west of Chhamb.

A big tank battle appeared to be entering its third day in what probably has been India's severest military test so far.

The spokesman said Indian forces had been forced to withdraw five to seven miles by the fierce Pakistani assault.

But, added the spokesman, the Pakistanis had lost 33 tanks in the two-day battle.

The Pakistan spokesman in Rawalpindi said Pakistan forces overcame bitter Indian resistance to capture Chhamb, about 10 miles inside Indian-held territory from the old ceasefire line.

Pakistani spokesmen said Pakistan forces were containing an Indian push on the south sector of the western front although the Indians had penetrated five miles inside Pakistan territory.

They also claimed that forces have blunted an Indian offensive near Siakot, the Pakistan town close to the Kashmir border.

half-mast today. Mayor Courtney Haddock said Baird was a "hard working and conscientious alderman. We are all saddened and shocked with his loss."

The funeral services will be conducted by a former city alderman, Rev. Dr. J. L. W. McLean, assisted by Rev. Bruce Molloy, and Rev. Dr. H. W. Kerley, of Fairfield United Church.

McCall Bros. funeral chapel are in charge of arrangements.

BYELECTION

Baird's death means a bye-lection must be held in the new year to fill the unexpired portion of Baird's two-year term of office. The mayoralty and aldermanic election to be held Saturday will have no connection with Baird's office.

Baird ran in 1969 for the mayor's post, losing to current Mayor Courtney Haddock. He led the 1970 aldermanic poll when he ran for re-election after a year out of office.

Surviving are the widow, Gertrude, and a daughter, Carro, at home; a son, James William of North Surrey; a brother, William, of Comox, and seven grandchildren.

. . . SNOW

Works crews throughout the Island have been working at full stretch on plowing, salting and sanding operations to keep main thoroughfares open.

The fast-moving storm which brought the snow to Vancouver Island also blanketed the rest of the province with several inches.

But on the mainland no major accidents or fatalities have been attributed to the snow.

SIX INCHES

The snow had reached a depth of six inches at Vancouver airport weather office this morning and was still coming down. Snowfall in other parts of Greater Vancouver ranged from about four inches in New Westminster to six inches or more on the north shore.

The storm tapered off as it moved up the Fraser Valley, with two falls of two to four inches between Abbotsford and Hope.

Traffic on the Trans-Canada Highway was held up for about two hours Tuesday night after three semi-trailer trucks jackknifed on a hill 20 miles west of Hope.

Militiaman Gunned Down

BELFAST (CP) — British troops, supported by police and militia, fanned out along the Northern Ireland border with the Irish Republic today hunting the killers of an Ulster militiaman who was gunned down in his bedroom.

Police and troops in the Irish Republic also were searching for 10 masked men who raided a military drill hall, held up 20 part-time soldiers and stole their weapons.

The Northern Ireland militiaman, 31-year-old bachelor Dennis Wilson, was in bed in his farmhouse at Caledon near the frontier late Tuesday night when three men burst in, police said.

"They ran into the bedroom," said a spokesman. "We don't know if Pte. Wilson had time to get up before he was cold-bloodedly murered."

The men who shot him—presumed to be Irish Republican Army agents—escaped in a car. Security sources feared they may have quickly crossed the border.

Refusal Backed

WASHINGTON (WP) — A federal judge Tuesday upheld the government's refusal to release the final four volumes of the Pentagon papers, which deal primarily with American diplomatic efforts through other governments to obtain the release of prisoners of war in Vietnam.

74-Year-Old Woman Tangled With Police

DALLAS — When 74-year-old Mrs. Rotia Hungerford was jarred awake at 2 a.m. Tuesday, she thought her house was being burgled, so she got out her gun.

What woke Mrs. Hungerford up was a car, driven by a speeding driver, crashing into her house.

When the two police officers who were chasing the car arrived on the scene, Mrs. Hungerford opened fire. The two officers radioed for help and were joined by 20 to 30 reinforcements.

It took 15 minutes of furious gunfire to sort the mess out. The casualties? A shattered winshield of a squad car. The speeding driver? He escaped in the confusion.

VANCOUVER — Margaret "Ma" Murray, editor of the Bridge River-Lillooet News, told students at Vancouver College high school Tuesday that their generation's future is bleaker than any faced by young people in the past. "Never have I seen the youth of this country going into the world to earn their living with Canada and the rest of the world in such a chaotic state," she said.

TUCSON, Ariz. — An English teacher who was fired because her pupils believed she was a witch has been ordered reinstated by the court. The Flowing Wells school board was ordered Tuesday to rehire Ann Stewart, suspended Nov. 25, 1970.

The board charged that Mrs. Stewart claimed to be a witch, taught witchcraft in such a way as to affect students psychologically, caused mental stress among teachers, discussed subjects not in the school curriculum and was insubordinate and a poor influence on pupils.

The light-haired, middle-aged teacher denied she told students she was a witch. "I told the students I had the physical characteristics of a witch, and they chose to believe I was one. It was more fun for them that way," she said.

BEVERLY HILLS, Calif. — Representative Paul McCloskey announced candidate for United States president, says he, his wife and their four children will skip one meal a day for the next six months and donate the money saved to a relief fund for Pakistani refugees in East Pakistan and India.

LONDON — Prime Minister Edward Heath is expected to stop off in Ottawa for talks with Prime Minister Trudeau on his way to his meeting with President Nixon in Bermuda Dec. 20.

LONDON — Operatic soprano Marie Collier was killed today in a fall from her fourth-floor apartment in the heart of London. She was 44. Police said they were investigating but did not suspect foul play. Miss Collier rocketed to stardom in 1965 when she replaced Maria Callas in a Covent Garden production of Tosca.

KENYON, Minn. — After four months on the job, police chief Tom Blair has been fired by the city council for handing out too many traffic tickets. Residents of the 1,500-member community in southeastern Minnesota complained, and Mayor Clarence Dahlen said Tuesday:

"If Blair caught someone going through a stop sign he gave them a ticket, and we just aren't used to that around here."

Blair said to no avail there had been a 50 per cent drop in accidents in Kenyon since he started issuing more tickets.

Anderson Petitioning

WASHINGTON (AP) — A Canadian member of Parliament and the Canadian Wildlife Federation have asked district Judge George Hart to reconsider his rejection of their petition to intervene in the case brought by U.S. environmental groups against the proposed Alaska oil pipeline.

Hart made his ruling last week and the appeal was filed Tuesday. The judge told reporters Wednesday he has given "the other side" — the oil companies and Interior Secretary Rogers—Morton—eight days to present opposing views before he hands down his ruling.

There was no explanation by Hart in last week's ruling, but he said he plans to make one when he rules on the appeal.

David Anderson (L—Esquimalt-Saanich), chairman of the Commons special committee on environmental pollution, seeks to enter the case because of the threat of pollution to the British Columbia coast from oil tankers transporting oil from Alaska to the U.S. West Coast after the fuel crosses Alaska by pipeline.

It is believed to be the first time foreign citizens have attempted to intervene in a U.S. environmental court case. Anderson has said he is willing to carry his case to the U.S. Supreme Court if necessary to establish the right to intervene.

Senate Rumbles Over Tax Bill

OTTAWA (CP) — An alarmed and rebellious Senate learned Tuesday night that the government's 707-page tax bill, now lumbering through the Commons, may not get to the Upper House before Dec. 17.

Senator Paul Martin, government leader in the Senate, said it may have to sit through the weekend before Christmas, including a Sunday, to pass the bill by Dec. 23.

Senator Martin, and the government, say the bill must be passed by Parliament by Jan. 1 —raising the possibility of sessions between Christmas and New Year's.

But government and opposition members in the Senate, showing signs of revolt, indicated they might force adjournment of the chamber until January.

The taxation year begins Jan. 1 and every tax-paying business and individual in the country could face a tangled situation if the bill isn't effective on that date.

MAY SEEK CHANGES

Another disruptive aspect loomed as some senators indicated that amendments to the four-inch-thick bill, on which the Commons has spent more than two months, may be sought.

The Senate's right to make substantial changes in a tax bill has never been admitted by the Commons and a constitutional showdown could result, a government source said.

Senate amendments to tax legislation have been accepted in the past, with the reservation that they don't represent a precedent. But if this happens now, the session is almost certain to continue through the holidays—since the Commons will have to sit to debate and vote on the Senate amendments.

Radiation Detected

LAS VEGAS, Nev. (AP) — Traces of radiation have been detected at 48 sampling stations in eight western states, the western radiological laboratory reports.

Atomic Energy Commission officials said the radiation probably came from a 20-kiloton low yield atmospheric test at China's Lop Nor test site Nov. 18. Nevada is the site of U.S. underground testing.

India Turned Its Back On Peace: Nixon Aide

WASHINGTON (Reuter) The White House, stung by allegations that President Nixon is anti-India, has revealed diplomatic contacts with Pakistan that gave the impression India turned its back on a peaceful solution for the Bangla Desh crisis.

White House officials said the secret diplomatic contacts encouraged them to believe that virtual autonomy for the Bengali separatists had been in sight before Indian forces attacked across the East Pakistan border Nov. 22.

The officials called an extraordinary briefing for reporters Tuesday night shortly after congressional critics of the administration denounced the president for what they called his unwarranted bias in favor of Pakistan.

The charges from Democratic Senators Edward Kennedy of Massachusetts and Edmund Muskie of Maine, among others, echoed allegations levelled against the president by the Indian press and officials and a number of newspapers in the United States.

In New Delhi, Indian officials accused the United States today of a breach of diplomacy in making "word of mouth" charges that Indian use of military force had destroyed chances for a peaceful settlement.

The officials rejected as "baseless" allegations by high-level U.S. spokesmen Tuesday that India sent its army into action against Pakistan without warning and before U.S.-backed peace initiatives were exhausted.

Ceasefire Vote in UN

UNITED NATIONS (CP) The General Assembly called for an immediate ceasefire and troop withdrawal on the Indian subcontinent Tuesday night and asked the Security Council to make a new attempt to find peace in the area.

The assembly gave an overwhelming 104-to-10 vote to a multi-country resolution calling for the ceasefire and withdrawal of Indian and Pakistani troops to their own borders.

The Soviet bloc and India opposed the resolution, which India is expected to ignore, at least for the time being. Resolutions of the assembly are not binding.

Liberals Say Court Lacks Jurisdiction

ST. JOHN'S, Nfld. (CP) — A Liberal lawyer told the Newfoundland Supreme Court today a Progressive Conservative move to hold a disputed seat won in the Oct. 28 provincial election was not the only available solution to current political uncertainty.

Nath Noel was outlining his party's position as Mr. Justice H. G. Puddester began hearing a Conservative application to have PC candidate Ed Maynard declared elected in St. Barbe South pending the outcome of a Liberal petition.

Mr. Noel questioned whether the court had jurisdiction to issue a writ that could affect the outcome of a general election.

He said if the court had jurisdiction it then would have to decide if the St. Barbe South dispute was "a case in which a writ of mandamus should be issued."

A writ of mandamus would direct the district returning officer to declare Mr. Maynard elected.

The Liberal petition, which may not be settled until after Christmas, seeks to have the election in St. Barbe South set aside on the grounds a recount could not be completed because 105 ballots were missing.

Uranium Found

ROTORUA (Reuter) — Uranium has been found on the remote and uninhabited Auckland islands 350 miles south of New Zealand's southern tip, a mining firm announced Wednesday. Australasian Mining and Oil Investments said samples of the find—the second of uranium in New Zealand—were being tested. Uranium was discovered in South Island in 1955 but mining has not proved economic.

A Meeting Between Friends

Prime Minister Trudeau's visit to President Nixon has ended with assurances of mutual goodwill, and with Canada's recognition that the United States has a serious problem in balancing its international accounts and that this country — like other friends of the United States — should assist as much as possible. On the other hand, the United States recognizes that Canada must have a trade balance that will enable it to repay its foreign — meaning mostly American — borrowings, and Mr. Nixon assures us that there is no intention "to grind us under, either inadvertently or by design."

That is fair enough; but it reveals nothing new on either side. The United States 10 per cent tariff surcharge and the other emergency measures will stand for the time being, although there is some assurance they will not last long. The feeling is, however, that they will be eased for all countries as soon as possible, not for Canada as a special concession.

Apart from unrevealed agreements which may have been achieved, these points appear to sum up the general results of Mr. Trudeau's visit — and the reaffirmation of goodwill should not be underrated. But the visit took place presumably after days or weeks of advance preparation, and the foolishness of Conservative Leader Stanfield's advice — that Mr. Trudeau should have rushed to Washington right after the emergency trade restrictions were imposed — is clearly revealed. Mr. Trudeau could only have returned from such a panicky trip in embarrassment, and even with a diplomatic rebuff.

The assurances of attention to Canada's immediate economic problems are heartening, even though certain concessions regarding duty-free tourist imports, our advantage in the auto pact, and other items, will be expected from this country. What causes uneasiness is the relatively vague references to future, long-term arrangements between the two countries.

When such references are made, Canadians cannot forget that the United States is rapidly running through its natural resources — including energy and clean water — and that Canada is still the repository of great wealth in this regard. How that wealth will be used is the key to Canada's future as an independent nation.

If we are able to reserve most of it for our domestic use, so that Canada becomes a great producer of finished goods; we may have won the battle for survival. But if our destiny is to be only the supplier of raw materials for the great United States productive machine and the people who are employed by it, then we can look forward only to a secondary role in the world economy.

With so much of our resources and productive capacity already owned by United States investors subject at home to United States laws and economic requirements, we have an uphill struggle ahead of us. That is not to say the mouse need hate the elephant with which it shares the continent. We just have to be a little more agile — and a little more interested in maintaining our own identity rather than being absorbed in our neighbor's.

Shoulder to Shoulder, Internationally

From opposite sides of the continent this week come cheering news items defining prospects for international co-operation in important fields. In each, Russia is one of the two nations involved.

Washington reports prospects of a joint Soviet-American space mission — an undertaking which would bring satisfaction to all who have criticized the highly competitive nature of some projects launched independently by the two countries. In space, surely, the human family on earth has a joint concern, not only to expand knowledge but also to carry out that pursuit in the most efficient and economical way possible. Co-operative efforts by the two countries most advanced in the field have long been advocated.

Closer to home, fisheries authorities at Nanaimo have indicated the possibility of joint Soviet-Canadian research on ground-fish around this coast, seeking to determine the abundance or otherwise of important food species.

In both fields, experts have approached the problem scientifically, seeking to avoid costly duplication by profiting from the findings of each country.

By such activity some of the abrasion of disparate ideologies may be removed.

Secrets of the Secret Talks

Were it not for my friend, Horace Snifkin, the public would never know what really happened in the secret talks between President Nixon and Prime Minister Trudeau. But with his spies in Washington, and his own well-known extra-sensory perception, Mr. Snifkin has given me a full report of this historic meeting.

Mr. Nixon began by apologizing for his notorious mistake in saying that Japan, not Canada, was the largest trade partner of the United States.

"Some silly little bureaucrat in my office," the president explained, "gave me a mass of figures and in the rush I must have read the wrong ones. I'm dreadfully sorry, Pierre."

"Think nothing of it," said Mr. Trudeau. "When I first took my present job, in a moment of weakness, some guys briefed me on the western farm problem. And I forgot to read the brief and asked the farmers why the government should sell their wheat when, of course, the law makes the government the only seller. That slip lost me more prairie seats than I like to think about."

"Anyhow," said the president, "I punished the official who misinformed me. I promoted him to a higher job as ambassador to somewhere or other, or put him in the cabinet. I forget which. You have to be tough with these fellows."

To the Senate

"I'm tough, too. But in Canada when a guy is obviously incompetent and worn out I appoint him to the Senate."

"I wish I could do that, Pierre, but unfortunately our Senate is elective. You've got a better constitutional system up there in Canada."

"Oh, I wouldn't say that, Dick. Our system has its flaws. It doesn't give me all the powers you have in the presidency. Still, with various unofficial arrangements I'm not doing too badly. The cabinet proposes and the East Block disposes. We call it participatory democracy and it works fine."

"On the other hand, you don't have my problem, Pierre. My problem is to bury the Old Nixon so people won't remember him."

"And mine is the precise opposite, Dick. I'm trying to revive the Old Trudeau who won the last election. Believe me, it's a hard job."

"But neither of us, I'm sure, is interested in re-election. I make that clear to the American people by delivering half-a-dozen speeches every week and travelling all over the world with television cameras."

"A wise method, Dick. As for Canada, I show my indifference to politics by eating ghastly suppers in church basements, kissing ugly girls, riding unicycles, scuba diving, weight lifting and announcing all vital policies outside Parliament with a wisecrack. You can't be more indifferent to re-election than that."

"We understand each other, Pierre. But I must tell you frankly that I was a little worried by that visit of Whatshisname to Canada."

"You mean Kosygin? Oh, that was just one of those things. You see, the Russians gave me a dandy banquet in the Kremlin and just for the sake of politeness I invited Kosygin to Ottawa, never thinking for a moment, of course, that he'd accept. Well, you can imagine my embarassment when he looked at me with those icy Siberian eyes and said he'd come next month. I couldn't get out of it."

"I know, Pierre. Those Communists are still pretty primitive. They have no manners. And you realize what happened to me. There's a ping-pong game somewhere in China and next thing I know that impetuous young fellow, Kissinger, is in Peking, China is in the United Nations and Chou En-lai is my best life-long friend! I tell you I look in the mirror every morning and wonder if it's Dick Nixon I'm seeing or some nutty, radical left-wing reformer."

"I feel the same way. I keep wondering if I'm still Pierre Trudeau of Montreal or the tragic hero in some grim fairy story that went wrong."

"At least you have your Just Society. And what have I got? Why, Phase Two for heaven's sake!"

"I'd trade you if I could, Dick. After all, Phase Two may work and then we'll imitate it. But the Just Society was only a slogan, a mere cliche, dropped into a speech by one of my writers and it passed my lips one night before I'd read the text and now I'm stuck with the damn thing. That speech writer is now in the Senate, you may be sure, and it serves him right."

"Well, at least you don't have John Connally on your hands. I chose that guy to do a temporary hatchet job and before I can stop him he's started to chop down the whole international house. So I have to rush hither and yon assuring everybody that Connally is nothing more than the Secretary of the Treasury and don't take him seriously. Besides he's a Democrat. But nobody believes me."

"I know how you feel, Dick. But I have my Benson, too, and he's the only one who understands my own tax policy and refuses to explain it. Where, I wonder, does it all end?"

". . . neither of us, I'm sure, is interested in re-election . . ."

"To tell the truth, Pierre, it may end next autumn in a real unemployment problem. I mean unemployment for both of us, unless the Democrats drop dead, as usual."

"Or the Canadian Tories commit suicide according to their family custom. Meanwhile, I suppose we must issue some sort of communique to the press."

"That's easy, Pierre. Leave it to my boys. They write lovely prose. The Undefended Border, the Century of Friendship, the Common Language and Ideals — you know, the traditional stuff."

"Okay, but when are you coming to Ottawa, Dick?"

Unpleasant Scene

"Next spring, if the world holds together that long. But I remember what happened to poor Jack Kennedy when he came and left his private papers on the chesterfield and that man Diefenbaker got hold of them and made a very unpleasant scene. So I'll come without papers, or secretaries, or the Old Nixon.

"On second thoughts," the president added, "I hear there's a lot of anti-Americanism up there so I'll come incognito, disguised as an American capitalist with money to invest in Canada. That ought to guarantee me a warm, Canadian welcome."

"You bet it will, Dick. Come with money and everybody will understand. So long for now."

Tragic Before But Not After

An article entitled "How Two Couples Look On Fostering Children" has just been brought to my attention. I am sure that the author (Ann Dunsmuir) and the foster parents (the Pelhams) are sincere in their beliefs, but they are operating from a false premise. To say that sending a boy to Brannan Lake School is a tragedy is just not true. It is tragic when a boy reaches a point in his life when he is "unwanted and powerless" and must be placed in a foster home, or a group home, or in Brannan Lake School. But the tragedy is what happens before the placement, not after.

I am employed by the Board of School Trustees of School District 68, Nanaimo, as Principal of the school section at Brannan Lake — and while I can't speak for the Provincial Government I can speak for the boys I see in the classrooms.

My school has a pupil-teacher ratio of one to fifteen, and the classrooms are better equipped than any school I have ever seen in British Columbia. My teachers are well qualified, have teaching certificates from the Department of Education, and are all members of the British Columbia Teachers' Federation. As employees of the Nanaimo School Board we make maximum use of the excellent services provided by the district.

When the boys arrive in my classrooms every weekday morning at nine o'clock I know they have had a good breakfast, they are warm, decently dressed, and have had a good night's sleep. What other principal in British Columbia can make that statement?

When my boys come to class I know that they haven't been beaten by a drunken father or screamed at by a hysterical mother; that they don't have a hangover, and are not high on drugs.

As students the boys are no better or no worse than in any other classroom in the province, but there is one big difference — the boys are being taught by people who care and who have the time to do something about it. When the boys leave Brannan Lake School they don't think their stay was "tragic".

I agree with the Pelhams when they say ". . . people who care are far more helpful than people who just have a degree." But think how much better it is when the people who care do have a degree! — F. O. E. Murphy, B.Ed., Principal, Brannan Lake School.

Choosing the Regional Board

In the opinion of this taxpayer, each and every candidate for office in next Saturday's election is morally bound to make a public reply to these questions.

1. Do you support the present method by which municipal representatives are placed on the Regional Board?

2. If you do not support the present method, what action are you prepared to undertake to remedy it?

It is of very great concern to me, and I would expect, to all other Saanich taxpayers, that our Council has not seriously and publicly questioned the present method under which, as you know, municipal councils appoint Regional Board members from amongst Council members.

Since the Regional Board has power to make decisions which can increase municipal taxes in Saanich the right to elect Regional Board members is the right of Saanich taxpayers.

Anyone who denies this is, in my opinion, something less than fully qualified for public office. Those who already agree that that right belongs solely to the taxpayers but are unwilling to take any action on the matter "at the present time", are similarly less than fully competent to carry the public trust.

Most unfortunately, we have too many of these in office now.

It is my view that, if we are to continue with the Regional Board, it must be composed of persons elected directly by the taxpayers and, in the interests of greater participation by the tax-paying citizens, persons who are not members of the municipal councils.

Let us, please, now hear from the candidates. — Gordon H. Campbell, 1515 Oakcrest Drive.

CHARLES BARTLETT

More Dogged Than Optimistic

VIENNA — The secrecy which cloaks the Soviet-American SALT talks is so complete that the rooms in which the negotiators meet are regularly swept for bugging devices perhaps planted by Chinese spies or enterprising reporters.

The aim, as the talks go down the home stretch, is to keep the negotiating climate as ideal as possible. The spokesman for the American delegation, Nedville Nordness, has the painful task of telling the press less and less. Congressional observers continue to be barred from the sessions because the Soviets react so indignantly to leaks.

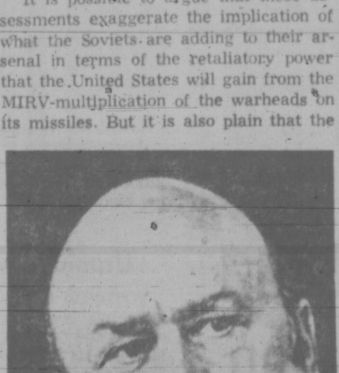
The mood here is more dogged than optimistic and the outlook for a substantial lid on the nuclear arms race is still clouded. The negotiators are grappling now with how many ABM sites will be allowed to each side. The Soviets' attitude toward a limit on offensive weapons remains ambiguous and they are reportedly still indisposed to deal with nuclear submarines and multiple warheads.

As hopes recede for a deal by the end of the year, a big uncertainty here is whether the ideal negotiating climate can be prolonged. U.S. Defence Secretary Melvin Laird has warned for 18 months that failure to reach an agreement by this December would face him with a necessity to go forward with new strategic weapons.

This means that Laird has to make budget decisions before January on whether to expand the Polaris fleet and begin research on new ways to kill Russians. These decisions, plus the military pay increase, can force a rise in the defence budget despite the cutbacks in Vietnam. They are capable of putting a new spin on the arms race.

The negotiators labor here under an awareness that their slow progress is stirring pressures at home for Laird's response to the unfaltering pace of the Soviet build-up. Warnings that the balance of power is shifting against the United States are echoing within the Nixon inner core.

It is possible to argue that these assessments exaggerate the implication of what the Soviets are adding to their arsenal in terms of the retaliatory power that the United States will gain from the MIRV-multiplication of the warheads on its missiles. But it is also plain that the long SALT parleys have not solidly affirmed the Soviet's readiness to accept nuclear parity.



DEFENCE SECRETARY LAIRD
budget decisions . . .

The Russians have stalled on these negotiations since 1966 but their old reasons for stalling no longer seem pertinent. They have closed the missile gap which troubled them before and the signs of division in their leadership have largely disappeared with the emergence of Chairman Brezhnev.

They know now that they misread American politics when they anticipated that the frustrations of Vietnam would give the unilateral disarmers the leverage they needed to dismantle the military. They have been clearly apprised, by a series of votes in Congress, that the majority will be apt to react to disappointment in the SALT talks with more funds for defence.

Premier Kosygin has frequently described the SALT talks as a useful way of increasing confidence between the East and West. Other features of their present diplomacy indicate that they want this confidence in order to devote more resources and attention to the problems at home and with China. They would be rash to risk it in a gamble to gain a transitory degree of nuclear superiority.

It may well be that the Russians are merely negotiating as Russians always do, hard and defiantly, until the moment when the deal is made. The long sessions in the bugless rooms may still yield the package which President Nixon wants to bring home from Moscow.

60 Years Ago

From the Times of Dec. 8, 1911:

The legislature is called for the despatch of business on January 11. So far as can be foreseen now the session will be about the usual length and will be marked by some important legislation.

It is generally expected that the government will put through a redistribution bill, which is always due after the taking of the decennial census by the Dominion. This will be a bill calling for a good deal of discussion, especially from the opposition, as it is certain to be pretty much of a gerrymander.

Do Men Need God?

viewpoint

NO

says Ray Billington, expelled British Methodist. God is an invention man needs no longer.

These are great days for prophets of doom. With crimes of violence on the increase, sexual fidelity on the decrease, pornography proliferating, and drugs debilitating, it is easy to understand the urge to indulge in the lamentations of a new Jeremiah.

Add to all this the warnings of the environmentalists who question the very future of Western civilization in its pursuit of economic growth, and the impulse is clearly overwhelming to link the whole lot together as evidence of the dawning of a new dark age.

Among these gloomy prophets (and, come to think of it, whoever heard of a cheerful one?) are to be found a fair number who attribute the general decline in our standards to the waning of religious belief and observance. As C. S. Lewis said, "We only learn to behave ourselves in the presence of God, and if the sense of that presence weakens, humanity tends to lark about."

Or, as Luther said more bluntly: "If you believe in no future life then do as you like. For, if no God, then no devil, no hell. Then plunge into lechery, rascality, robbery and murder."

This, the gloomy brigade argue, is precisely what is now happening. Without the wider dimension which religion gives, men become a prey to their immediate sense experiences. What they need is an authority set over them, an overlord to whom they are responsible and on whom they depend. And if no such overlord exists he must be invented.

Of course, some contemporary theologians reject the earlier personalized image of God in favor of what may be termed a theistic metaphysic, arising from the alleged objectivity of certain moral principles, such as that benevolence, justice, equality are to be pursued. These theologians harp less than their more traditionally minded colleagues on the God who keeps people on the straight and narrow.

But however progressive this group, it willy nilly unites at one fixed point with the prophets of doom: in the conviction that human beings are by nature too frail, too incompetent, too selfish to order their own lives.

Sense of Need

So we are left with the general plea of man's need for God, whether this be expressed in philosophical or anthropomorphic terms. This sense of need, it is argued, keeps men humble, aware of their dependent status, knowing they cannot stand on their own two feet without a helping hand: this has always been human experience, and is therefore perfectly reasonable, natural and healthy.

For me this viewpoint has none of these qualities. It is unreasonable because there is no evidence for God other than that which is self-induced or instilled by others. (If there is an objective morality, this can be posited as a branch of necessary truth, like mathematics, or logic. Or it can be viewed as a biological fact of life which has enabled the race to survive.)

It is unnatural because men do, as they are constantly demonstrating, have the potentiality to stand on their own feet, even if not many actually achieve their potential. It is unhealthy because it discourages human wholeness. It allows men to pass the buck, to shirk responsibility, to leave decisions to the overlord who holds the whole world in his hands.

This does not imply that human beings are to be completely independent, self-sufficient. There is a further alternative to dependence besides independence: this is interdependence, the awareness that each of us needs other people to help us fulfil various needs, as they in part need us. Inevitably, this raises questions about the type of man-made environments we are creating, in many of which human contacts are made difficult to achieve. People who appear selfish or withdrawn may well be simply victims of housing without any natural meeting places.

Frustration

The acts of violence which gain so much publicity may well be the consequence of cooping men up in the broiler houses which are modern factories, causing a sense of frustration, of no-purpose, of lack of fulfilment. Assembly lines were made for men, not men for assembly lines.

Today's emphasis on sex may well reflect the lack of adventure in life generally, so that people seek relationships where every encounter is a potential adventure. And in a society which tries to pigeonhole its members to the exclusion of personal initiative, it is understandable that some reject it and try to find themselves through psychedelic drugs.

What seems intolerable is that people shall continue to be indoctrinated into acceptance of the God-myth as the only basis for dealing with these problems.

Retrograde

Of course, the lack of wholeness in Western civilization continues to encourage those who wish society to be more overtly theocratic. But to return to this would be as retrograde a step as forcing a new nation back into colonial status because of rash decisions made under the headiness of its newly achieved freedom.

The fact is that the sanctions which men place on their behavior must spring from the human circumstances of life, from conditions and relationships, tensions, and opportunities as man experiences them. He is only just beginning to realize this, and if he makes mistakes, by substituting anarchy for freedom (which involves constraint), then this must be viewed as the teething stage in the process of replacing the divine by human authority. To advocate otherwise is to imprison men perpetually in the nursery.

YES

says Sir Frederick Catherwood, British Layman. Our age needs the moral code of Christianity.

The average Christian may be permitted a small groan when yet another cleric announces in a blaze of publicity that he no longer believes in God.

However, Ray Billington makes his case very well and he deserves some dialogue with an orthodox Christian.

The first of his arguments seems to be that God is an invention set up by society to preserve order and the second that man is now sufficiently mature to dispense with the invention.

The trouble with most of today's clergy is that they allow themselves to be driven back from the first argument to the second and end up either with the law and order brigade or, in a small minority of cases, with revolution.

Summer Snow

Faced with a public argument about God, too many religious officials melt away like summer snow. They explain apologetically that if they talk about God, no one will listen, so try to get on the wave-length of modern man and are completely outdistanced by the professional communicators who have spent millions of dollars in researching that wave-length and remaining very finely tuned to all its moods.

The Christian church has no business to alter its message according to the mood of society. Its job is to stand for what it believes to be right and true against what it believes to be wrong and untrue.

It is the job of the Christians in South Africa, in northern Ireland as it was in Nazi Germany to stand out against the mood of racialism, not adapt to it. The Christian faith stands over against the spirit of the age as an objective yardstick. But it cannot do this unless it believes that its yardstick is true.

We find it a good deal more credible to believe that the human eye was designed by a creator than to believe that it just happened by chance.

We find that the Christian moral law corresponds more closely than other moralities to the conscience of mankind, that the Christian picture of the good and evil in human nature is more realistic and more credible than those which deny the existence of evil altogether.

But, above all, the Christian finds a third dimension to body and soul, a spiritual life which he did not experience before he was a Christian but is as much of a reality as any other senses.

The witness of millions of Christians of all races, ages, classes and psychological types through 20 centuries is as much evidence as any laboratory experiment and really cannot be laughed off or explained away. And though there are, of course, spurious psychological conversions, no one who has witnessed the autonomous power of Christian conversions to change men's natures can doubt that this power is external and is directly related to Christian faith.

But the Christian's belief that the Christian moral law is right does not relieve him of the obligation to spell out its logic.

Christians believe that acceptance by society of an external moral code is the only method of preserving freedom and that the rejection of an external code is the high road to tyranny. We are independent all right but who is to be dependent on whom?

Divine Right?

If there is to be no external code to which even rulers are subject, then what is to keep the rulers in check? Do democratically elected majorities have the reversion to divine right? Does it go to those like the South African government who believe in racial superiority or those like the Maoists and Communists who believe that their system is not only true but may be imposed by force on unbelievers?

Those who have been eyeball to eyeball with the tyrannies of mankind find it a little difficult to believe that these are just a little "teething stage in the process of replacing the divine by human authority."

But is Christianity itself a tyranny? Christ said not. He said that his service was perfect freedom. Christians say not, they feel that at last they have been liberated from evil, oppression and anxiety.

Is the Christian moral code a tyranny to those who are not Christian? Again Christians say not. The moral law must stand on its merits.

Power Politics

The Christian church has been a great power over the centuries and hard men have forever tried to harness that power to their own ends. But fortunately the teaching of Christ and the Apostles is quite explicit and rather awkward to mold to the purposes of power politics.

That is why many Christians are sensitive to officials of the church who try to harness Christianity to the ideology of the age. The power of the church has come not from misbegotten alliances with Caesars, emperors and kings or from riding the crest of a fashionable philosophy, but from its strong appeal to the consciences of society.

It is this ability to strike a chord in the most unexpected places which has enabled the Christian ethic to produce reform without revolution and to maintain order without oppression. I doubt whether the gospels according to Darwin, Marx, Freud and Russell are strong enough yet to take over this task.

No Christian can be entirely surprised that the decline of Christendom coincides with the rise of nationalism and racialism. Christianity is multi-racial in its very essence, it does not believe that man is an animal hunting in herds. It does not believe in natural selection by brute force. If its unifying beliefs are removed, then a new tribalism is not too far away.

THEY'RE WAITING FOR BETTER DAY

NEW YORK TIMES

MIDDLE ISLAND, N.Y. — Gillian Cummings was so upset at her father's sudden death last year and revolted at the thought of burial that she kept him preserved above ground, sheathed in plastic wrap and frozen in liquid nitrogen.

She thus has joined the cryonics movement, which is devoted to the hope that future scientists will discover how to restore life.

There are at least 14 bodies in the world now frozen for this purpose, according to proponents of the movement, which has been viewed widely with skepticism.

Miss Cummings says she already is running low on money to pay the $140 a month cost of maintaining the frigid bath and paying the rent on an industrial storage bay where an eight-foot-tall Thermos-like capsule is kept containing the body of her father, Herman, who died at 42 of a heart attack.

A second frozen body and two placentas are also being preserved in the capsule for a separate future rejuvenation experiment.

Miss Cummings shares her distress over what is to come with other proponents of the movement, which is becoming increasingly controversial and burdensome in the view of local officials.

Officials of Brookhaven Town, where this Long Island village is situated, recently refused permission for the Cryo-crypt Corporation to open a capsule storage room here under a century-old church. The town's action came one day after a torchlight march of protest against the crypt on Halloween night, and in time for election day.

"It was a perfect tie-in," said the Conservative Party leader, Donald W. Leo, who challenged in the demonstration Cryo-crypt's title to the Methodist Episcopal Church and also inveighed against "skeletons" in the GOP closet.

Brookhaven supervisor Charles W. Barraud, a Republican, says he is trying to find out where the frozen bodies fit into any existing zoning category. He also wonders how maintenance costs of $1,000 a year will be paid in a few years, never mind a century from now.

Privately, some town officials are concerned that with capsules tucked away privately, such as in an industrial park, they might become forsaken like love letters or old photographs for future generations to happen upon.

"We don't have the answers," Barraud said, noting he is still awaiting word from his planning and health advisers.

Edward W. Kuhrt, the 39-year-old president of Cryo-crypt, who says he first got interested in cryonics while doing animal dissection in a college biology course, had hopes of opening the crypt a short way from the church's small old cemetery.

"A man lives too short," Kuhrt said, describing the cryonics experiment as a worthwhile gamble. "Even if some bodies do suffer damage to the brain and other vital organs before they are frozen completely down to 360 degrees below zero fahrenheit." He is hoping to be established legally soon.

He insists that a $20,000 life insurance policy, invested for its interest, is enough to cover the cost of topping off the liquid nitrogen as it boils away. The capsule and initial preparation costs an additional $6,000, he said.

Miss Cummings blames Kuhrt for bungling the crypt plan and discrediting the movement. And she prefers to keep her father in an industrial park in Farmingdale. The sharing of the capsule with a second body complicates the problem.

There's No Place to Hide

By TOM WICKER
New York Times

NANTUCKET, Mass. — It was the kind of day to make a city dweller want to chuck it all and move back to nature. Whitecaps played like froth on the bay and a fresh cold wind exhilarated the brain. The air was so clear that from the hills behind the beach a reasonably sharp eye could spot the white lighthouse on Great Point; and brilliant autumn sunlight fell with particular radiance on the browns and golds of the moors.

Most houses are shuttered for the winter, and only a few small craft are afloat in the harbor; the scallopers go daily to their chilly labors, but most boats in the island fleet are stacked for the winter like cars on a ferry inside the boatyard warehouses — where in hibernation even the sleekest sailboats look lumpish and forlorn.

But the quiet streets, the light on the moors, the wind whistling in the eaves, the sense here — at least in winter — that the clanging urban world is far away, are siren lures, delusive and deceitful. The city dweller, hankering to make his weekend visit an exile, knows that in his bones.

Even the act of fleeing — and even for no longer than a week or a month — the crowded streets, the noise, the smells, the animosities of the city, tends merely to transfer all these unpleasantries elsewhere. Nantucket with its summer traffic jams and its building boom and its law-and-order crackdowns on "hippies", is a fairly good example; and most of us can cite one or more retreats that used to be great before everyone else discovered them.

More importantly, who and what is being fled from? The blacks, of course, the poor and the pushy, although more often the fleeing convince even themselves that it is really the inconvenience, the killing pace, and the joylessness of city life that impelled them to the hills, or the shore, or the woods. Sometimes that is actually true. But whether it is or not, those who long to return to nature and the ways of a quieter past really are trying to escape the human race.

There is, unfortunately, only one way to do that, which few elect. A quiet weekend in Nantucket is undoubtedly good for the soul, and a summer or a winter probably would be that much better. Permanently transplanting oneself to the wilderness, for those who can stick it, obviously has its attractions.

But even the latter is standing aside from, rather than surely escaping, humankind. Like the hero of Conrad's "Victory," one can choose to "look on — make no sound"; but neither he nor anyone could thereby guarantee that the world of man would not reach out anyway to claim its own.

Even in a time when the "commune" has achieved new popularity, of course, only a relatively small number of people are actively seeking to get completely away from the world.

The more common manifestation of the escapist impulse is the weekend house, and even more familiar is the ritual move from city to suburb. That in turn has spawned the reverse form of the same impulse — the efforts of suburban or once-suburban communities to exclude the newcomer.

It is as if they wished to fix themselves forever in time, space and society, rather like one of those restored villages — Williamsburg or Old Salem — that in timeless unreality stand as monuments to the dead past.

As populations grow and seethe, as technology alters ethics and customs, and both government and the old disciplinary institutions — churches, corporations, universities — show themselves unable or unwilling to cope with the change, it is no wonder and scarcely reprehensible that this kind of escapism should be rampant.

But the escapism dream of those who flee the city and barricade their communities probably will be, in the end, as deceitful as that of the weekend visitor in Nantucket.

It is not just that the escapist is likely to exchange one kind of threat for another — the crime and clangor of the city fading to the sterility of the suburb. Nor is it only that usually the surburbanite still is dependent on the city.

The real point is that there is, in fact, no place to hide from the kind of society we have created, or allowed to develop. The blacks and the poor didn't make that society; it put them in their present places. The city doesn't make modern life unpleasant; modern life is rendering the city intolerable.

The suburb, the weekend house, the island in the sea or the woods can't be walled off against change and turmoil growing out of the kind of people we are and the kind of lives we lead; they can only delude the hopeful.

So, it is good to be here on a glittering weekend, to hear the wind over the moors instead of the ominous mutter of the city. But it is not good enough; Nantucket Sound is not that wide; and the old American habit of picking up and moving on won't do any more. What wild, free place is left?

Good Old Spence... Hepburn Should Know

By BOB THOMAS

HOLLYWOOD (AP) — "Spence was the only PURE person I ever met in all my life. . . . No affectations—not a selfish bone in his body. . . . He took his work seriously—never himself—and such a good, clean brain. . . . I'll miss him every day as long as I live."

The words are Katharine Hepburn's, speaking of Spencer Tracy, whom she knew intimately through nine movies and 25 productive, sometimes tumultuous years.

Tracy died June 10, 1967. They met on the set of their first movie together, Woman of the Year, in 1942.

Their association, one of Hollywood's best-kept secrets during Tracy's lifetime, now is described in an affectionate memoir by Garson Kanin, Tracy and Hepburn.

Kanin knew both actors during most of the 25 years except for a year-and-a-half rift after a disastrous play in which Kanin directed Tracy. Kanin and his wife, Ruth Gordon, also wrote two of the best Tracy-Hepburn films, Adam's Rib and Pat and Mike.

The Tracy-Hepburn romance went unreported because he never divorced his wife, Louise. Kanin scarcely touches on this aspect of Tracy's life. The actor continued to make visits to "The Hill," the term he used for the hilltop home of his wife and two children.

Kanin writes:

"During these times there was always something for Kate to do. . . . She never felt bereft or sidetracked. She understood the necessity for Spencer to stay close to his family, since she lived with like instincts."

On one near-tragic occasion, the Tracy-Hepburn association made the newspapers. That was July 31, 1963, when he collapsed of a respiratory congestion while he and Miss Hepburn picnicked at Malibu. She quickly summoned help to save his life.

"We cannot help but marvel at Kate's behavior in this crisis," Kanin writes. "She gets Spencer into the hospital.

"As soon as she has done so, she informs the family of the situation and allows them to take over."

A director of films (Tom, Dick and Harry) and plays (Funny Girl) as well as playwright (Born Yesterday), Kanin has long kept a daily journal that reports his friendship with a wide range of celebrities. That was the source of Tracy and Hepburn, which recreates scenes and conversations with rare intimacy.

Among the disclosures:

During his first film, A Bill of Divorcement (1933) John Barrymore lured Hepburn to his dressing room and stripped before her. She fled. She recalled to Kanin "how terrified I was—and I recall that he was furious—hardly spoke to me for the rest of the picture."

Their billing was always Tracy and Hepburn, gentleman first. When Kanin chided the actor's lack of gallantry, Tracy replied: "This is a movie, chowderhead, not a lifeboat."

Tracy usually called her Kathy, sometimes Kath or on occasion Flora Finch, Olive Oyle, Laura LaPlante, Madame Curie, Carrie Nation, Milly Malone or Coo-Coo the Bird Girl.

Tracy once remarked that he had been drunk for 25 years during his Hollywood heyday. His later view: "There's nothing wrong with a drink, and there's nothing right with a drunk. Booze kills brain cells. For good. You don't believe that, ask around. That's why big drinkers reach the point where it's too late to stop." But he did.

BEFORE THE JUDGE

Six women pleaded guilty to separate shoplifting offences in Victoria provincial court Tuesday including a 20-year-old woman who was completing a Christmas shopping list by stealing gifts.

Two other women also appeared before judge William Ostler and were remanded to later dates. One pleaded not guilty, the other was remanded for plea.

Ostler remanded Laurie D. Dujarin, 1010 Linden, to Dec. 16 for presentence report after the accused said the merchandise she took was to be Christmas presents.

The other five who pleaded guilty were fined $250 each by Ostler.

MAKES LIST

"You have the effrontry to make out a list and steal it," Ostler told Miss Dujardin before remanding her.

A security officer from the Bay testified that the accused was stopped in the store about 6 p.m. Monday with stolen items from both the Bay and Eatons.

The officer said Miss Dujardin had a shopping list with a man's sweater and five belts, some of the stolen merchandise, checked off.

The rest of the items included sunglasses, a wallet, two pairs of gloves, tweezers and several pairs of pantihose, the officer said.

Patricia Forrestall, 20, of 877 Dunsmuir, was fined $250 for taking a crib blanket from Simpsons-Sears Nov. 10.

She told Ostler that she had seen other people take things from stores and wondered what it would be like.

Mrs. Forrestall, pregnant with a child due next month, said she didn't need the blanket.

NOT EVEN A CRIB

Ostler asked if she had taken the item for the baby.

"I don't even have a crib that size, the accused answered.

Diane E. Martin, 19, of Saltspring Island, was fined $250 for taking hair barrettes from The Bay Monday.

A security officer said the woman also had earrings and barrettes stolen from Woolworth's department store. He said all items totalled $5.57.

Ann Sherman, 65, of 1813 Quadra, was fined $250 when she pleaded guilty to taking a bottle of hair shampoo from Little John discount store, 1322 Douglas, Monday.

Muriel M. Thorne, 50, of 4311 Tyndall, was fined $250 for taking a 29-cent package of chalk from The Bay Nov. 29. She also had two stolen pen sets totalling 88 cents with her when she was apprehended by store personel.

Edith Salisbury, 72, of 6589 Sooke Road, was fined $250 for taking a $25 bottle of perfume from the W & J Wilson store, 1221 Government, Nov. 16.

SHORT MARRIAGE FOR MISS LONG

SAN DIEGO, Calif. (AP) — Adib Darkazalli of Syria avoided deportation from the United States four months ago by advertising for a bride in the newspapers and marrying one of the women who responded.

But they didn't live happily ever after and Darkazalli is facing deportation again. He is a legal resident of Canada.

Mrs. Darkazalli, 19, the former Linda Long of Lakeside, has filed for divorce and has withdrawn a petition supporting her husband's application for permanent residency status.

Darkazalli was one of 270 alien workers brought to San Diego for work for National Steel and Shipbuilding Co. under special government permits.

The job and the work permit were to expire at the end of July, so Darkazalli ran his ad in a local paper: "24-year-old Arab from Syria-Damascus with steady job wishes to meet lady interested in getting married right away."

He met Miss Long July 30, took her to Las Vegas, Nev., July 31 and married her Aug. 1. Her petition to dissolve the marriage said they separated Sept. 30.

THE GALLUP POLL

Nixon's Economy Skips Canadians

By THE CANADIAN INSTITUTE OF PUBLIC OPINION

(World Copyright Reserved)

How concerned are Canadians with such events as President Nixon's economic bombshell in announcing his new trade policies? In mid-November, about two months after his first introduction of the 10% surcharge on imported goods, with apparent mounting protectionism in the U.S., little more than a bare majority of Canadian adults (58%) said they had heard or read anything about them. Among English Canadians the proportion was a little higher — but among French Canadians and other racial segments the division of those who knew something of them, and those who did not, was very narrow.

However among those who were aware of President Nixon's new program, six in 10 take a gloomy view of its impact on our economic life, and believe it will be bad. Only one in 10 is optimistic enough to think it will be good. About two in 10 think the new steps will make little difference to our way of life.

To establish knowledge among Canadians of President Nixon's announcements, Gallup interviewers asked:

"Do you happen to have heard or read anything about President Nixon's new economic policies?"

	Yes	No
CANADA	58%	42%
English-Canadians	63	37
French-Canadians	52	48
Other races	53	47

Those who said they knew something of the new policies were asked:

"On the whole, do you think that the effect of these policies on Canada's economic life will be good, or bad, or don't you think they will make such difference?"

	Good	Bad	No Much Difference	Undecided
CANADA	10%	63%	18%	9%
English-Canadians	10	61	20	9
French-Canadians	8	65	19	8
Other races	11	69	10	10

Body Clock Best Rhythm

By LYNN SHERR

NEW YORK (AP) — Next time you wonder when to schedule a certain event, consult your body—not a clock.

Are you most alert in the morning, ready to accomplish miracles before noon? Then you're a "lark." Get a daytime job.

Are you draggy at dawn but lively around dinnertime? Then you're an "owl." Don't fight it. Get a night job.

Travelling to Paris for an important business conference? Start shifting your bed time a week or two ahead. Then find a plane that gets you there at night, Paris time, so you can go to sleep right away.

Such suggestions come from Gay Gaer Luce, a scientific writer and researcher who believes that the natural rhythms of our bodies are trying to tell us something we should listen to.

"People all have different rhythms," she said in an interview.

"Each person adjusts at his own pace. The way to find out about your rhythms is to chart your mood on a calendar: Put a plus or minus sign on the day according to how you feel. Then you'll know how to anticipate your moods."

OUT OF HARMONY

In a new book, Body Time, Mrs. Luce reports the mass of research dealing with such physiological rhythms, citing experiments from many parts of the world. She charges that modern society requires a pace "that is dissonant with our inner needs — we no longer act in harmony with natural cycles."

In one experiment she reports, rats were injected with an amphetamine solution at various hours around the clock. It was discovered the cycles of the body clearly influenced the animals' reaction to the drug. Rats injected at midnight had a drastically higher mortality rate than the rats injected at 6 a.m.

"The difference between life and death can hang on timing," she said, noting the implications for giving medicine and conducting tests.

Mrs. Luce also suggested that, contrary to popular belief, women are not the only sex with recurring cycles.

"Men have monthly rhythms too," she said, "although not much research has been done in this area since all the researchers are men. But it has been shown that men have pronounced four- and six-week mood cycles.

"It's important to know this so that you don't beat yourself when you feel down," she explained. "Women have a signpost—their menstrual period. Men don't have a marker so it's much harder for them.'

WORKS EARLY

Mrs. Luce, a "lark" who is up at seven, and says she accomplishes a whole day's work by 11, also says that whatever your body time requires, stick to it.

"Regularity is what's important," she said. "Find what is comfortable and stick to it. Don't try to keep adjusting. Irregularity is the worst thing for you."

She advised the "owl" children should not have to take exams in the morning; that school hours should be staggered like work hours—to give a chance. And that parents should react more sympathetically to the child's natural needs.

"If a child is not hungry, don't force him to eat," she said. And she noted that you can't force a child to sleep. "You can put him in bed, but let him play if he's not tired."

"Also, sleep should never be used as a punishment."

Traynor Ailing

PITTSBURGH (AP) — Harold (Pie) Traynor, 72, baseball hall of famer, was reported improved and in satisfactory condition today in Allegheny General Hospital suffering from a respiratory ailment, a spokesman said.

AUSSIE RUSTLERS SMART DUFFERS

BRISBANE (Reuter) — The cattle rustler—that traditional villain of thousands of western movies—is alive and well and making a nuisance of himself in Australia's Brisbane Valley.

In the last few months, rustlers, or cattle duffers as they are referred to in Australian slang, have stolen cattle worth more than $20,000 from four properties in the valley, about 80 miles from the Queensland capital of Brisbane.

The manner in which the rustlers have managed to flourish, thousands of miles from the traditional rustling grounds of the North American West, has made local station owners furious.

This anger has led the owners to offer a reward of $1,000 to anyone who catches the rustlers.

BRANDS ACTERED

In the old days of Australian cattle duffing, stolen cattle were yarded into bush corrals — duffing-yards and their brands altered before being driven to distant markets for selling.

Many early settlers started their herds by stealing from large stations, and in some parts of the country, the practice was not considered a serious matter. The disgrace of being caught red-handed was far greater than that of the crime itself.

Probe Asked On Import Car Prices

OTTAWA (CP) — Consumer Affairs Minister Ron Basford was asked Tuesday to investigate charges that imported-car dealers "steal thousands of dollars" from customers by misrepresenting the date of a vehicle's manufacture.

Barry Mather (NDP—White Rock) sent Basford a letter he had received from the Automobile Protection Association alleging dealers update the advertised model year of cars left in stock each September.

The association, a three-year-old group affiliated with consumer advocate Ralph Nader, says "last-year" models are legally represented as current model-year cars and sold at the usually higher price of new models.

The customers, says the association, "only discover they have been tricked when they return to their dealer the next year and discover that their car has been depreciated by two years — almost 50 per cent — rather than the expected one year — 30 per cent."

The letter quotes a recent Nissan Company Ltd. statement that purchasers of its Datsun automobiles know of the redating practice.

"When we followed the practice, we have always expected our dealers to explain to their customers about this practice in import sales to avoid any possible misunderstanding."

The consumer group rejected the company statement.

"Obviously by the number of people complaining to the Automobile Protection Association the customers are not being told the truth."

Other companies included in the association charges were Ford, British Leyland, Fiat, Volvo and Renault.

The association called for legislation to end the updating practice and creation of a rebate system to refund to the dealer part of the cost of expired-model-year cars. This manufacturers' refund would be passed on to purchasers of the old models.

"If the government can stop grocers from selling month-old bread to consumers, it can surely prevent the import-car industry from selling year-old cars and, like Cinderella's fairy godmother, transform them into the latest models."

200,000 Acre Ranch

FORT ST. JOHN (CP) — A former Utah rancher says he's completed a "multi-million-dollar deal" for more than 200,000 acres of land in the Peace River district, future home of a livestock operation to be known as the Hoof and Horn Ranch.

Lee Dahl, who moved to Fort St. John three years ago, said the ranch, covering a triangle bounded by the Kistatinaw, Peace and Pine rivers south of the community of Taylor, is expected to start operation next March.

He said livestock will include cattle and sheep and the operation will be run with the help of his wife and six children, backed by undisclosed foreign investors. The purchase price of the land was not disclosed.

Dahl said he expects 10,000 head of cattle to arrive next spring and a further 10,000 in the fall of 1972. Headquarters for the ranch will be at Mile 31 of the Alaska Highway and about 75 persons will be employed.

Dahl said he first became interested in the Peace River district in 1962. He said he decided on the area because climatic conditions are unexcelled for raising livestock and there is a longer growing period for feed.

Computerized Sawmill

WASHINGTON (AP) — A computerized sawmill system promising a 10 per cent increase in the yield of house-framing lumber from small softwood logs is ready for mill trial.

Development of the system at the U.S. Forest Service laboratory at Madison, Wis., was announced by Rep. Julia Butler Hansen, D—Wash., chairman of the House appropriations subcommittee reviewing forest service budgets.

The system uses advanced computer technology to operate controls positioning each log for the critical first cut that assures highest yield of lumber of construction work.

It was developed primarily for logs, mostly second growth, 5 to 20 inches in diameter.

Former Air Canada Officials Start Firm

TORONTO (CP) — A new company formed by three former top executives of Air Canada is seeking permission to operate a new regional air line in Ontario. They are confident they will get approval.

The new firm, to be called Air Ontario Ltd., would operate on routes out of Toronto to Thunder Bay, Timmins, North Bay, Sault Ste. Marie, Sudbury, Windsor and Ottawa. Air Canada now serves these stops but wants to vacate the service.

Howard C. Cotterell, president of the new firm, says agreements for aircraft, terminal construction and public financing have already been made. He predicts the airline would make a profit in its first full year of operation which could begin by Sept. 1, 1971.

The proposal has been passed along to Ottawa by provincial officials who appear to support the idea. The federal authorities could order a hearing, or it could grant permission to operate without a hearing.

Mr. Cotterell noted that the company seeks no subsidies, and does not ask that two other regional carriers now operating into Ontario be curtailed. These are Transair which operates between Winnipeg, Thunder Bay, Sault Ste. Marie and Toronto, and Nordair which flies the Montreal-Otawa-Hamilton route.

OPERATE IN ONTARIO

Air Ontario wants to operate only in Ontario with no flights outside provincial borders.

The head office and main terminal would be in Toronto and the reservations service centred in North Bay. In full operation, more than 350 jobs would be created.

The Air Ontario proposal calls for the purchase of eight used BAC One-Eleven aircraft from American Airlines for $20 million.

Mr. Cotterell retired from Air Canada in 1967 as vice-president, purchases and stores, and after that served as a consultant for the federal air transport committee on regional air carriers.

Vice-presidents of Air Ontario are Sturrock Sadler, retired from Air Canada in 1971 as vice-president, administrative services; and James T. Bain, retired from Air Canada in 1965 as director of engineering and maintenance.

LEIDING . . . he had a message

New V-W Chief Consolidates Investments

WOLFSBURG (AP) — The morning after he took over as chief of Volkswagen, Rudolf Leiding stationed himself at the gate leading to the West German headquarters building and observed his junior executives arriving for work.

"He didn't say a word," recalls one of those who passed the silent sentry. "But his message was clear."

The message was that no one in the company should oversleep while the European automotive giant's profits were nosediving.

Leiding, 56, who began his career as an auto mechanic, became Volkswagen's general director Oct. 1 upon the forced retirment of Kurt Lotz.

Calling on Volkswagen's 200,000 employees to roll up their sleeves, Leiding quickly set about to try to pull the company out of the dive.

Planned investments of 8.6 billion marks are being reduced by 1.8 billion, a cut equal to $540 million. The 1971 dividend is to be cut.

VW-266 DROPPED

Volkswagen has abandoned advanced plans to build a box-shaped VW-266 with midboard engine because it did not fit into Leiding's "building blocks" concept of making interchangeable parts for the various Volkswagen models.

Leiding, who previously headed Volkswagen's Audi NSU subsidiary, also has announced plans for a new Volkswagen mini-car with an engine capacity of under 1,000 cubic centimetres. He plans to concentrate on four basic models in the future.

The cost-paring "building blocks" system will necessitate a shift in emphasis from rear, air-cooled engines to front-wheel drive and water-cooled engines.

A top Volkswagen executive discloses that Volkswagen also plans to produce cars with the revolutionary rotary-piston wankel engines. The engine was developed at NSU, which now is part of the Volkswagen subsidiary Audi NSU Auto Union AG.

"There will be a Wankel Volkswagen," said Dr. Carl Horst Hahn, 45, the member of the company's management board responsible for worldwide sales and service. Company officials indicated this was still four to five years in the future.

NEW LOOK COMING

Leiding also may introduce to Wolfsburg some of the results of the styling experimentation he engaged in while heading Volkswagen's Brazilian subsidairy in 1968-71. Hints are being dropped that a streamlined sports car developed in Sao Paulo will go into mass production in Wolfsbung one day.

The beetle, most responsible for Volkswagen's image and success, will not be relegated to the company's museum during the Leiding revolution, says Leiding, Hahn and the men and women on the assembly line.

The automotive press in West Germany, however, regards the beetle's future as questionable, especially beyond 1975 when new safety regulations are enforced in the United States.

Leiding and Hahn say the beetle will meet the new standard, although they concede the car will become more expensive.

Important Evidence Found

MONTREAL (UPI) — Quebec Financial Institutions Minister William Tetley said Tuesday that an investigation into Montreal's securities industry has turned up evidence of "important, but not grave" irregularities.

"My reports on the investigation are still only preliminary but I can say that so far we've found irregularities, but no evidence of any widespread Mafia or underworld infiltration," Tetley said. "The situation is important but not grave."

Tetley said, however, that "we may have to lift the license" of one stock brokerage firm that is among two companies being probed.

Tetley refused comment on widely published reports that Marcel Lajeunesse, chairman of the Quebec Securities Commission, had submitted his resignation last week.

NOT COMPLETE

Tetley said his investigation into the securities industry was being conducted with the aid of the Quebec Justice department investigators, and that the inquiry was "very broad and still far from complete."

The minister said that he had also received a preliminary report on a separate inquiry being conducted by auditors of the Montreal and Canadian Stock Exchanges into the operations of Holland, Andrews Perrier and Co. Ltd. Harry Andrews, vice-president of the firm, was "temporarily removed" as chairman of the CSE Nov. 16 after the exchange ordered his firm investigated. The QSC upheld Andrews' ouster.

FIRM SOLVENT

The "auditors have reported verbally to me that the firm is quite solvent," Tetley said. "That eases one major worry — what's going to happen to the public."

The auditors, Tetley said, also said the firm showed adequate marginal requirements in its operations.

Trading in two stock issues underwritten by the Holland Andrews firm, Pan American Mines Ltd. and Fairways developments Ltd., has been suspended on the CSE since Nov. 17.

Tetley ordered investigations into the securities business in Montreal following the CSE's removal of Andrews, and followed publication reports that a salesman employed by a brokerage house had received a trader's licence despite past ties to a New Jersey underworld figure. The report also questioned whether the Quebec Securities Commission was exercising proper vigilance in its surveillance of speculative mining issues.

SCOTCH ANYONE?

SAN FRANCISCO (UPI) — Californians are expected to drink 1.2 million gallons of scotch during the holiday season but New York City consumption should hit 2 million gallons.

An analysis by a scotch company put New York City first and California second as major markets for scitch drinking during the next six weeks.

Boeing to Test 'People Mover' in University Town

SEATTLE (AP) — The Boeing Co.'s "people mover" looks like a stylized breadbox on wheels, holds 17 persons and has a top speed of only 30 miles per hour.

Yet Boeing and the U.S. department of transportation think the modest little "people mover" may be a solution to the urban headache of trying to integrate cars and people into jammed city centres.

And they say they'll know whether it will work in America's cities after testing it in a city of about 50,000 persons.

Sometime after the first of the year the department of transportation, through the Boeing Co., will award a contract of about $25 million for the first phase of a personal rapid transit system to be built in Morgantown, W.Va.

Morgantown is the home of West Virginia University, a 23,000-student institution that sprawls over three campuses about a mile from each other at points of a triangle. Although it's not a big city, it has a big traffic problem when classes change and students must travel between the campuses while grinding through normal city traffic.

The electric-powered cars are aimed at alleviating that crush. The PRT is a "demand vehicle" like an elevator, and can be programmed to whisk passengers from one end of a route to the other or to make intermediate stops, says Arthur Hitsman, project manager for Boeing.

The rubber-tired cars move over concrete guideways which can be elevated over normal traffic when necessary. Power is supplied through an electrical rail, and the cars are programmed and dispatched by a central computer.

Small Investor Drops Out

NEW YORK (AP) — It is widely believed that mutual funds are made up primarily of the pooled assets of millions of small investors with a desire for professional portfolio management and diversification.

Even the Investment Company Institute, trade association of the funds, seems to accept the notion. This is how it describes the role of its members:

"Management investment companies seek to do for the individual what he might do for himself if he had the time, the inclination, the background, the experience and sufficient . . ."

But who are those investors who increasingly have been buying fund shares in lots of $100,000 or more? Small investors? People of insufficient experience and resources?

Third-quarter figures show that more than one-third of the industry's sales were made up of single investments of $100,000 or more compared with 21 percent a year earlier.

Small investors who earlier found themselves pummelled by volatile price changes resulting from the infighting of big institutions in the stock market will be watching for the same thing in mutual funds now.

But clearly they are doing more than just watching. In several recent months, for example, despite purchases by big investors, the industry has suffered an excess of redemptions over sales.

After viewing the figures, Standard and Poor's Corp. made this observation:

"This means two things: One, $100,000-and-over buyers almost doubled their purchases of funds, to $370 million in the 1971 period from $205 million in the third quarter last year; and, two, small investors at the same time actually cut back on their fund buying, to $730 million in the latest quarter from $770 million."

Small investors also have been withdrawing gradually from direct stock investments, as related by the steady excess of small lot selling in relation to buying. Many observers feel that this behavior represents more than just caution; instead, they feel, it signifies disillusionment.

"There are all sorts of people that I run into that don't want to buy any stock at all," William McChesney Martin told a meeting of the New York Financial Writers.

Martin, author of a recent report that recommended reforms in the market, added that the integrity of the investment industry must be restored following disclosures of excesses and abuses and sins of omission.

No longer is there any mystery about what the small investor is doing; he's getting out. And no longer is there any doubt about the consequences to the market for this behavior.

From Bottom to Top on 10c

OTTAWA (CP) — Nine years ago Gerry Bisson was at rock bottom. He owed $325,000, had 55 judgments against him and his wages as a car salesman were garnisheed.

Today, he owns 15 gasoline stations in eastern Ontario, plans to open three more next spring and believes he will have 500 across Canada by 1980.

The reason for Gerry Bisson's meteoric rise is the same reason many gas station operators appear to see a bleak future for themselves: Discount gasoline.

To discount operators like Mr. Bisson, low-price gasoline outlets have brought prosperity. But operators of brand-name stations say they are worried about the widening gap between their higher prices and those of the cut-rate, no-frills discount outlets.

Gasoline sold by discount outlets is usually provided by brand-name companies with surplus they are willing to dispose of at low prices.

The discount outlets get the gas at a reduced price, but do not get any benefit from the companies' advertising since the gas is not sold under a brand name.

TEN CENTS LESS

Roy Rump, who operates a brand-name station here, says most discount outlets sell for 10 cents a gallon less than the regular stations. Some discount operations in communities near Ottawa at one point were charging 34.9 and 35.9 cents a gallon. Others on the suburban fringe charged 39.9 cents a gallon.

On the average, the discount outlets sold gas for a cent less than Mr. Rump bought it.

"If they can afford to sell it to the discounters for that, then they can afford to sell it to us for the same price," said Mr. Rump. "If not, the fellow buying his gas from me must be subsidizing the fellow buying it from the discounter."

If there are gasoline surpluses, he asked, why don't the companies give a discount to the regular dealers, who can then pass it on to their customers?

MORE FAILURES

He estimates he will lose 35,000 gallons in individual sales this year because of five discount outlets opened within a mile of his station. He forecasts that many of Ottawa's 300 regular operators will go bankrupt this winter if the 10-cent price spread continues.

A 25-per-cent failure rate among service station operators would likely rise to 35 per cent in the current hard times.

The success of Mr. Bisson's firm, Capital City Gas and Fuels Ltd., forms a dramatic contrast to the troubles of regular operators.

The starting point was April, 1967, when he opened a gas bar outside a speedway he owned near Ottawa. The gas bar gave him cheap gas for his own vehicles. But even at three cents a gallon below the price of his nearest competitor, it brought in few outside customers.

In November, 1967, he dropped his gas prices. Weekly gross sales jumped from $400 then to $8,000 in July, 1968. A second outlet was opened in 1969 in Quebec.

Gross sales were $78,000 in 1968 and $3 million this year and are expected to be at least $4 million in 1972.

Mr. Bisson's gas bars offer no repairs, air, gifts or sales gimmicks.

Where bylaws permit, the stations operate 24 hours a day.

That may be one reason why Mr. Bisson was able to get his entire investment on one station back in 30 days and on another in 60. All profit is ploughed back into the company.

REGULATIONS TIGHTENED

TORONTO (CP) — Securities commissions in Ontario and Western Canada have tightened regulations concerning reporting by corporations of material changes in their affairs.

A statement said the new regulation will require companies to report to the securities commission. Previously, companies could report either to the commission or the stock exchange listing their shares.

Companies will be required to report on such matters as proposed takeovers, mergers, amalgamations or changes in capitalizations.

Vote Scott X Dec. 11

YES —There ARE Great Issues for Victorians— FOR YOU To Decide When You Vote.

SCOTT CLAIMS and CAN PROVE

- Homeowners Taxes CAN be held down — and even cut.
- Waterfront Land, including the "REID PROPERTY," should be purchased—not for "High-Rises"—but for public use, e.g. convention-cultural centre—parks, etc., and paid for with the "Scott" Tax Plan.
- $5,000,000 annually should be collected into City Revenue from those businesses benefitting most from the Victoria Consumer.
- The Homeowner Taxpayer Pays too much tax and must be relieved.
- The smaller business man pays too much for tax licence fee.
- This tax license fee must be in direct proportion to the amount of Business Done and Benefits Derived.
- An Oil Company or/and Finance Company—Each grossing millions of dollars must pay more than at present—i.e. $1,300.00 and $400.00, respectively.
- A strong Mayor's Appeal to Equity from the Provincial Government will cause enactment of FAIR Business Tax—License Fees.
- We can have a more beautiful and still progressive Victoria, with these untapped $5,000,000.
- We can have prosecution of present air, watersight pollutors—and with no more Shilly Shally.
- We can have a clean and wholesome Inner Harbour and Waterfront.
- We can have clean and proper Downtown comfort facilities.
- We MUST have Victoria's "Old Town" preserved and bettered.
- We can collect a Fair $5,000,000 Business Tax to ease the home owner taxpayers burden—But only with strong dedicated leadership.

Letters to Clients Sometimes Helpful

TORONTO (CP) — Many of Canada's financial firms maintain extensive research departments which issue regular advice for clients.

Here is a summary of some of the recent investment letters:

Wood Gundy Ltd. — Against an improving background we reiterate our brief that major buying opportunities are presenting themselves in equities, and that investors should be searching out bargains and instituting a selective buying program.

We advise a positive approach and the adoption of a viewpoint that extends beyond tomorrow. Often the most successful buyer is the one who acts ahead of the crowd. Now, more than ever, is the time to be thinking and acting positively.

Bongard Leslie and Co. Ltd. — There is a great deal of value in many Canadian stocks at current levels. Corporate tax reductions will benefit reported earnings for both the second half of 1971 and the full 1972 calendar year. Early removal of the Nixon surcharge would provide a further stimulus to investor confidence on a near-term basis.

Bank of Nova Scotia—The perspective of the Canadian oil and gas industry over the past few years has greatly changed. . . . Increasing attention now is being focused on the problems of finding additional reserves. Whatever the general outcome of the adjustments bound up with the big questions of trade and investment relationships between the United States and Canada, the Canadian oil and gas industry faces great opportunities in the period ahead.

Richardson Securities of Canada—Most of the stimulus to the Canadian economy by the current expansionary monetary and fiscal policies will begin to have their impact in late 1971 and early 1972.

In the longer run a growing U.S. economy should help to . . . insure a satisfactory growth rate in 1972 for the Canadian economy.

MUSEUM KISS CHEERS HIS LORDSHIP

LONDON (UPI) — Lord Beaumont, who recently saw teen-agers kissing in a London museum, told the House of Lords he approves of such buildings being used for petting purposes.

"They (the young persons) were perfectly well-behaved and obviously had nowhere more agreeable to meet. I believe it was instilling in them an interest in the musum which would grow as thy grew older," he said.

Alberta Records Steady Growth

EDMONTON (CP) — Firm growth in most parts of the Alberta economy during the first nine months of 1971 was reported in statistics released today by the provincial government.

The value of manufacturers' shipments for the January to September period was $1.4 billion, four per cent higher than during the same period in 1970. The statistics were contained in the November issue of Alberta Business Trends.

The publication said production increases were noted in the livestock market, lumbering, petroleum products and in coal.

Only sulphur showed a decrease because of world oversupply, the publication said.

Preliminary figures to the end of Octover indicate the value of building permits issued in the province reached $445 million compared with $329 million last year.

Cash receipts from farming operations increased to $560.7 million, eight per cent better than the three-quarter period last year.

Both wholesale and retail trade increased from 1970 with only sales of farm supplies, metals and metal work decreasing significantly.

Retail trade during the first eight months was up 5.8 per cent over the previous year with department stores registering the greatest increase, followed by grocery stores and service stations.

The publication said the consumer price index for Ednonton and Calgary declined by .2 per cent during October, but the October, 1971, level of 128.8 was 2.5 per cent higher than in October 1970.

Talks Declined

VANCOUVER (CP) — The B.C. Federation of Labor has declined an invitation to discuss policy with Liberal MLAS. In a letter to provincial Liberal leader Pat McGeer, federation secretary Ray Haynes said: "As long as the Liberal party maintains its support for compulsion in labor-management relations and basic provisions of Bill 33, there is no useful purpose in discussing policy."

Restore St. Roch

VANCOUVER (CP) — Work is to start Friday on the first phase of the $316,000 restoration of the RCMP schooner St. Roch. The job, expected to be completed by February, involves replacement of decks and chemical treatment of the hull to prevent rot. The restoration is to take place in six phases to be completed in 1974.

Future Looks Bleak For Victoria Yards

By AB KENT
Times Staff

Hopes for new major contracts at Victoria's two largest steel fabricating plants continue to dangle as tradesmen gradually run out of work and are laid off.

Both Yarrows Ltd. and Victoria Machinery Depot Co. Ltd. are competing vigorously with other heavy steel industries on the mainland for what little work comes up in the petroleum, petrochemical, pulp and paper, shipbuilding and deep submersible fields.

But aside from a couple of outfield prospects at this point, neither see other than routine ship repair and mill maintenance jobs for the foreseeable future.

VMD president Harold Husband said the 110 men remaining on the payroll at his Bay Street yard will be progressively reduced as work in hand progresses.

CONTINUE BIDDING

His planning and engineering stafff continues to bid on big contracts, but even if a large job were landed immediately there would be a pause to enable material to be assembled and fabrication logistics to be worked out.

"If anything did develop, it wouldn't be applicable immediately," Husband said.

Five days ago VMD laid off 30 boilermakers. At the same time Yarrows discharged 35, leaving that yard with about 250 hourly-paid staff.

Yarrows, with shipyard and industrial divisions, has been busier lately because of ship repair work, which may come in larger or smaller amounts depending on shipping and the toll of Pacific storms.

Also, Yarrows has just finished fabricating the framework and parabolic reflector for the 100-foot earth-satellite antenna for Telsat Canada at Lake Cowichan. It has subcontracted the erection, which is about half finished.

The most interesting prospect for Yarrows in the shipbuilding division is still in the wishful stage.

FISHING FLEET

Along with other shipbuilding, Yarrows is hoping to take part in building a fleet of 12 deep sea fishing vessels for duty based on the Atlantic coast.

The proposal is that of a diversified company with experience in other fields, and firm details are lacking at this point.

However, Yarrows expects to hold discussions with the firm shortly. A vice-president of the company reached in Edmonton said plans are at a delicate point and he thought further comment should come from the president.

George Forbes, technical manager at Yarrows, said there had been some indication that prototype vessels might be built on this coast and the rest on the Atlantic seaboard.

TWO YEARS

In any case, a couple of ships of the rumored description would be good for two years of construction work, he estimated.

Prospects for VMD are similarly uncertain, but much effort has gone into plans and submissions for the large scroll cases for four turbines needed for B.C. Hydro's Mica dam project, which Dominion Engineering Ltd. bid on.

A contract has not been awarded, but if engineers sent by Hydro to Russia report favorably, it appears the Soviet Energomachexport company will be the turbine builder, leaving Dominion Engineering and six foreign firms out of the running.

Dominion, third lowest bidder, has an agreement with VMD to supply the scroll cases, the chambers which funnel water from penstocks into turbines.

Husband has said such a contract would provide about 18 months' employment at his yard.

Neil Hindle, business agent for one of the largest unions in the yards, said many of his boilermakers have been sent to the interior for steel fabricating jobs at mines and pulp mills. A few have been sent to Hydro dam sites.

REMAIN IDLE

Relatively few are able to find alternative work in this area because the smaller shops have full staffs or little work. Others who have been laid off may choose to remain idle until after Christmas.

Hindle said he was concerned for VMD, whose 1967 action in shutting down its shipbuilding and repair division remains clear in the minds of many who were thrown out of work.

"If I were a local politician I would be concerned not to let the VMD go down the drain," the union agent said.

"Manufacturing is the muscle of our economy, but it needs continuity. If it stops, it is hard to get going again."

Takeover Bid 'Strands Many'

A Vancouver stock dealer has offered encouragement to minority shareholders of Growers' Wine Co. Ltd. who have protested a takeover offer by Imasco Ltd., which prior to the bid held 64 per cent of issued stock.

Preferring anonymity until the stance of his employer is clarified, the stockbroker pointed out that there are few large shareholders involved in the offer.

"There are an awful lot of small shareholders," he said. Many bought their holdings at a higher price than what is offered by Imasco and have done without dividends while the company reinvested profits to increase capacity.

STRANDED

When a company the size of Imasco makes an offer for the small holdings, it does so for a reason and is not bothered by the plight of these shareholders, he said.

"They are stranding share holders on the way, taking their shares without any return on their money after holding the stock six or seven years," the broker said.

(In fact, Growers' did pay a total of 11 cents a share in the years 1966 and 1967 on its B class voting stock, none since. On class A stock, dividends have been paid annually since 1964, but holders are not entitled to vote unless payments are in arrears.)

Most of the shares outstanding are in B stock, for which Imasco offers $3.75 a share, 25 cents less than the offer for A stock.

48,000 NEEDED

The broker said that according to a list of shareholders he had seen, only about 15 individuals represent some 70,000 shares, with the remaining 372,000 shares in the hands of many individuals.

Persons representing at least 90 per cent of the value of publicly-held shares would have to tender their stock under Imasco's offer in order for the takeover to become binding on the rest.

According to the Vancouver broker, about 48,000 opposing shares could block a 100 per cent takeover.

"If there is any way minority shareholders can make a stand, they might as well take it," the broker said.

Costs of its offer to Imasco would be $1.68 million if all shares are tendered.

Imasco, formerly Imperial Tobacco Ltd. with interests in food processing, packaging and other consumer fields, has said its offer is a fair one.

Growers' has been informed the tender of shares to Imasco is "going very well," although figures were not made available."

The Wheels Are Wings When the Sun Beckons

Considering what a genuinely pleasant and altogether charming couple they are, it's astonishing how quickly you may learn to hate Maurice and Ethel Wright. If you happened to be retired and bored or nearing retirement and bored with that you might learn to hate them in no time at all.

I came to meet and hate the Wrights because, on my last birthday, the realization dawned on me that I might make it to the retirement age. After all, not many newspapermen do, you know. In Uruguay, for example, where they've humanely studied the mortality rates, journalists are compulsorily put out to pasture at the age of 50. Still, the long odds shorten with every year and so my thoughts have wheeled in that direction more and more for surely, if there's anything in a man's life that needs to be carefully planned, this is it.

It was Gordon Forbes, on our city desk, a man who also has his beady eyes on a mobile life after work, who suggested we go and see the Wrights.

"If anybody's found the answer it's Maurice and Ethel," said he, and so we made a date and Maurice greeted us at the door, a big, amiable, ruddy-complexioned man of 66, and handed me his card. "Maurice Wright, Retired," it read. "No business. No address. Open for golf . . . and bridge." I could see right away that he was going to be hateful.

The choice that the Wrights made two years ago when Maurice retired from the Queen's Printer here was, in a way, remarkable, considering a background of 30-odd years of solid, suburban respectability, a rut so comfortable that vast numbers of citizens, arriving at the retirement age, are content simply to snuggle a little deeper into its well-worn grooves.

The Wrights, deliberately, calculatingly, broke free. They became gypsies, caravan dwellers, trailerites, followers of the golden sun. And if you spend a couple of hours with them where they're parked now out on Craigflower Road you may just find yourself with a whole new slant on that day when there'll be 65 candles on your cake.

The most traumatic wrench in any such decision, the Wrights agree, would be the sale of the house, the house that's meant an adult lifetime of family, stability, roots.

"That really is the big moment in burning all your bridges," recalls Ethel now, a tall, handsome woman gracefully adjusted to a trim aluminum home on wheels that's just 24 feet in length. "Until that day you never realize how much you've accumulated and what a clean break it demands. But you're not losing your roots in a trailer. You simply take the roots with you. You come home to a trailer just as surely as you ever came home to a house."

This particular trailer is the Rolls-Royce of road-running caravans, an Airstream, made in California, as self-sustaining as a space capsule, right down to its three-piece bathroom. The Wrights chose it after trying others and have this advice: "Whatever the make, decide what size you need — then buy the next size larger."

Their's was purchased second-hand in Florida for $6,200 and since the Wrights remained in the United States for more than a year there was no Canadian duty when they came back to their home base. (A British Columbia-made trailer called the Aluma Coach, very similar to the Airstream, is now being manufactured in Richmond and the Wrights think it may be significantly competitive for the Canadian buyer.)

Maurice and Ethel can count on an income of around $600 monthly, but they say that a retired couple with half that and a talent for penny-pinching (presuming the sale of a home has financed the purchase of a suitable car and caravan) could join the fraternity.

Getting there to where the sun shines and back when it elects to shine here would be the sternest test on a lower budget. The Wrights figure on a minimum of $10 a day for gas when they're travelling and overnight stops in private trailer parks run around $3. (Most over-65 caravanners are leery, justifiably or not, of the state parks and, in any event, prefer the electrical, water and sewage hook-ups of the private parks.)

These costs settle down when the gypsies settle down. In one of Florida's most magnificent trailer parks — swimming pool, putting green, sun rooms, laundromats, shops, the works — the Wrights paid $200 for three months for their space and services.

With a little practice, it seems, there's no great trick to towing a trailer up to 30 feet in length. The Wrights will tell you of one 83-year-old Edmontonian still migrating south when the snows come. His wheels are his wings, just as they are for an ever-increasing number of retired people who refuse to vegetate.

For those who might be intimidated by travel abroad there's an ideal introduction through group tours with other trailerites. The late Wally Byam, who founded the Airstream company, pioneered these on a global scale and now several other manufacturers, including the Canadian AlumaCoach people, are following suit.

It was just such an adventure that the Wrights were contemplating when Forbes and I visited them. Come Jan. 17 they'll rendezvous with some 300 Airstream owners, most of them retired, at Tucson, Arizona, and then head on into sunny Mexico.

Maurice reached a long arm across to one of the built-in drawers (there must be a place for everything in a 24-foot trailer and everything must be in its place) and drew forth the itinerary . . . Nogales to Guaymas to Los Mochis to Mazatlan and on to Puerta Vallarta and Acapulco and Mexico City until the caravanners go their separate ways from Laredo, Texas, in early March.

Seldom have I seen a man of 66 with such a downright euphoric expression or so easy to hate.

Four Music Leaders Pledge $400 for Arts-Concert Centre

Four of Victoria's musical leaders Wednesday night provided the first boost for an art centre-concert hall fund by pledging $100 each.

Accepting the pledges of $100 each from conductor Laszlo Gati, UVic music chairman Phillip Young, Dr. George Corwin, director of the university chorus and the university singers, and Conservatory of Music principal Robin Wood, was Allan M. Purdy, president of the Community Arts Council of Greater Victoria.

Drawing attention to the facilities of the Royal for large events, Gati said the 280 musicians behind him, were sardine-packed with scarcely room to breathe or draw bow.

Need for an adequate concert hall in B.C.'s capital city has been the subject of numberous committees, commentaries by mayors, public polls, offers of financial participation by Premier W. A. C. Bennett and hundreds of sands of written words.

The latest attempt was made this year when Victoria's civic administration hoped that a federal loan might be available for a start in October. However the city didn't meet the March deadline for application.

In accepting the pledges Tuesday, Purdy commented: "It is no longer a question of whether we should or must have an arts centre and concert hall. It has become a matter of how soon do we start."

The Community Arts Council he stated, is now dedicated to finding a means to get going on the project in 1972.

Benefit Nets Estimated $1,000

As a result of the benefit concert provided Tuesday by the 280 musicians involved in the current Victoria Symphony program, symphony finances will be improved by an estimated $1,000.

Complete figures are not yet available, reports Laszlo Gati, but he says that there is no doubt that it was a profitable and worthwhile project.

Part of the Royal Theatre rental has been donated anonymously.

There was a queue-up at the box office before starting time and a good sized and enthusiastic audience present.

The same program, with one minor exception, had been responsible for two previous sell-outs, Sunday and Monday.

Ronald Turini, the international guest pianist was given a rousing reception on all three occasions and will be brought back in the 1972-73 season, according to Gati.

Hospital Pact Talks To Resume Thursday

Negotiations between the Hospital Employees' Union and the B.C. Hospitals Association will continue Thursday in Vancouver under mediation officer Clark Gilmour.

Talks resumed Tuesday under Gilmour, but the two sides did not see each other face to face.

Bill Rolfe, director of technical services for the union, said Gilmour sought the adjournment until Thursday so the B.C. Hospitals Association could consider further a provincially-imposed ceiling of 6.5 per cent increase in salaries and fringe benefits in 1972.

Earlier, the union said it was prepared to resume negotiations but would walk out immediately if the hospitals association was not bargaining "constructively."

A union official said this meant "coming to grips with monetary items without the constraint of a limit imposed by the provincial government."

The B.C. Hospital Insurance Service told hospitals last week it will not pay for increased fringe benefits (except unemployment insurance and superannuation) beyond 6.5 per cent next year.

Jan. 1 Target For St. Joseph's

Jan. 1 is the target date for launching St. Joseph's Hospital into a new era as a publicly-owned hospital with room to expand.

But there's no certainty that date can be met, Dr. A. J. Wood said today. He is president of the Southern Vancouver Island Hospital Society, the public group scheduled to take over operation of the hospital from the founding Sisters of St. Ann.

A complicated transaction involving four parties must be completed before the hospital can move on its new course and the necessary land surveying and legal documentation has been under way since all parties agreed to terms last July.

Wood said there are 1,001 details to be dealt with and some papers require signing by three parties" but the necessary steps are proceeding rapidly and it is hoped the official turnover could come by Jan. 1.

The parties involved are the society, the Sisters, who own the land alongside the hospital being bought for expansion as well as a major equity in the hospital itself, the Capital regional hospital board, which must raise the money for the land, and the provincial government, which will hold title to hospital and land.

One of the terms of the agreement will see the province lease the hospital to the society.

Wood said there will be some sort of ceremony to mark the gift of the Sisters to the community of an equity in the hospital of about $4 million but details have yet to be settled.

The Sisters started the hospital in 1876. Its operation has become so large and complex they decided in recent years to withdraw from management. Like all public hospitals in British Columbia it is supported almost entirely by public funds administered by the provincial government.

Hot Time At Ice Plant

Chief Eric Simmons said the cause of the fire at B. Wilson Co. Ltd., 536 Herald, is believed to be electrical. Damage is estimated at $1,500.

The fire was confined to the lunchroom of the building.

200 Claims Made For Job Subsidies

Municipal Affairs Minister Dan Campbell said today 200 claims from employers have been received under the provincial job opportunity program and another 200 are expected shortly.

A heavier flow of claims for 50 per cent job subsidies for welfare recipients under the program should be in evidence by the end of the month, Campbell said, expressing satisfaction with the program to date.

The minister also said he is pleased that B.C. telephone Ltd. has hired 17 utility clerks under the plan. Earlier, Campbell had said large industry wasn't participating enough in the program.

'An Altogether Charming Place'

Bastion Square Wins Massey Award

Victoria's Bastion Square today received an official stamp of excellence when it became one of 12 Canadian plazas, malls and parks to be given a Vincent Massey award for urban development.

The five-member jury headed by Ottawa town planner Humphrey Carver, described the square as "an altogether charming place."

The initial idea to restore Bastion Square was contained in an architectural student's thesis.

The $245,600 cost of restoration work was shared among the federal and provincial governments, the city of Victoria and the B.C. Hydro and Power Authority. Another $900,000 in private investments has been added since the initial work was completed.

Developed as a pedestrian promenade on several levels, Bastion Square is next to the site on which rose the original pallisades of Fort Victoria. The restored buildings were constructed just before the turn of the century.

This was the first series of Vincent Massey awards for urban development.

One of them went to the Bloedel Conservatory in Vancouver. The steel and glass hemisphere was pictured as a place "of rich and marvellous beauty" by the jury.

Also receiving recognition were Ottawa's Sparks Street Mall, a square in Trois-Rivieres, a neighborhood park in Montreal's Westmount district, Toronto's city hall square, Rockwood Park in Saint John.

Quebec City's Escalier Petit Champlain and Rue Saint Louis was also a winner, Saskatoon was commended for its new Midtown Plaza and Edmonton's Mayfair Park also took top marks. Calgary was praised for its Plus 15 simplified traffic system.

North Vancouver's recreation centre also received an award.

Special mentions were given Ottawa's Rideau Canal, Hamilton's Dundurn Castle, Winnipeg's Assiniboine Park Zoo and Metro Plaza, the University of Saskatchewan's campus in Saskatoon and the Japanese garden in Lethbridge, Alta.

Ferry Subsidy Continues

By DOUG MacRAE
Times Staff

The federal subsidy for ferry service to remote ports on the west coast of the Island will be continued for another six months, Transport Minister Don Jamieson announced this afternoon.

Jamieson made the announcement in the Commons in reply to a question from Comox-Alberni MP Tom Barnett.

The Canadian Transport Commission had said earlier this month the $400,000 annual federal aid to two shipping companies serving 12 remote coastal ports would end Dec. 31.

Barnett, an NDP member, said he had been "digging persistently, but not screaming" to get the CTC to review its decision to end the subsidies.

The commission will "reassess" the situation during the continuation period, "with a view to deciding whether there are any alternatives or whether the subsidy should be continued indefinitely."

B.C. Municipal Affairs Minister Dan Campbell said Ottawa had acted on wrong information in cutting off the subsidies.

Campbell said Ottawa had been told by their inspectors that the areas concerned are connected by road, which is incorrect.

"Our point is that if that's the basis on which they made their decision, they should certainly re-examine it right away."

Reaction to the initial government move was swift and critical.

Mark Atleo, an adviser to the Ahoustat Indiand Band, said the earlier decision was "cruel" to isolated Indian and logging communities entirely dependent on the ships.

Ahousat, on Flores Island 18 miles north of Tofino, has a population of 700.

Other communities dependent on ocean freight include Hot Spring Cove, Zeballos, Tahsis, Nootka, Kyuquot, and a number of small logging communities along the sounds and inlets of the rugged west coast.

DON'T KNOW

Atleo said federal authorities "don't know what they're talking about" when they claim alternative supply methods are available.

He said food prices would skyrocket, and bulk or other heavy freight — including fuel oil — would simply not be available.

Ferry cancellation would force loggers and fishermen to take dangerous runs in small boats through frequent winter and spring gales.

Esson Young, president of Nootka Sound Service Ltd., said that even if a first-class road were built to the two communities, shipping still would be needed to serve isolated logging communities.

"They depend on us for food and machinery parts, and they need them quickly, otherwise operations stop," Young said. His firm carries 400 tons of freight per month, as well as hundreds of passengers.

LAST POST FOR CARDS

Today is the closing date for mailing Christmas cards to distant points in Canada and the United States.

Post office information officer Ken Stofer said although there is no guarantee that cards sent after today will reach their destinations in those areas in time for Christmas mail can still be guaranteed outside the Victoria area — from Vancouver Island to the prairie provinces. Closing dates for this mail is Monday.

Closing date for local mail is Dec. 17.

Cards will still reach destinations in England on time if envelopes are sealed and 15 cents in postage used.

Closing date for this type of mail is Tuesday.

In order to help clear the Christmas mail rush all post offices in British Columbia will provide house-to-house delivery on Saturday, Dec. 18. Full wicket service will also be provided.

Full wicket service — but no carrier service — will be provided next Saturday. This will also apply on Tuesday, Dec. 28.

Monday, Jan. 3, will be a full holiday for all postal employees.

POLICEMAN'S HAT is as good a place as any to show off a welcome cheque, as Shirley Baker's smile shows. Chairman of the United Appeal's residential campaign, she received a $62 cheque from the Saanich Police Organization for Teens (SPOT), which swelled the 1971 Greater Victoria total to over the $600,000 mark.

Canucks Edge Blues; Hull Gets WHA Bid

By The Canadian Press

Vancouver Canucks were hard-pressed to defeat St. Louis Blues 2-1 Tuesday night, a day when most of the National Hockey League looked with concern at reports two of its established stars had been approached by the infant World Hockey Association.

Goals by Fred Speck, his first of the season, and Dave Balon wiped out a 1-0 St. Louis lead in Vancouver in a relatively tame game in which Blues' goaltender Jim McLeod was the key figure.

McLeod, a 34-year-old rookie familiar to Vancouver fans for his heroics in the Western Hockey League when that city was a member of the circuit, faced 40 Canuck shots and kept the Blues in respectable convention.

Which was more than could be said for some of the financial figures voiced in the reports that Bobby Hull, the Golden Jet of Chicago Black Hawks, and flamboyant Derek Sanderson of Boston Bruins had been talking with spokesmen for franchises in the WHA which begins operations next October.

TALKED TO HULL

Ben Hatskin, owner of Winnipeg Jets franchise in the fledgling league, said Tuesday he has the WHA rights to Hull and spoke with the Hawks winger in Vancouver last weekend.

Hatskin said he offered the 32-year-old superstar a $1 million five-year contract to break his NHL ties. He said there would be further discussions in Toronto this weekend when the Black Hawks play the Maple Leafs.

Sanderson, however, who has expressed disenchantment with the lengthy NHL schedule and talked earlier in the season of retirement, was ready to discuss the WHA's efforts to lure him to the Miami franchise.

"A fellow from Miami called me and made me an interesting offer," said Sanderson of the Monday phone call. He declined to give a definite figure, but said the offer was "a lot more" than $250,000 on a two-year contract.

Hatskin explained the WHA's draft system, saying that each of the 10 clubs placed four established NHLers on their negotiation lists at a meeting 10 days ago.

He said he wouldn't disclose who the other three players on his list were. He added

No Offer to Derek

BOSTON (AP) — Bobb Woolf, lawyer for many sports figures, said he plans to talk to representatives of the World Hockey Association here Dec. 18.

The WHA hopes to begin operating next October.

One of Woolf's clients is Derek Sanderson, center for Boston Bruins of the National Hockey League, and Woolf said Tuesday that Sanderson did not receive an offer to jump to the WHA.

"A man from the WHA, Herb Martin of Miami, phoned me the other day to talk about Sanderson and mentioned that figure ($250,000)," Woolf said.

"I mentioned it to Derek, and I guess he mentioned it to some newspapermen, and now the whole thing has been blown way out of proportion.

"But no offers were made, and no agreements entered into."

Corral to Be Expanded; New Arena for Edmonton?

These being some selected excerpts from various sources, and also from what the mailman bringeth.

For instance, the story out of Calgary is that that city's WHA club already has eight players signed up, but no names, please; that the Corral soon will be shoved outward and upwards to accommodate 14,000 fans, and that there is a group prepared to build a new arena in Edmonton, if the proper civic concessions can be obtained . . . Gary Veneruzzo, the leading Denver scorer, is the same fellow who once toiled here for the Victoria Maple Leafs (1966-67) . . . and if winning is everything Sam Berger, owner of the Montreal Alouettes, hasn't heard about it . . . The Als lost $100,000 this year, when they finished last in the east, and the year before, when they won the Grey Cup, they lost — yes, another $100,000 . . . and if you are going to the winter Olympics at Sapporo in Japan, don't worry about the language problem . . . there will be 550 official interpreters there.

From the book, Gambler's Digest: "Don't gamble (in golf) with any opponent who just manages to beat you. He's always one stroke better than you are, no matter how well you play."

To the reader who asked: Babe Pratt, in his heyday, was no shrinking violet when it came to disputing what he thought was an error in judgment by a referee. He was once suspended indefinitely in the WHL for attacking referee Eddie Powers. And yes, you can always catch the Babe with his drinking hand down these days. He's reformed.

Boom Boom's Role in Finley's Follies

From the usually reliable rumor bank, via Montreal, is the story that Boom Boom Geoffrion did agree to coach the California Seals this season, and shook hands on it with owner Charlie Finley, too. But somehow, Finley never called again. Then, when it was decided that Freddie Glover, who now is with L.A., must go, Geoffrion got the call he had been waiting for earlier . . . his reply is not recorded . . . Buck Houle, now looking for a job, had a similar experience. He met with Finley "five or six times", but could never get the managerial terms down on paper . . . It is said too that John Ferguson rejected the L.A. coaching position, and that actually, in Toronto, on Grey Cup eve, the betting line was "Calgary by two" . . . Which only proves that the high rollers knew what they were doing, doesn't it?

What they're saying:

Shirley Povich in the Washington Post: "Never was organized baseball so vulnerable to unfavorable action — legislative, judicial and inquisitorial. Four bills pending in Congress could bring organized baseball off its high horse as the one game immune to antitrust laws. An upcoming senate subcommittee hearing could deprive the clubowners of even more than the reserve clause that indentures players for life to their original team."

Eagles, Sheep and Football Philosophy

Meanwhile, did you know that a golden eagle plummeting out of the sky in a long, slanting dive towards its prey, may reach a speed of 150 miles per hour . . . that it is very rarely that an eagle will kills a lamb, and most stories of eagles carrying off sheep and lambs are pure myth . . . that the CFL hopes to use field clocks as official game timepieces as soon as possible; that is, as soon as all stadiums are properly equipped . . . that since Roger Staubach has been installed as the No. 1 quarterback of Dallas, the Cowboys have won five straight . . . that Henri Richard is using a shorter stick in this, his 17th season, with the Canadiens. He claims he can get more accuracy with the shorter stick, while providing a better measure of puck control . . .

Philosophy anyone? . . . The Washington Redskins and Dallas Cowboys are two of the powers in the National Football League this season, but they got there by different routes . . . The Redskins arrived under new coach George Allen, by trading off their draft choices for established veterans, and picking up the odd dissatisfied player . . . the Cowboys have relied mainly on the draft, and although they have been a contender for the past few seasons, it may not be readily recalled that in their very first season they were 0-11-1 . . . So, if both systems work, take your pick . . . Meanwhile, Vancouver Canucks would like to. When last contacted, GM Bud Poile said he'd love to buy two good forwards to go with newcomers Wayne Connelly and Dave Balon . . . "I think we have the makings of a good defence," he said . . . "But we still need the shooters."

Veteran Writer Dies

FORT LAUDERDALE, Fla. (CP) — W. R. Russ Wheatley, 75, one of Canada's top sports reporters until his retirement in 1961, died in his sleep here Monday.

Wheatley, who was with The Canadian Press for 41 years before he retired and moved to Florida, specialized in sports after working with CP in a variety of posts, including bureau chief.

He turned trick this time by rolling games of 261, 279 and 360 for 900 series in Monday Classic League at Gibson's Bowladrome.

Gump Makes News In Blanda Fashion

Blanda, at 42, was the top story of the 1970 National Football League regular season when he rallied Oakland Raiders to victory after victory with his field goals and backup quarterbacking.

Worsley is big news in the 1971-72 National Hockey League season for the surprising North Stars, who have exploded into a three-point lead in the West Division over the Chicago Black Hawks.

"It wasn't a big to-do they made over Blanda last year," said Worsley. "It was recognition and he deserved it. I don't care if he was 22 or 42, he would have received the tribute for what he did."

How would Worsley compare his job of stopping pucks that can travel at more than 100 miles per hour with that of Blanda's?

"His job is tougher than mine," said Worsley. "When I play, I play the whole game. What he did was come off the bench late in the game and win—it's tough to sit there and then go in cold."

Worsley has been far from cold this year. He will start his 12th game in goal for the North Stars tonight in the Maple Leaf Garden after winning seven, tying one and losing three with the NHL's best goals-against average of 1.36.

DISLIKES JETS

The North Stars acquired Worsley, a veteran of 21 professional seasons, from Montreal toward the end of the 1969-70 season after he got into a dispute with the Canadiens, partly based on the Gumper's dislike for jet travel.

Minnesota officials have solved that. Worsley often gets to ride in the pilot's cabin to see what's going on.

ALLOW 42 GOALS

The North Stars have allowed a league low of 42 goals, followed by Chicago's 46.

"It's still to early to think about that yet," said Worsley.

"Sure, there's some money in it. But we're only a third of the way through the season. That's something for the last few games."

But Worsley admits he wouldn't mind getting together with Blanda next time the North Stars play California Golden Seals in Oakland.

"I would like to meet him some day," said Worsley. "I've watched him a lot on television."

Oil Kings in Front; Bruins Here Tonight

Edmonton Oil Kings managed to squeeze past Calgary Centennials into first place in the Western Canada Hockey League's Western Division on Tuesday night.

But the lead has switched back and forth between the two squads so many times recently that Edmonton's position is probably far from secure.

The Oil Kings dropped the Centennials into second spot with a 7-4 win over visiting Brandon Wheat Kings.

Regina Pats trimmed visiting Flin Flon Bombers 6-3 in the other WCHL game. The win gave third-place Regina a five-point lead over the Bombers, who have 24 points.

Oil Kings hold a one-point edge over Calgary, which has played three fewer games than has Edmonton.

Edmonton took a 2-0 lead with first period goals from Terry Smith and Dave Inkpen. Don Kozak's 26th goal of the season gave the Oil Kings a 3-0 lead after less than a minute of the second period.

Two power-play goals by Don McLaughlin and another by Grant Thompson tied the game, but Edmonton countered with its own power-play goals from John Rogers and Darcy Rota to regain the lead. Rogers added another goal late in the period to end it 6-3.

Power-play goals also played a major part in the Pats victory.

Scott Smith led the Pats with two goals and was aided by one-goal efforts from Dennis Sobchuk, Clark Gillies, Ken Marit and Dwight Bialowas. Rod Loynachan, Bob Thomson and Barry Chernos replied for the Bombers.

The three Regina power-play goals came after Loynachan had given Flin Flon a brief 1-0 lead less than three minutes into the first period.

Meanwhile, Victoria Cougars play host to New Westminster Bruins at 8 tonight in Memorial Arena.

It is the first of 11 home games out of the next 15 on the schedule and Cougars will not have to travel any further than the lower mainland for their four "away" games.

This might give the Cats a chance to improve their position following a one-point gain out of their last 18 road encounters.

'49ers and the Second Guess

Could Use Anderson Now

SAN FRANCISCO (AP) — San Francisco '49ers made Tim Anderson, a defensive back from Ohio State, their No. 1 draft pick last winter and later told him, in effect, to get lost.

The wasted draft selection has come back to haunt the '49ers, with the most battered pass defence in the National Football League, a lot sooner than would be expected.

They could use Anderson, or any healthy defensive back, to help their crippled secondary in the final two weeks of the season. With three losses in the last four games they've dropped a half game back of Los Angeles in the National Conference West.

Anderson, disenchanted with San Francisco, wound up with Toronto Argonauts of the Canadian Football League and helped that team reach the Grey Cup final for the first time in 19 years.

Kansas City quarterback Len Dawson toyed with the '49ers Monday night, completing 16 passes and throwing no interceptions in a 26-17 Chiefs victory that knocked San Francisco out of first place in the National Football Conference West.

Cornerbacks Jimmy Johnson and Bruce Taylor were trying to do their jobs while playing with injuries. Safety Mel Phillips, another regular, played only briefly because of a sprained ankle.

Johnson, who broke his right wrist four weeks ago but has continued to play, was assigned Otis Taylor, who wound up with five catches for 81 yards.

Taylor with a sore shoulder, tried for an interception late in the Chiefs game and instead tipped the ball into the hands of receiver Elmo Wright.

One former CFL star, running back Vic Washington, has been one of the few bright spots in recent San Francisco games. The former Ottawa Rough Rider was '49ers' big threat against the Chiefs, running the ball 12 times for 63 pards and catching seven passes for another 42 yards.

The strange case of Anderson ended when the athlete, insulted by a $20,000-a-year offer from the '49ers, went to Argos, presumably for more money.

Anderson accused the '49ers, from team president Lou Spadia down, of insulting his agent and said: "I became completely disenchanted."

Defensive coach Dick Nolan said when the '49ers drafted Anderson that they rated him as a better prospect than his Ohio State team-mate Jack Tatum, now a starting safety with Oakland Raiders.

OIL KINGS PENALIZED FOR PART IN LOTTERY

EDMONTON (CP) — Edmonton Oil Kings Hockey Club of the Western Canada Hockey League was fined $1,000 Tuesday in provincial court for distributing illegal lottery tickets.

Court was told the club had not obtained permission from the attorney-general's office to conduct the lottery.

The charge was laid after city police searched the league's offices in Edmonton. Proceeds from the lottery were being used to aid the Oil Kings and other teams in the WCHL.

Four Titles Go to Torre

SAN FRANCISCO (AP) — Joe Torre of St. Louis Cardinals turned in the best one-man batting show in the National League in 23 years.

Torre, named the league's Most Valuable Player for 1971, batted .363 and had 230 hits, 137 runs batted in and 352 total bases to finish on top in four categories of the official batting statistics released.

The last National Leaguer to lead in as many departments was the Cardinals' Stan Musial, who won eight individual titles in 1948. Musial now is a vice-president of the Cards.

While Torre was winning his first league title, St. Louis team-mate Lou Brock raced to his fifth stolen-base title with 64 thefts during 1971. Brock also scored the most runs, 126, and had the longest hitting streak of the year, 26 games.

Other individual leaders included Cesar Cedeno of Houston Astros with 40 doubles; Joe Morgan and Roger Metzger of Houston with 11 triples each; Willie Montanez of Philadelphia, who had 13 sacrifice flies; and Ralph Garr of Atlanta, with 18 sacrifice bunts.

Taaffe's Burst Sparks Hotelmen

Mike Taaffe waxed hot in the final half Tuesday to help Hotel Douglas avoid an upset and retain sole possession of first place in the Victoria Senior Men's Basketball League with a 79-67 victory over Metropolitans at Highrock Junior High School.

In the other league encounter, Robertson's Men's Wear kept two points behind Hotelmen with a 68-58 triumph over Restoration Services.

Taaffe counted 19 of his 29 points in the final half after Hotel Douglas fell behind 37-30 at the intermission. Dave Mulcahy led Metros with 20 points, one more than the total chipped in by clubmate Jim Duddridge.

Forest Service Returns To Recreation Picture

British Columbia's forest service is rapidly accumulating the data required to incorporate facilities for public recreation into timbered lands under its jurisdiction.

And since forest service authorities decided to become reinvolved with the recreational aspects of timberland management two years ago, much work has gone toward laying a firm foundation for eventual establishment of these facilities.

The forest service stepped out of the scene in 1956 when its parks division became a branch under the newly-formed department of recreation and conservation.

But, recognizing the fact that an ever-increasing number of people have come to rely on timbered lands outside parks and other preserves for a variety of activities, the service is stepping back into the breach.

Harry Marshall, the lone recreational forester attached to the planning section of the service's management division in Victoria, filled us in earlier this week on some of the background and progress to date.

One recreational forester and one technician were added to each of the five forest district offices — Vancouver, Kamloops, Prince George, Prince Rupert and Nelson — about a year ago.

"The policy originates in Victoria and the district offices put it into effect," said Marshall.

In turn, the various ranger areas within the forest district will co-ordinate activities with the district staff.

Marshall also pointed out that because of a shortage of staff and funds, two main priorities have been set.

One is that in the initial stages the service recreational activities will be concentrated on Crown land within gazetted areas of provincial forests. And secondly, an inventory of recreation potential in these areas throughout the province is needed for administration purposes.

This latter project is now under way and Marshall expects the inventory to be completed during 1972. Some of the recreational aspects are already being incorporated into public sustained-yield unit management plans and maps.

Initially, the data gathered in the survey will provide a basis for planning further recreational priorities and only limited attention will be given to actual installation of camping and picnic sites.

But provision for these sites is already past the planning stage.

The forest service now has standard designs for recreational structures which will be assembled and distributed from central locations for installation on the sites. This standardization cuts the cost of providing the facilities (such as toilets, tables, etc.), which the general public will ultimately pay for out of taxes.

And the decision to install these facilities, which will likely be more in keeping with the primitive environment than those amenities provided in parks, will be made on the basis of demonstrated need. The forest service plans to follow the demand rather than create new ones.

One of the pilot projects will probably be located in the Sayward Forest area near Campbell River, which receives some of the most concentrated use on Vancouver Island.

Logging companies also will be included in the project.

"We're still developing our policy, as to the scope we feel the logging industry should be involved here," said Marshall.

They are progressively being required to include "plans which safeguard the forest environment" in their initial preparations before moving into an area to harvest the timber. This might take the form of locating roads to allow access "to recreational amenities" or using patterns of logging "to preserve so far as possible the aesthetics of the environment."

Future planning of the forest service includes attention to access road quality for safer travel and the possibility of trail systems.

The important responsibility for maintenance of picnic and camping sites will rest with the service and will likely be directed by the local ranger. And it will largely be a summertime project, when most of the public is expected to use the facilities.

Marshall expressed some concern that the forest service involvement might not become immediately apparent to the general public because of the "out-of-the-way" location of their sites compared to parks, which are highly visible to a large number of people.

But he needn't worry!

Vancouver Trio On Shuttle Squad

WINNIPEG (CP) — Three women from Vancouver and a like number from Toronto have been named to the Canadian badminton team to compete in the Uber Cup competition.

Canada plays the United States in Toronto, Feb. 26 in the North American zone playoffs with the winner competing in the challenge rounds in Tokyo in June.

Named to compete in the singles competition were Jane Youngberg and Judi Rollick of Vancouver and Nancy McKinly of Toronto, the current Canadian champion. Miss McKinly is the top-ranked Canadian with Mrs. Youngberg ranked second and Mrs. Rollick fourth.

Selected to compete in the doubles competition were the teams of Marj Shedd and Barb Welch of Toronto, and Mrs. Rollick and Mimi Nilsson of Vancouver.

Festival Badminton Tournament

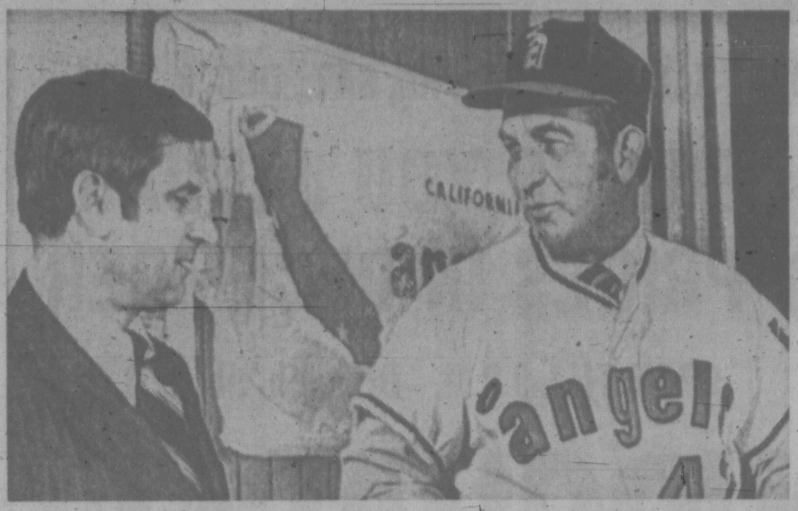
Victoria will be invaded by badminton players from many centres of the province as the four-day B.C. Festival of Winter Sports tournament opens Thursday at the Racquet Club.

The event will provide a valuable warm-up for players expecting to compete in the provincial championships Feb. 18 to 21 in Kelowna.

Only Victoria players will be involved in opening-day matches, which starts at 7:30 p.m.

But Friday night, zone winners from as far away as Dawson Creek, Prince George and Port Clements in the Queen Charlotte Islands will compete along with representatives from the Okanagan, Fraser Valley and Greater Vancouver areas.

Games will continue through Saturday with semi-finals, Sunday morning and finals Sunday afternoon.



HIRED AS MANAGER Tuesday by California Angels, Del Rice tries on new uniform with approval of Harry Dalton, general manager of American League baseball club. Rice, 49, received one-year contract.

Angels to Try Rice

ANAHEIM (AP) — Del Rice, who spent 21 years in major league baseball as a catcher and coach, Tuesday was named manager of the California Angels of the American League.

The appointment of the 49-year-old Rice for a one-year term was in the nature of a reward for leading three California farm clubs to championships in successive seasons. He succeeds Harold "Lefty" Phillips, who was dismissed along with general-manager Dick Walsh after a strife-filled season.

Rice, who was a catcher for 17 of his major league seasons, managed Salt Lake City to a 78-68 showing this past season, winning the Southern Division title in the Pacific Coast League and then besting Tacoma in the playoffs.

He also won championships with farm clubs at San Jose and El Paso and has never had worse than a third-place club in his minor-league managerial career.

Rice played with St. Louis Cardinals from 1945 to 1955 and was later with Chicago Cubs, Baltimore Orioles and Los Angeles Angels as a player. He was a coach with the Angels from 1962 to 1966 and then accepted a coaching job with Cleveland Indians before going to the minor leagues to manage.

Arbutus Volleyball Squad Captures Playoff Crown

Arbutus nipped Oak Bay 15-11, 15-11 Tuesday to win the Victoria Junior High School Boys' Volleyball League playoff crown.

The schools finished their league schedule in a tie for top spot but Oak Bay was declared league champion on the basis of a game between them.

Third-place Reynolds and fourth-ranked S. J. Willis also entered the round-robin playoff, which began Nov. 30.

On the first day, Arbutus beat both Reynolds and S. J. Willis; Oak Bay defeated Reynolds and S. J. Willis tumbled Oak Bay.

Reynolds defeated S. J. Willis 10-15, 15-11, 15-5 as round-robin play concluded Tuesday but the result left three schools in a tie with one victory each.

In other deciding struggles, S. J. Willis defeated Oak Bay 15-13 and Reynolds 15-10 for second spot. Oak Bay downed Reynolds 15-5 for third place.

Arbutus, S. J. Willis and Oak Bay advance to the Vancouver Island championship, hosted by Arbutus and played at Oak Bay High School, beginning at 10 a.m. Saturday.

McQuay Top Pick On All But One Vote

MONTREAL (CP) — Don Jonas of Winnipeg Blue Bombers, earlier named Canada's outstanding football player of 1971, Tuesday was named all-Canada quarterback on the all-star team picked by the Football Reporters of Canada.

On the offensive team announced by FRC president Pierre Proulx, the Bombers dominated, placing five men. No other team placed more than two. Ottawa Rough Riders, Hamilton Tiger-Cats and Edmonton Eskimos were shut out.

The Grey Cup-winning Calgary Stampeders and the Argonauts won four places each on the defensive team with the other four berths going to Hamilton, Ottawa, Montreal and Edmonton.

Winnipeg, British Columbia Lions and Saskatchewan Roughriders failed to place a man on the defensive team.

Voting was carried out prior to the Grey Cup game.

Over-all, the Western Football Conference teams placed 14 players offensively and defensively, compared to 10 for the EFC.

Toronto Argonauts, with two offensive players and four from the defensive squad, had the greatest single representation. Calgary tied Winnipeg with five — one offensive player and four on defence.

OFFENCE

Centre — Bob Swift, Winnipeg.

Guards — Jack Abendschan, Saskatchewan; Granville Liggins, Calgary.

Tackles — Bill Frank, Winnipeg; Ed George, Montreal.

Tight end — Mel Profit, Toronto.

DEFENCE

Tackles — John Helton, Calgary; Jim Stillwagon, Toronto.

Ends — Jim Corrigall, Toronto; Craig Koinzan, Calgary.

Middle linebacker — Wayne Harris, Calgary.

Backs — Garney Henley, Hamilton; Mary Luster, Toronto; Dick Dupuis, Edmoton; Dick Thornton, Toronto; Frank Adruski, Calgary.

There were no unanimous selections, although Leon McQuay, with 46 out of 47 votes, came closest. Wayne Harris, chosen earlier as Canada's top lineman, got 42 votes as a middle linebacker and two at cornerback.

Jonas was in good company as two of his favorite receivers made the squad — young Bob LaRose at flanker and Jim Thorpe at split end.

The quarterback voting was split three ways — Jonas got 32 votes to 11 for rookie Joe Theismann of Toronto and four for Ron Lancaster of Saskatchewan.

BOXING LEADERS WORK FOR UNION

NEW ORLEANS (AP) — The leaders of three boxing groups meet again today to iron out differences in a move that may bring a single powerful organization to oversee the sport throughout the world.

Those at the private sessions were Bill Brennan, president of the World Boxing Association; Piero Pini, secretary-general of the European Boxing Union; Ramon G. Velasquez of Mexico, president of the World Boxing Council, and Emile Bruneau, chairman of the WBA's executive committee.

They agreed in principle Tuesday to set up a common set of international championship rules and regulations so it would be possible to agree on a single list of champions and a single rating sheet.

Each of the three groups has made up its own list of titleholders and they have not always agreed.

Brennan said each group would have to endorse the proposal before it could go into effect and bring unity throughout the world but he and Velasquez felt confident of approval.

Final action on the proposed unification may be taken at the WBA convention in August. The WBC will meet several weeks earlier.

Theatre Star Pushes Film Careers

MONTREAL (CP) — Gratien Gelinas says young Canadians with acting aspirations should prepare themselves to go into movies.

The renowned actor and director, and head of the Canadian Film Development Corp. for the last two years, says:

"If I were a young man again, I would get as much experience as possible in theatre as an actor, as a director, but I would say to myself that my career is going to be in the motion-picture business.

"This is what I am saying to my sons. Of course, this is from a professional's point of view."

Gelinas, one of the top Canadians in theatre, made his reputation as an author-star in the French-language Fridolinas revues in Quebec in the late 1930s and early 1940s.

He wrote and acted the part of Fridolin, the unaffected slum urchin with the tough talk of poverty-ridden back alleys who poked fun at the establishment, for both radio shows and theatre.

His two plays, Tit-Coq, written in 1946, and Bousille et les Justes, done in 1958, were both translated by him and were well received by English audiences in Canada and the United States.

HAD FESTIVAL ROLES

He appeared in Henry V at the Shakespearean Festival in Stratford, Ont., in 1956 and at the Edinburgh Festival later that year.

Theatre, he says, "is regressing to a certain extent, though it will always be necessary and indispensable."

"But in a different way to the usage of the past. Sixty years ago, the only way to tell a story in dramatic form was to use the stage, but now there are movies, TV and radio. If a person wanted to get out of himself and be projected into the skin of someone else he went to theatre.

"Now, however, after 2,000 years, theatre has exploded into forms that are replacing it."

Taking over the CFDC, which financially encourages Canadian film industry, brought him close to the medium that always fascinated him.

With the aid of a director from France, he filmed Tit-Coq in 1953. He appeared in a locally-made film, Red, last year.

But the post also keeps him from participating in movies.

"It's a vow of chastity I took with this job and it's very hard on me. Still I'm happy here.

"I was becoming a little stale in theatre but I will dive into it again. I have been in love with movies since the beginning of my career but I was married to the theatre and couldn't afford the charming mistress of cinema."

FILMS STAY ALIVE

While acting nightly on stage no longer interests him very much, he would be "excited to work as a movie actor because this is new."

"The stage is a very elusive art for an actor. For a writer a play stays there to be produced, but for the actor the greatest performance in the world is dead. But film is a document that lives on.

"In movies there is the possibility of expanding one's audience and if the film is good then there is no comparison to the stage. Oh, yes, it is satisfying to an actor to have an enormous audience.

"Accepting this (CFDC) post created a personal problem for me. It meant I would have to stay away from acting. . . . But I had to choose between two aspects of my work.

"But look, from the start I was always involved in many ways, as a producer and director and so this situation now for me is about the same. . . . I would like to contribute to creation, with helping others to create, not to repeat what others have done, and that is why I have never had any interest in staging European or classical plays."

Substitutes

BURNABY (CP) — Burnaby school board chairman J.R. Chalk said Monday 10 teachers served with dismissal notices will be kept on staff as permanent substitutes. The cutback in teachers was made when school enrolment decreased by 730 pupils this year.

'Kidnap' Ransom Lost on Way To Rendezvous

MONTREAL (CP) — The manager of a downtown bank paid out $48,000 in ransom Tuesday when he was told his wife had been kidnapped.

But all the time she was at a beauty parlor having her hair done, police said.

F. J. Guy, manager of a branch of the Bank of Montreal, received a telephone call about 11:15 a.m. Tuesday.

"We are holding your wife captive," he was told. "Do as you're told or we'll kill her."

The anonymous caller demanded $50,000 for the safe return of Mrs. Guy and gave instructions for the transfer of the money.

The bank manager was told to place the money in a briefcase and board a subway train at a downtown station.

He was instructed to leave the briefcase on the floor of the train and get off.

Guy did as he was instructed within the 15-minute deadline given by the anonymous caller and got off the subway at the terminus.

He returned to his bank and called the police and attempted to reach his wife at home.

After several calls he discovered his wife had been safe in the beauty parlor the whole time.

Not only had she not been kidnapped but the man claiming to be the kidnapper may not have got the money left on the subway.

About 10 or 15 minutes after he returned to his office Guy received another phone call from the anonymous kidnapper.

"You didn't follow our instructions," the man said, repeating the instructions given during the first telephone conversation.

By this time the bank manager knew that his wife was safe and he hung up.

Police said all trains on the subway line involved were checked but the briefcase containing the money was not found.

PUC Deadline Set For Pipeline Bid

A Dec. 29 deadline has been set by the Public Utilities Commission for prospective builders of a natural gas pipeline to Vancouver Island to file notice of intention to apply for the permit.

The PUC states that a "pre-hearing conference" is scheduled for January, 1972, at which the exchange of feasibility studies and other material will be discussed as well as procedures for the hearing.

The hearing, to be held later in the year, may receive many applications for the right to build the line to serve Powell River and Vancouver Island.

Meanwhile, Resources Minister Ray Williston said today the decision of whether B.C. Hydro would present its pipeline proposal at the hearing will be left up to Hydro chairman Gordon Shrum. Williston is a director of Hydro.

SILVER BULLION SHIPPED

WEST POINT, N.Y. (AP) — The United States government has completed transfer of 2.8 million silver dollars, which were minted in Carson City, Nev., between 1878 and 1891, to the bullion depository here.

The coins were brought from the treasury in Washington in seven shipments over a month's time in preparation for public sale about a year from now.

The uncirculated coins are expected to bring almost $100 million. They are estimated to be worth 20 to 200 times their face value, depending on the year minted.

Bulls' Fans Love Love

BLAZERS SNAP STREAK

By The Associated Press

They love Bob Love in Chicago.

It was not love at first sight, but the slender 6-foot-8 forward has won the hearts of Chicago Bulls' fans over the last three National Basketball Association seasons.

Love wowed the Chicago partisians Tuesday night, pumping in 40 points and leading the Bulls to a 115-99 victory over the Cleveland Cavaliers.

Elsewhere in the NBA, Portland Trailblazers outlasted Detroit Piston 131-130 in overtime, Boston Celtics whipped New York Knicks 105-97, Milwaukee Bucks overwhelmed Seattle SuperSonics 116-83, Buffalo Braves trounced Cincinnati Royals 115-91, and Atlanta Hawks edged Golden State Warriors 116-113.

In the American Basketball Association, it was: Dallas 113, Virginia 103; Pittsburgh 122, Carolina 102; Indiana 119, New York 114, and Floridians 107, Denver 105.

Love, a benchwarmer in his early NBA days with Cincinnati and Milwaukee and in his first half season with Chicago, finally earned a starting job in the 1969-70 season and averaged 21 points a game. Last season, he was even better, raising his average to 25.2.

Against the Cavaliers, he was devastating, connecting on 16 field goals and eight of 10 free throws. Cleveland fell apart in the fourth period, missing its first 17 shots while dropping behind 106-88 after leading 86-81. John Johnson topped the Cavaliers with 25 points.

Portland's victory, accomplished despite a career high 44 points by Detroit's Jimmy Walker, enabled the Trailblazers to end an 11-game road losing streak. Stan McKenzie scored six points for Portland in overtime, including two free throws with five seconds left.

Injunction Frees Boys

TORONTO (CP) — An injunction, issued here Monday by Mr. Justice Patrick Gallivan, will allow two 16-year-olds to play for a hockey team in Sudbury, at least until Jan. 5.

The injunction, against the Northern Ontario Hockey Association, was an interim order restraining the NOHA from suspending either the players or the team.

The players, Tony Rennett and Mickey Hansen, live in Lively, 15 miles west of Sudbury, and want to play midget hockey in Sudbury.

The NOHA had ruled they must play for a midget team in Copper Cliff, the nearest community to their homes, with a team in their age group. Copper Cliff is five miles west of Sudbury.

The boys played bantam hockey in Sudbury for two years after failing to make the Copper Cliff team. They played midget hockey in Sudbury last year when Copper Cliff did not sponsor a team.

This year, midget hockey returned to Copper Cliff and that community's athletic association claimed the two players.

The NOHA ruled that Rennett and Hansen would have to play at Copper Cliff unless the athletic association voluntarily gave them their release. The association granted the releases last Friday, after the players announced they were seeking the injunction.

"I'm going to ask the NOHA not to fight the case," said Walter Denniston, vice-president of the NOHA and convenor for the Sudbury area.

Canada Works

Your community can work through the Local Initiatives Program.

The Local Initiatives Program is part of the Federal Government's Special Employment Plan. It is designed to encourage groups, organizations and municipalities to start worthwhile projects like building a rink; or providing services for the elderly or handicapped; or improving substandard housing.

Projects must give employment to people who might otherwise be unemployed and must be of a non-profit nature.

If your community hasn't applied for a project, start some action now. Applications are processed as they are received so it's best to move quickly. The deadline for applications is Jan. 31, 1972.

Last Arena of Non-Fatal Combat

HOT, CLEAN HATRED FOR RIVAL

NEW YORK (AP) — Gov. Ronald Reagan of California said Tuesday night that "something very important in America would be lost" if football were done away with, as recommended in a recent report by a team of psychiatrists.

"Football is the last thing we have where man can engage in non-fatal combat and do so by literally flinging his body against an opponent," Reagan told the annual awards dinner of the National Football Foundation and Hall of Fame.

"It's a hot, clean hatred for an opponent during a game," he said. "It's not a mean hatred."

"But when the final gun sounds, the hatred is replaced with genuine affection and respect. Injury is incidental, not the object of the game."

Reagan, a former varsity player at Eureka College in Illinois who later became a sportscaster and movie actor before turning to politics, received the foundation's Gold Medal Award, its highest honor. Previous recipients included Presidents Dwight D. Eisenhower, John F. Kennedy and Richard M. Nixon and former President Herbert Hoover.

NEVER GOT OSCAR

In expressing his gratitude at receiving the award, Reagan noted that "there were no Emmys when I was a broadcaster, there were Oscars when I was an actor but I didn't get one, and I'm sure I'm never going to get an honorary degree from Berkeley."

The governor's address was mostly humorous and contained many reminiscenses and laugh-bringing remarks, including his opening line when he told former Senator George L. Murphy, another ex-actor and president of the National Football Foundation:

"Murph, you and I somehow keep turning up on the Late, Late Show." The time was 10:30 p.m. EST.

Reagan said he owes much of his success to his role as All-American George Gipp in The Notre Dame Story.

"The Gipper won one for me—he made everything that happened for me possible," he said. "And those were the days when the studio didn't want the pictures good, they wanted them on Thursday."

STRUGGLE FOR EXEMPTION BERTHS

FREEPORT (CP-AP) — George Knudson, touring pro from Toronto, will be among several veterans eyeing this week's $130,000 Bahama Islands Open golf tournament with somewhat more than passing interest.

With most of the big names passing up the tournament, interest will be focused on the fight for a spot on 1972's exemption list, made up of this year's top 60 money-winners on the PGA tour.

Knudson is in the group of those ranked 56th to 66th that has entered this tournament in an effort to avoid having to play qualifying rounds for regular tournaments. Knudson, 62nd on the list, has earned $40,032 this year.

Jack Nicklaus, Lee Trevino and Arnold Palmer resolved the fight for the leading money-winning spot and all three are skipping the last event on the pro tour this season.

Jill Picked For Award

SALMON ARM — Jill Smith of Mt. Douglas was selected as the most valuable player in a 10-team invitational girls' basketball tournament here.

Clubmate Mariane Longmoare came second in voting for all-star team honors as Mt. Douglas finished third in the tourney.

Mt. Douglas defeated Prince George 43-27, dropped a 45-39 decision to host Salmon Arm Jewels and then scuttled New Westminster, 39-31.

Jenkins Leads in Six

SAN FRANCISCO (AP) — Ferguson Jenkins, the National League's Cy Young Award winner, led the league's pitchers in six departments in a busy 1971 baseball season.

The official statistics released Tuesday show that the Chicago Cubs right-hander from Chatham, Ont., had the most victories, 24; tied with Bill Stoneman of Montreal Expos for most starts with 39; had the most complete games, 30; and hurled the most innings, 325.

He also gave up the most hits, 304, and home runs 29.

The Mets ace recorded a 1.76 ERA finishing well ahead of runner-up Dave Roberts of San Diego Padres, 2.10. Seaver broke his own league record for strikeouts in a season by a righthander by fanning 289.

Seaver, 20-10 this year, had a 2.81 ERA and 283 strikeouts the previous season.

Wayne Granger of Cincinnati Reds was the league's most frequently used relief pitcher, with 70 appearances. Dave Giusti of Pittsburgh Pirates had the most saved from the bullpen, 30.

Dock Ellis of the champion Pirates had the longest winning streak, with 13 straight victories between May 2 and July 17.

Washington State Comes Out Against Flooding of Skagit

OLYMPIA, Wash. (UPI) — Washington state announced a formal stand today against a proposal by Seattle City Light to raise Ross Dam on the upper Skagit river by more than 100 feet.

The stand was in the form of a position paper from ecology director John Biggs to John Nassikas, chairman of the federal power commission in Washington, D.C. The FPC has the ultimate say in whether a permit will be granted for expansion of the hydro-electric facility.

"The state of Washington, acting through its department of ecology, officially takes a position in opposition to raising the Ross Dam located on the upper Skagit river," the position paper said.

"The project, by its nature, would have a substantial detrimental environmental impact on the lands and waters which are part of the Ross Lake area," the paper said.

If ultimately allowed, the project would flood several thousand acres of land in northern Washington and southern British Columbia. The plan has been the subject of continuing controversy for several months on both sides of the Canada-U.S. border.

The ecology department paper said the city-owned utility continues to propose new power projects "with the pursuit of energy being the first objective and environmental concern being decidedly a second one."

"The (Ross Dam) project's major fault is that the original planning and continuing planning and construction did not give the environment the care and attention which the public now appears to expect and demand," the paper said.

The ecology department contended also raising the dam would provide only an interim solution to the problem of supplying Seattle City Light's energy requirements for five years at the most.

The department noted opposition expressed in the position paper was not absolute.

The paper said the state could be persuaded to withdraw its objection to the high Ross dam if Seattle City Light would undertake a permanent program which "gave at least equal value to the care and maintenance of a good environment with that of our people's needs for new sources of energy."

Policemen Want Charges Dropped

VANCOUVER (CP) — The city policemen's union Tuesday night asked the attorney-general to stop proceedings against three constables who are to be charged with assault as a result of a disturbance in the Gastown area Aug. 7 this summer.

A statement issued after a union meeting said the police and "an overwhelming number of our citizens" felt the decision to charge the three was unfortunate.

A report by city prosecutor Stewart McMorran, made public last week, said there was enough evidence for the Crown to charge three men. It also said two others could be charged by private citizens who were involved.

The statement to Attorney-General Leslie Peterson said it was "in the interest of maintaining high morale and an efficient police service in the province that we ask you as chief law enforcement officer to intercede."

The disturbance on a Saturday night in the crowded, renovated waterfront area known as Gastown began as a "marijuana smoke-in" protesting police crackdowns on youthful drug users.

It attracted several hundred young people and between 2,000 and 3,000 bystanders. About 100 police and several mounted officers moved in to clear the area using what a supreme court judge said in his report on the riot was "excessive force."

CHILDREN, WIFE KILLED

WESTFIELD, N.J. (AP) — Five persons, three of them children, were found shot to death Tuesday night in their spacious home in this well-to-do community, police said.

Police said John E. List, 46, an executive for a New York City firm, was wanted for questioning in the case.

Chief John F. Moran of the Westfield police said the victims, identified as List's wife, children, and mother, had been dead about a month. He said the bodies were discovered by curious neighbors who entered the List home because no member of the family had been seen for some time.

Police identified the victims as Helen List, 46, her children Patricia, 16, John, 15 and Frederick, 13, and List's mother, Alma List, in her 80s.

The bodies of the wife and children were found in a first-floor hallroom of the house, lined up along a wall.

BIG INCREASE SEEN IN POWER DEMAND

VANCOUVER (CP)— British Columbia Hydro expects power demands to grow by 9.6 per cent a year for the next 11 years.

In a forecast issued Tuesday, the utility estimated that in fiscal 1982, its customers will use 43,916 million kilowatt hours of energy, compared to the 16,029 million kilowatts consumed in Hydro's fiscal 1971, which ended March 31.

Hydro provides about 60 per cent of the power used in the province.

The Crown corporation has plans for a $734 million development of new power facilities which are expected to meet the load growth until about 1977.

The rebuilding of Hydro's Jordan River plant is expected to be completed this year, increasing its capacity to 150,000 kilowatts from 26,000.

The greatest growth in power use is expected in the coal mining area of the Columbia Valley-East Kootenay, with an annual increase of 18.6 per cent predicted.

Needs Studied

VANCOUVER (CP) — The B.C. Energy Board, which is studying the province's power needs to 1985, expects to submit its final report next May, board chairman Gordon Shrum said Tuesday.

Dr. Shrum, who is also chairman of B.C. Hydro, said the study is turning out to be "far more comprehensive than we expected."

He had originally estimated that the report would be ready in February, although the order-in-council setting up the study did not require it to be finished on a specific date.

Dr. Shrum said the report was more comprehensive but "certainly necessary" to take in all the aspects of wildlife, pollution and environment in addition to engineering and economics.

"My great hope is that the comprehensiveness of the report will be matched by its objectivity," he said.

Dr. Shrum was unable to give any estimated of what the cost of the study will be.

Doctors' Earnings Up 76% in Decade

TORONTO (CP) — Physicians' and surgeons' earnings rose 76.4 per cent during the last 10 years, the greatest increase for any professional group, according to a survey of salaries commissioned by the Association of Professional Engineers of Ontario.

The survey, prepared by David Dodge, a professor of economics at Queen's University, shows that during the same period, dentists increased their earnings by about 52 per cent and lawyers by about 51.2 per cent.

Accountants realized a salary increase of 21.9 per cent during the period and Ontario school teachers had salary increases totalling about 26.8 per cent.

Between 1961 and 1967, says the study, engineers other than consulting engineers saw salaries rise 33.8 per cent across Canada while consultants had a 35.8 per cent increase.

In the same period, Prof. Dodge says, electricians improved their wages in Ontario by 62.8 per cent and sheet metal workers by 46.5 per cent.

Generals Duel

MONTEVIDEO, Uruguay (Reuter) — Two retired generals emerged unscathed from a pistol duel Tuesday in which they fired at each other from 25 paces, changed places and fired again.

The two were defeated candidates, for rival parties, in last month's Uruguayan general elections.

Gen. Liber Serengi, 54, challenged Gen. Juan Ribas, 70, after the latter called the former 'a disgrace to the army," a traitor and a deserter for aligning himself with Socialist and Communist politicians.

Sources close to Gen. Serengi said he had reservations about duelling because he is a Roman Catholic, but felt he had to defend his army prestige.

Duelling is legal in Uruguay, providing a tribunal of honor approves.

Newcomers to Political Scene family

WENDY DEY - EDITOR

By HELEN MELNYK
Times Staff

A review of the Municipal Act between breakfast dishes and the laundry is all in the day's work for three political debutantes.

Of 26 candidates campaigning for 11 aldermanic seats in the municipalities of Victoria, Saanich and Oak Bay, four are women. Besides the three standing for Victoria, Mrs. Edith Gunning is making a bid for her fourth term as a Saanich alderman.

There was only one female candidate for mayor in the three municipalities. Mayor Frances Elford of Oak Bay was elected for a second term in office by acclamation.

Last summer Joyce Heynsbroek, 43, was learning to walk again following major spine surgery. Now she's putting in an 18-hour day campaigning for Victoria alderman and looking after five children, 8 to 18 years of age, and her husband.

Hard Work

"Hard work is what rehabilitated me," she claims. "I don't have time to think about my back. I don't like to sit for very long." She says she has never had a vacation in her life or even taken time out for a honeymoon.

During her convalescence, Mrs. Heynsbroek began to study a subject that has always interested her — urban planning. Since her illness has forced her to discontinue her 22-year career as a registered nurse, she has had the time to pursue her political interests.

In September, Mrs. Heynsbroek became an executive member of the newly-formed Committee of Concerned Victorians. The purpose of the group was to "bring about a city council more responsive to the people's needs through political involvement." Mrs. Heynsbroek was asked by other members of the committee to stand for the municipal elections.

Self-education in municipal affairs and community volunteer work is where she picked up her political know-how, Mrs. Heynsbroek said.

"I'm an avid reader," she said. "I have read books, newspaper clippings, pamphlets, anything I could get hold of that has relevance as far as municipal government. I have also picked the brains of all the knowledgeable people down at city hall and around town."

Thorough Research

Mrs. Heynsbroek believes in thorough research. Recently Victoria city council debated the safety of oil tanks located in the Inner Harbor. Not content to read about other people's opinions in the newspapers, Mrs. Heysbroek decided to find out for herself whether the tanks were hazardous or not.

"There are many light planes coming into the harbor each day. With the strong winds, it's very easy for one to crash into a tank and start a fire. I went down to the city fire department to ask how many firemen could be summoned to the area immediately should a fire break out. The answer was 18 firemen."

Therefore she concluded that the tanks were indeed unsafe.

All day long the phone rings with voters calling to ask Mrs. Heynbroek how she stands on various issues. "A politician has to have a good general knowledge of the issues and the workings of the municipality. Everyone has their pet peeve. For one it may be the sewage system, while for another it's the highrises. A politician has to be able to give a knowledgeable answer to the different queries."

They say that behind every successful man stands a woman. Mrs. Heynsbroek would say that the same thing applies the other way around.

"I couldn't have done it without my husband," she said. "My husband has sat very quietly in the background. He's a homeloving man who gives all his spare time to the home. By doing such things like taking over the little jobs for me when he sees I'm pressed, he's given me encouragement and moral support."

No Disadvantage

Mrs. Heynsbroek says she doesn't feel at any disadvantage to the businessman or lawyer who is running for office. She feels she is more in touch with the average, working person than an executive "in his ivory tower."

Running a home can be a training ground for running a city, she said.

"After managing a family of seven and paying three mortgages on $350 a month, you learn how to be careful with money," she said. "When you hear the phone ringing, supper burning on the stove and a child crying with a hurt finger all at the same time, you quickly learn about priorities too."

She said that an alderman or any politician must represent the wishes of the people who elected him. This means listening to what the voters have to say.

Consider All

"One person may be concerned that his garden has been dug up by the neighbor's dog. That may be more important to him than a $23 million sewer project. His wishes have to be taken into consideration too."

Mrs. Margaret Richards, 65, calls herself a second-class citizen. And it's not because she's a woman, but a tenant. She feels that the municipality gives tenants an unfair deal because they are not allowed to vote on money referendums.

"I don't ask anyone to vote for me because I'm a woman, but because my policy is good," she said. Nevertheless, Mrs. Richards admits that the fact that there has been no woman on city council for the past two years is one of the things that motivated her to run for Victoria alderman.

She claims there are some areas in which a woman can operate better — such as welfare matters, especially where women and children are involved.

"City council is run entirely by businessmen and retired people," Mrs. Richards said. "Council meetings should be held in the evenings instead of afternoons to allow more people to attend. This would allow more people such as women with children and working people to run for council."

For the first 12 years of her life, Mrs. Richards was the only girl attending a boys' school in England. Politics have always interested her, she said. She went to several political schools and a public speaking course. When she married she shelved her ambition of becoming an MD.

Since her two sons have grown and married, and her husband died, Mrs. Richards says she has time on her hands to pick up her political inclinations.

Door-to-door canvassing is one of the most time consuming and enjoyable tasks of her campaign, she said. Her objective is to knock on 1,000 doors. So far she's done 850.

"I don't agree with a word you say, but I'll vote for you," is what one elderly man told Mrs. Richards. She says that she hasn't had one unpleasant response. "Generally the people are glad to see me. Even when they start arguing with me, it's just to test if I'm wishy-washy."

Things Improve

Mrs. Sally Rogers, 62, thinks that there are still many men around who don't want a woman to "get anywhere." Like the man who called and asked her what she would do with her husband if she gets elected to municipal council.

Nevertheless, she says things have improved for women since the other times she ran for city alderman in 1957, '58 and '48.

The first time she stood for elections in 1948, women in the professions were frowned upon. Ironically, it was a men's organization that asked her to run. "The women's groups thought I was mad and that the men would never let me in."

Mrs. Rogers decided to make a fourth attempt to get elected because "The dissent you read about in the papers is enough to make anyone want to get involved and see what's it all about. The politicians can't seem to make any decisions."

She hopes to improve the situation. "I've a very strong mind," she said.

She said her husband backs her completely. "He's out pushing my brochures now," said Mrs. Rogers.

Stay at Home

She says that "a woman can do anything, but not when her kiddies are small. A woman's prime rseponsibility is to her children. She should stay at home, until the children are off her hands. While bringing up youngsters, a mother still has time to participate in volunteer organizations, however."

The three female candidates for alderman said that although a woman can be the intellectual equal of a man; home and family is still her foremost duty.

As Mrs. Heynsbroek put it: "Once the floors are scrubbed and the children looked after, then she can turn her interest elsewhere."

Though they said that they agreed with some of the aims of the women's liberation movement, the three disassociated themselves from it.

The said that the time has come to end "discrimination" against women. Women's rights are not part of any of the three candidates' platform. Neither is the implementation of the recommendations of the Royal Commission on the Status of Women.

Race Theory Proved Wrong

UPTON, N.Y. (AP) — Blacks and Mexican-Americans score lower on the average than white on IQ tests because of sociocultural factors, not because of race, a study has shown statistically for the first time, a California sociologist reported recently.

Dr. Jane Mercer, an associate professor at the University of California, said she was able to demonstrate that the application of seven selected sociocultural factors did away with the average 15-point lead a white group had in the IQ scores.

"When you have accounted for sociocultural differences," Dr. Mercer said, "there is no significant residual variation that could be directly attributable to ethnic groups alone."

'Misused'

The sociologist said IQ tests originally were designed to predict which children would do well in school, but misused in such ways as the diagnosis of mental retardation without considering any other factors.

Some scientists have cited the typical differences in IQ scores between whites and blacks as proof that there is a genetic difference between the races.

The most notable advocates of this view are Dr. William Shockley, a Nobel Prize winner in physics now at Stanford University, and Dr. Arthur Jensen, an educational psychologist at Berkeley.

Difference

Dr. Mercer said Jensen has employed fallacious logic in trying to explain the difference between the groups with information taken only from whites.

She reported her findings at a seminar held by Council for the Advancement of Science Writing, at Brookhaven National Laboratory.

Dr. Mercer's findings grew out of the work she did on children classed as mentally retarded in Riverside, Calif. She reported a few months ago that many children were being incorrectly labelled as retarded.

The sociologist said she considers the new work important because, "there are people who are proposing policy changes based on absolutely fallacious logic."

TOUPEE TROUBLES

LONDON (CP) — Keep out of the sun and don't smoke. That's the advice from one toupee manufacturer to Britain's 150,000 hairpiece wearers. Speaking at a conference, Ian Kyle said that sunshine bleaches the color of wigs while cigarette smoke can discolor and stain them. "If you want to keep your secret to yourself," Kyle said, "cut out smoking and don't go abroad too often."

Cars King of Road—Auto Association

OTTAWA (CP) — The Canadian Automobile Association urged the government Monday not to favor mass transportation at the expense of the automobile.

The association said in a brief to the cabinet that the automobile is the preferred method of transportation today.

The rate of increase in the number of cars was levelling off. Car totals had risen 100 per cent between 1960 and 1970 but were only expected to increase by 60 per cent between 1970 and 1980 and 20 per cent in the following decade.

The association said the country economically can handle this growth in the years to 2000. Government spending should not concentrate unduly on mass transportation.

The brief supported automobile air pollution standards and called on the government to develop noise standards for all forms of automotive transport.

Women Who Made News Around World in 1971

Indira Gandhi 'on hot volcano'

Margaret Sinclair marries bachelor PM

By CAROL KENNEDY
Canadian Press Staff

With or without the efforts of Women's Lib, female horizons were widening in many parts of the world as 1972 approached.

A courageous British girl became the first woman to sail the Atlantic solo; two women in Hong Kong were admitted to the hitherto all-male Anglican priesthood, and Switzerland at last gave women the vote and elected its first female MP.

Canada's Margaret Sinclair accomplished the unexpected feat of toppling Prime Minister Trudeau from his bachelor pedestal: Their March 4 wedding in North Vancouver was the year's best-kept secret.

Northern Ireland's peppery Bernadette Devlin gave birth to a daughter, refused to name the father and plunged back with scarcely a pause into the turmoil of Ulster politics.

Lady Amelia Fleming, Greek-born widow of the discoverer of penicillin, defied Greece's right-wing military government by taking part in an abortive plan to free a man jailed for an assassination attempt.

Sentenced first to jail, then deported from Greece and deprived of her Greek passport — she had dual Anglo-Greek nationality — the 62-year-old widow vowed she would, if necessary, walk back to Greece through Albania.

New Adventurous Spirit

Symbolic of a new adventurous spirit in 1971 was Nicolette (Nicky) Milnes-Walker, 28-year-old psychology graduate from Cheshire, England, who made her 45-day odyssey from Wales to Rhode Island in a 30-foot glass-fibre sloop — mostly in the nude, she later let drop.

Of her epic voyage, when she was threatened by whales among other hazards, surgeon's daughter Nicky said. "I think women are more suited to this sort of thing than men.

"Men are designed for quick and immedaite reactions, whereas women are much more able to withstand adverse conditions. They have better stamina and are better able to deal with physical strain."

Women's Lib made strides during the year, gaining attention with the writings of America's Gloria Steinem in New York and Germaine Greer in Britian. The movement spread even to conservative southern Ireland, producing a piquant encounter with embarrassed Dublin customs officers when a group of Libbers returned from a trip to Belfast flaunting scores of contraceptives — banned in the predominantly Roman Catholic Republic of Ireland.

Teen-Age Girls Attacked

In embattled Northern Ireland, however, women took on a sinister role as bitterness swelled against British troops trying to flush out nationalist guerrillas in the Catholic ghetto areas. The world was shocked when mobs of Londonderry housewives attacked teen-age girls who were dating British soldiers, shaved their heads and poured tar or paint over them.

Among the veterans, mystery queen Agatha Christie published her 80th book on her 80th birthday and saw her marathon thriller The Mousetrap enter its 20th straight year on London's West End stage.

At the other end of the age scale, Australia's pert, grateful Evonne Goolagong, 19, became the first of her Aborigine race to capture the Wimbledon women's tennis championship.

Another female first was chalked up by British-born Prof. Margaret Burbidge, one of the world's leading optical astronomers, who was appointed first woman director of the Royal Greenwich Observatory.

The world's two leading women politicians — India's Prime Minister Indira Gandhi and Israel's Premier Golda Meir — continued to preside over their countries' precarious destinies. Mrs. Gandhi, touring Europe to promote awareness of India's position in the Pakistan confrontation, described her job as sitting on a hot volcano.

Chemical's Safety Questioned

WASHINGTON (AP) — The United States Food and Drug Administration, citing new studies questioning both the safety and effectiveness of hexachlorophene as a germ fighter, warned this week against its use for bathing babies and adults.

The federal agency ordered warning labels on soaps and skin cleansers containing three per cent or more of the chemical, and sent a separate warning to 600,000 physicians and other health professions.

In controlled studies, the FDA said, 50 new-born infants bathed daily with hexachlorophene preparations absorbed measurable quantities of the chemical into their blood by the time of their hospital discharge, although none displayed toxic symptoms.

It added that a group of baby monkeys bathed with a three-per-cent solution for 90 days developed brain lesions. In addition, rats fed hexachlorophene showed physical brain changes.

The FDA action was based on studies by the National Academy of Sciences — National Research Council, which found hexachlorophene effective as a skin cleanser, at best possibly effective in treating impetigo and other staphylococcal skin infections and acne, and lacking substantial effectiveness as a vaginal douche and for treating chronic eczema, wounds and burns.

The study found the chemical lacked effectiveness as an "aid to personal hygiene," a phrase seen as opening the door for an inquiry into the use of hexachlorophene in aerosol deodorants and feminine hygiene sprays, blamed by many doctors for skin and membrane irritations.

Hexachlorophene, introduced about 22 years ago, now is found in thousands of household products including household products.

Women Still 'Second-Class Citizens'

—AP Wirephoto

Women's lib now a household term

NEW YORK (UPI) — You've come a long way, baby — or have you?

The answer is an emphatic "no." You're still a second class citizen, although as woman you've had suffrage since 1920, that both equal pay and fair employment practices laws are on the books, that women's lib is now a household term, that there are more than 31.5 million of you in the U.S. labor force.

In fact, the great putdown of American womanhood ranges from women's failure to reach the tops in politics or the professions to the usual stereotypes that the poor driver is "just like a woman driver," a man refers to his secretary as "my girl," that if a meeting includes both sexes, a woman will undoubtedly take the minutes.

Eleanor Flexner minces no words about women's still underlying role in society today in her Women's Rights — Unfinished Business, written for and distributed by the Public Affairs Committee, a New York-based non-profit educational organization.

Miss Flexner has done much writing in the women's rights field and is the author of Century of Struggle: The Woman's Rights Movement in the United States.

In her writing for the Public Affairs Committee, she notes that "overnight, it seems, there is a new term in the English language: women's lib, which she sees on the whole as a healthy development, long overdue.

Women Make Demands

But why should women make demands? Most American women are certainly better off than woman in many countries (our standard of living is higher than in most other countries).

But the fact is, she says "all women are not equally well off or equally satisfied . . . the hard figures tell us that in key areas such as earnings and education women are a good deal worse off than men."

Look at industry. "If we take more than the most cursory look, we find very few woman in the top jobs," says Miss Flexner. Some women, of course, opt to leave the labor force to bring up a family and if they go back to work, they have lost both seniority and experience.

"But women who have stayed at work, even if educated and unmarried and therefore 'available' for promotion," she continues, "are likely to find that equal opportunity still does not exist . . ."

Next, public service and politics. Today, more than 50 years after the women's suffrage amendment, there is only one woman in the U.S. senate, Margaret Chase Smith of Maine. Still only a handful serve in the house — 12 in the 92nd congress. No woman is now elected governor of a state, Miss Flexner continues. A woman mayor with full responsibility in a large city is still a rarity. And only two women ever sat in the U.S. cabinet.

(Miss Flexner did not mention that the recent clamor for appointment of a woman to the U.S. Supreme Court got no results.)

Leaders 'Vanished'

In the field of higher education, women leaders "have almost vanished, even in the women's colleges where for three-quarters of a century women held positions of president and dean," she says. And "look at the other professions. How many women's faces do we see on network TV . . . as anchor 'men'? Commentators? Reporters? Very few indeed."

Miss Flexner says that the movement for equal educational opportunities was the earliest of all feminist campaigns and had begun to bear fruit even before the Civil War. Even so, she says, black women benefitted almost not at all from any of the rights won until the "freedom movement" of the 1950s and 1960s.

A record 31.5 million women are in the working force (either actually working or looking for work), Miss Flexner says. But a look at the type of women who work (about 21 million are working because they and their families need the money to live on, for food, clothing and housing) should "demolish the myth . . . that a significant number of women in this country work only because they like to or want the extra money."

Pope Opposes Militant Libs

VATICAN CITY (UPI) — Pope Paul VI said this week he supports women's rights movements as long as their advocates do not go beyond the limits of Roman Catholic teaching.

He implied he opposes militant womens' liberations groups and womens' organizations which champion birth control, abortion, divorce or — even in some cases — women priests.

The 74-year-old Pontiff told 150 members of the Italian Womens' Centre (CIF) that women can contribute considerably to solving the problems of contemporary life.

But, he added:

"One should not forget the necessity of a firm stand in positions against the spreading of certain subversive principles of womens' customs and those values which should remain sacred and fundamental because they hold the real human and Christian features of women . . ."

The Pope said profound changes were occuring in Italian family life and in the Catholic Church itself under the impulse for change in the status of the laity.

"Many are the problems, in fact, which concern the new condition of women and their integration . . . into civil and social life," the Pope said.

He also noted there were many organizations advocating more responsibilities and rights for women. These groups, he said, deserve support in attaining rights defined as human and Christian.

"Faithfulness to the principles of moral, health," the Pope said, "cannot be absent or neglected in an activity like yours."

Centres Would Teach Health Maintenance

BIRMINGHAM, Ala. (UPI) — Have you ever gone to a doctor for a checkup, told him you're well, and asked how to stay that way?

Chances are, he would be at a loss to answer that question, say a pair of researchers at the University of Alabama's medical school.

The two, Drs. Emanuel Cheraskin and W. M. Ringsdorf Jr., both well-known nutritionists, are pushing the idea of setting up a series of health institutes that would teach people how to maintain good health.

"There's a need for an institute where you can learn to anticipate rather than identify diseases so that you can learn to stay well," said Ringsdorf. "We want people to say to heck with a medical centre; where can I go when I'm well?"

The two scientists have written about a dozen books on nutrition aimed at the medical community, but they recently completed a lay book, New Hope for Incurable Diseases, in an effort to focus public attention on how to use diet to avoid—and in some cases cure—chronic ailments.

Nutrition Problem

"Nutrition is a big problem today," said Cheraskin. "There are many diseases that are rampant in the United States, and groceries have something to do with it.

"The health patterns of the U.S. are far inferior to what people think they are. We think we are number one, but we're not, in almost every measurement of health."

The book details a theory of Cheraskin and Ringsdorf that foods can basically be broken down into two categories — resistance agents, which tend to help the body fight off disease, and susceptibility agents, which have the opposite effect.

"What we show is that there is a common denominator in virtually all diseases — namely, if you don't want to get any of them the best way to prevent it is to use all the resistance agents and forget the susceptibility agents," said Cheraskin. "Give yourself the pluses and take away the minuses.

Sugar 'Bad'

"For instance, sugar is bad," he explained. "It's not only bad for the teeth, it's bad for everything.

"If you look at the diets of sick people and healthy people, you'll find that they're different. If you give sick people the diets of healthy people they don't stay sick so long."

The example, the doctors claim in their book, animal studies as well as some experience with humans indicate that a diet high in carbohydrates and low in vitamins, minerals and protein may create a predilection for drinking alcohol — the first step toward alcoholism.

Studies further indicate that a diet high in protein, moderate in fat and low in simple carbohydrates supplemented by vitamin and mineral compounds have tended to lesson the craving for alcohol by alcoholics, Cheraskin and Ringsdorf say.

In virtually all of the dozen diseases dealt with in New Hope and Incurable Diseases, the authors indict refined sugar and processed white flour, coupled with deficiencies of certain vitamins and minerals, as conditions leaving the body open to chronic illness.

Indians Plan Theatre

WASHINGTON (AP) — The first theatre of, by and for American Indians, is being organized. But don't expect any Hiawatha romancing or warpath whooping.

"We're not going to be any feathers-and-buckskin ensemble riding over the hills on horseback in some kind of historic pageant," warns Hanay Geiogamah.

"Why we want to dramatize is our very reason for being alive."

Geiogamah, who is half Kiowa and half Delaware, is the 26-year-old leader of some heritage-proud activists who have won $25,000 from the U.S. National Endowment for the Arts to show that the country's first citizens, like other ethnic minorities, deserve esthetic recognition.

If further anticipated financing from private philanthropy materializes, a 16-member ensemble will travel from home base in Santa Fe, N.M., to reservations with a highly-varied repertory.

The pilot project will be launched in January with Geiogamah and associates undertaking a nine-month course in theatrical discipline and techniques at that eminent centre of youthful endeavor created by Ellen Stewart in New York.

The Indian group linked up with Miss Stewart after initial inquiry last year to the National Endowment about how to get started.

Miss Stewart, who has nurtured young companies in such far places as Colombia, Europe and Japan, says "Hanay's project is fantastically sensible."

The heavy-built man, whom everyone calls Hanay because of that tongue-twister surname, traces his determination to have an Indian theatre to youthful reading back in Anadarko, Okla., about drama events in distant places, especially Broadway.

"I was just smacked with the theatre," he says. At the University of Oklahoma he avidly reviewed available stagecraft, but "never had any desire to get up and act myself."

While busy here as a field agent for the National Bureau of Indian Affairs, he and kindred spirits felt the time had come for racial representation among performing arts groups.

Although drama action in the Western tradition has never existed for his people, Hanay points out: "The Indian always has had theatricality in religious ceremonies and festivals. The impulse comes from the same roots as European theatre.

"When I started to think about theatre work I wanted to use it to crucify whites in plays, but then I said to myself that is silly because we aren't going to make them repent or relent.

"What we want to take is the approach of survival in the future rather than reproach for the past, even though I have no doubt the planners want to take away the American Indian's individuality and fuse it into the melting pot."

Earlier the Better

TOKYO (Reuter) — Shinichi Suzuki, a 72-year-old Japanese music teacher, takes three-year-olds and turns them into violinists before they can even read.

"As children learn to speak their mother tongue, so they can learn to play the violin," claims Suzuki.

His revolutionary but simple teaching method has turned out tens of thousands of child violinists over the years, and some have gone on to become leading musicians in Japan and overseas.

Since a demonstration trip to the United States in 1954, his method has been winning support in North America and Europe.

"What is most important in teaching the violin is to let them listen to good music, over and over again," he said. "The earlier they start the better . . . even within a few days after birth."

Hope He Grows Up

DEAR ABBY: We've been married 14 years and have four sweet kids. Over the years my husband has done some pretty mean things. Here is an example:

Yesterday my youngest cried when I told her I couldn't attend the first PTA meeting as that was my night to do the weekly shopping. When I realized how much it meant to her to have me meet her teacher and view her work, I knew I had to go, so when my husband came home from work, I told him his dinner was on the table, and I was rushing out to do the marketing early, so I could attend the PTA meeting.

Well, Abby, he flew into a rage like a madman when he saw there was no full-course dinner waiting for him—but something I had quickly put together instead. He shouted that he would not put up with meals like this, as though I fed him that way every night! He also said it wasn't necessary for me to go to the PTA meeting, and I was only using it as an excuse to get out of the house. (And all of this in front of the children?)

I did the marketing with a lump in my throat and when I returned, he refused to help me to carry in the nine bags of groceries.

Abby, what do you think of a 41-year-old man with a master's degree and an executive position who treats his family this way?—Heartsick.

DEAR HEARTSICK: Maturity and consideration do not come in degrees. And by the way, your husband is as much a parent as you, and as such he should have gone to the PTA meeting with you. (P.S. I hope your husband grows up before his kids do.)

DEAR ABBY: I don't imagine you have finished counting the votes you asked your readers to send in concerning a letter which you found extremely difficult to answer. But will you please give us a clue as to which side is ahead?—Impatient.

DEAR IMPATIENT: The "Don't Go's" are ahead. But it's no landslide. I'm hoping to have the results for publication next week.

Country Preserves History

elizabeth forbes

Mrs. G. A. Thompson, Craigflower Manor curator, has just returned from a trip that took her by air to New Zealand and Australia. And she is filled with enthusiasm for work going on down there, especially in Australia, to preserve historic buildings.

"The people of Australia are wide awake," is the way she puts it, "and they are doing a wonderful job of protecting their heritage."

To her, one of the intriguing things about that work is the fact that it is being done with little or no government help.

Preserve Past

It's all handled through the National Trust of Australia, a voluntary body of individuals who believe that the best of the past, whether buildings, objects, or sites of scenic or historic importance, should be preserved for the benefit of their own and future generations.

This trust receives no governmental financial backing. It's strength comes from private donations and from individual, company, and organization memberships, as well as from junior and student groups.

Historic Visit

There is a strong women's committee. It was Mrs. Gerald Patterson, widow of a world-famous tennis player of the 1920s, Ruth Wilson and Winnie Tapp, all members of this women's committee along with friends, Mr. and Mrs. H. W. Luxton, who took Jean to historic places in and near Melbourne.

Looking back on that whirlwind few days, she says: "We may have preserved a few historic spots here . . . but out there they have whole streets of terraced houses, rich in ironwork, that date back to the 1850s."

The national trust classifies these buildings "still in good condition and being lived in," from A to D. Some are taken over immediately, some get partial help; others are designated as historic and for future take over.

1840 Home

One of the most impressive is Como, believed to have been built in the 1840s and the home of the Armytage family since 1864. The National Trust acquired it in 1956 for $200,000. Immediately the Armytages put $120,000 back into funds for upkeep and also donated some of the furnishings.

To show how active the women's committee is, Jean tells of a time when a Como payment was due and "the committee went out and raised $86,000 in a year. That enabled the trust to plan final liquidation of the debt in the next 12 months."

As a room was completed it was opened to the public "so the place was making money for the trust even as work progressed."

When Como was finally restored, an entrance charge of 40 cents was set with 15 cents for children.

House Restored

The La Trobe Cottage, first Government House in Australia's colony of Victoria, is another restoration that Mrs. Thompson speaks of with enthusiasm.

Also Beechworth, an early Victorian gold town, 129 miles from Melbourne, where people still live and, with help from the trust, the Melbourne University staff and one of the active historical societies, work for its preservation and restoration.

Attracts Tourists

"Beechworth promises to become one of Australia's leading tourist attractions," is the way Jean Thompson puts it, "And it demonstrates in a most practical way the National Trust's policy of preservation with progress."

There were many other highlights in Mrs. Thompson's four-week visit "down under."

Canberra "which must be the most beautiful city in the world"; the great Snowy Mountain dam between Melbourne and Sydney "started 17 years ago and due to be completed in 1978"; landing from a small plane on the Tasman Glacier in New Zealand and seeing that country's North and South Islands.

But always it is to the "amazing work" of the Australian National Trust and its strong women's committee that she returns.

"Wouldn't it be wonderful if we could have the same setup here," she dreams aloud.

Painter Dies

EDMONTON (CP) — A funeral service was held Monday for Donna Clare Graham, 41, a quadraplegic who painted by holding a brush in her mouth. Miss Graham, whose paintings were well known throughout Canada, died Friday. The Govan, Sask., native was stricken with polio while nursing in 1953.

CITIZENS OF CANADA

OTTAWA (CP) — The government intends to see whether long-time landed immigrants can be convinced to take out Canadian citizenship, says State Secretary Gerard Pelletier.

But he expressed doubts Tuesday that persons who have been landed immigrants for a generation can be sold on becoming Canadian citizens.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20): Relations with children are something less than harmonious. Creative efforts could hit a snag. Give logic equal time with impulse. Be analytical. Avoid rushing. Take time to be positive of information.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20): Seek harmony on domestic front. You will need co-operation from family. Don't sell short when it comes to home, real estate. You may not be seeing too clearly. Bide your time. Rough emotional weather will pass.

CANCER (June 21-July 22): Hold off on journeys. Invitations could be withdrawn at last moment. Maintain balance, humor. Many around you act in eccentric manner. Pisces person plays prominent role. Take off rose-colored glasses.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22): Be aware of practical values. Don't expect anything to be handed you on proverbial silver platter. Extra personal effort now pays dividends. Not wise to delegate duties. Face situations as they exist.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22): Communications from a distance could change present course. Be flexible. Areas of legal action are activated. Ride with tide. Let others force action. Mate, partner confides financial dilemma.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22): What appears solid may actually lack substance. Proceed with this knowledge. Means be ready for surprises, changes, new concepts. Adhere to principles. Develop original ideas. Don't follow crowd.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21): Your ESP works overtime. You perceive, foresee and know what is to occur. Means trust hunch. Follow through on inner feelings. Applies especially in dealing with friends, those who make promises.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21): Forces tend now to be scattered. Key is to concentrate on what you want to accomplish. Those in positions of authority tend to change, act in manner to shake confidence. This is temporary.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19): Steer clear of one who ignores safety rules. Let caution be your keynote. One born under Aquarius plays key role. Accent is on long range results. Chance for success is enhanced through careful preparation.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18): You may be spending too much for too little. Know this and take corrective action. Some changes are necessary. Don't fight progress. Doing favor for a friend now will pay eventual dividends.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20): Pace quickens. You find out how to merchandise, to capitalize on products, talents. You are rewarded for efforts. Some ideals may be cast aside. But you replace them. Values undergo transformation.

IF TODAY IS YOUR BIRTHDAY you are great when it comes to aiding others with their problems. Your average falls when it comes to helping yourself. Many areas that were confused will settle into place. You have been going at a hectic pace. Start pinning your moves. Write and communicate. You are a natural humanitarian, wonderful to be with during time of crisis.

SHORT-LIVED WIN

CORNWALL, Ont. (CP)—A 60-year-old Cornwall man, who won $100,000 in a Kinsmen Club draw last Oct. 15, died today.

A maintenance worker in a local hotel, Mr. Marin couldn't believe his good fortune in winning the lottery.

"I've worked hard all my life and I've never had this much money," he said at that time.

U.S. Senators Dismayed

WASHINGTON (WP) — The Senate Armed Services Committee was told Tuesday that for years France and Sweden, and to a lesser extent England and Russia, have been turning out top-notch fighter planes for a fraction of what America pays in money and manpower.

And, the committe was told, the differences in costs were only partially explained by lower labor charges.

To a greater extent, according to two experts from the Rand Corp., the difference is due to simpler designs, a strict policy of "fly before you buy," and reliance on small teams of experts rather than a huge array of men and machines.

After hearing the testimony of the two Rand specialists — Robert Perry and Arthur J. Alexander — Sen. Barry Goldwater (R — Ariz.) normally a strong Pentagon supporter, and Sen. Stuart Symington (D — Mo.), of late a strong Pentagon critic, both said they were "ashamed" of the comparative U.S. performance.

The Senate committee, headed by John C. Stennis (D — Miss.) is trying to find out what can be done to prevent U.S. weapons from becoming too expensive to buy.

Rhodesians Maintain Economic Guard

By KENNETH L. WHITING

SALISBURY (AP) — Rhodesians are beginning to realize that recovery from their six yers of unrecognized independence my be painfully slow.

From Prime Minister Ian Smith down, officials are saying that the short to medium term promises to be bleak.

The settlement negotiated recently with Britain will take effect no earlier than March, if there are no hitches.

"Needless to say, until such time, the economic war continues and Rhodesians must maintain their guard," Smith told Parliament. "There will be no miraculous recovery overnight . . ."

The United Nations trade boycott and their sanctions did not wreck the economy. But the pressure was immense and experts say readjustment could be difficult.

"Benefits of a settlement will materialize more in the medium term than in the immediate future," says Alwyn Calder, head of the Associated Chambers of Commerce of Rhodesia.

The most pressing problem is the lack of foreign exchange reserves.

DEBTS NOT MENTIONED

The settlement terms made no mention of blocked profits, dividends and debt repayments owned to and owing by Rhodesia.

A treasury spokesman said in Salisbury that agreement on blocked funds would start as soon as possible after Britin lifts sanctions, "but only on a controlled basis permitted by the strength of the balance of payments."

The balance of payments was under consideration," the official said, and will be for the next two years, with scrapping sanctions providing only "limited alleviation."

Hardest hit by sanctions were the tobacco growers. Exports losses were at least $95.2 million and this does not include the vast stockpile of unsold leaf.

Agriculture Minister David Smith told Parliament that the current season has been boosted by 10 per cent, to 145.2 million pounds from 132 million.

Rhodesia appears to face a stiff battle to wrest back the big slice of the British tobacco market it held before independence. Britain took as much as 45 per cent of the then crop of 250 million pounds. American growers replaced Rhodesia on the British market.

FARMERS SUBSIDIZED

The government now subsidizes farmers to the tune of $22.4 million a year. Even so 60 per cent of them are unable to break even.

African unemployment, coupled with a high black birth rate, is this country's most troublesome long-term difficulty.

In 1970, African employment increased by 4.2 per cent to 726,000, a jump of 29,000 on the previous year. But Rhodesia needs to find 40,000 new jobs to keep ahead of a black population growth of 3.6 per cent per year.

Between 1966 and 1970 1,000 new industries came into existence. Real industrial expansion had an annual growth rate of 13 per cent in these years.

A long listof previously imported goods now are turned out in local factories, including women's stockings, stoves, pharmacueticals, car components, refrigerators and farm implements. Some of these manufacturers flourish in a closed economy and would me unlikely to survived free competition from imports.

Rhodesia exported goods worth an estimated $371 million last year as more nations joined South Africa and Portugal in ignoring sanctions.

Stop Denture Breath Now!

Bad breath often becomes a real problem for many people with deterjorating dentition . . . gum trouble, caps, bridgework and especially dentures. Only your dentist can rectify these conditions. But Steri/sol Oral Antiseptic does much to control accompanying bad breath. Steri/sol is specially designed for this purpose. Steri/sol's formulation contains an exclusive, active ingredient called Hexetidine that deprives bacteria of thiamine. Without thiamine, the mouth-germs that cause bad breath cannot live. In fact, Steri/sol with Hexetidine is so effective, it kills 95% of these mouth-germs within 15 minutes. Then it clings to the mouth and gum tissue to control bad breath for up to 10 hours. No wonder many dentists use Steri/sol.

Try Steri/sol with Hexetidine. It costs more than you usually pay for a mouthwash, but then Steri/sol is not your usual mouthwash. Sold only at pharmacies.

"YOUR BEST BUYING GUIDE"

Christmas Spirit Boosts Spending

By THE CANADIAN PRESS

A high rate of unemployment and a somewhat gloomy economic outlook across Canada don't appear to be diminishing Canadians' Christmas spirit—or Christmas spending.

Retailers across the country are predicting sales increases this season over a year ago of anywhere from five to 20 per cent.

Crowds of early shoppers in some parts of the country forced some merchants to reorder from wholesalers before the end of November. The demand has been particularly heavy for such major items as color television sets and snowblowers.

Demand varies from province to province. In Prince Edward Island, for instance, sales of women's fashions are slow, while in New Brunswick, retailers report exceptional increases.

In Nova Scotia, merchants expect sales volume to increase by five to 10 per cent. In Ontario, increases may be as much as 15 per cent. And a spokesman for Canadian Tire Corp. Ltd., which has more than 250 associate stores between Manitoba and the East Coast, says his firm expects to be "at least 20 per cent ahead of last Christmas" in sales.

'LOT OF MONEY'

"There's a lot of money around, and people seem to be going for more expensive, quality merchandise," says one retailer in Western Canada.

In Ottawa, retailers say sales this year are without precedent and expected to improve when federal civil servants receive their last paycheques before Christmas.

The weather over most of the country has been unseasonably warm. Because of this, many people—especially in Alberta and Saskatchewan—have been slow getting into the spirit. But it also means that retailers of Christmas trees have been able to get into the woods and plantations and trees are generally in good supply.

The price of trees starts as low as $1 in some parts of the Maritimes and Newfoundland, at $1.50 to $2 in other parts of the country.

New Brunswick suppliers report greater demand than usual from United States retailers.

Those who wish to cut their own trees can do so readily and cheaply.

TREES ARE FREE

About 90 per cent of Newfoundland's area is Crown-owned wilderness, and trees are free for the taking. On the Prairies, a nominal charge of 25 or 50 cents is usually made. In some parts of Ontario, landowners are charging $1.50 to city dwellers out for their own tree.

In Vancouver, a large and exceptionally well-shaped tree can go for as much as $12, the lower end of the price scale for artificial trees.

The artificial trees are selling well in Nova Scotia at $12 to $25, and some merchants had to reorder before the end of November.

Almost every community in Canada has some form of special entertainment planned, from such elaborate works as Handel's Messiah to simple pageants and plays.

Russia Hits Mao's Brand Of Thinking

MOSCOW (AP) — The Soviet Union has again attacked Mao Tse-tung's brand of communism.

The latest effort was a 3,000-word Pravda article in which Communist party philospher Pyotr Fedoseyev argued that "Maoism is suffering defeat after defeat and its ultimate collapse is historically inevitable."

In an unusual move, the official news agency Tass repeated the gist of the Sunday article in the Soviet Communist party newspaper, stressing that Mao is splitting anti-imperialist forces," subverting the national liberation movement and "conducting a policy of conciliation with imperialistic forces on an anti-Soviet basis."

This marks a revival of anti-Mao articles in the Soviet press following a period of relative quiet just prior to China's entry to the United Nations.

In Pravda, Fedoseyev called Maoism a reactionary ideology, objectively providing grist to the mill of imperialism and reaction."

"That is why the struggle against Maoism should be viewed first of all from the standpoint of the incompatibility of the aims of Maoism, as a form of social chauvinism, with the tasks of the world Communist and liberation movement, with the fundamental provisions of Marxism-Leninism on the main questions of the building of socialism, the world development, revolutionary strategy and tactics," he said.

Pooled Wheat Pools

WINNIPEG (CP) — The National Farmers' Union Tuesday proposed combining the three prairie wheat pools with United Grain Growers to provide a modern grain-handling system at less cost to the producer.

A 21-point grains policy, adopted at the union's annual convention, also calls for the marketing of feed grains, flax, rye, rapeseed, corn and soybeans under the Canadian wheat board. The board now handles only wheat, oats and barley.

It calls on the wheat board to sell direct to farmer feeders in Canada with a minimum amount of third-party involvement, and possibly to establish a Canadian livestock feed board as purchasing agent for feed grains required in Eastern Canada.

Roy Atkinson of Saskatoon, elected to his third one-year term as NFU president, told the 500 delegates the Saskatchewan, Alberta and Manitoba wheat pools, all farmer-owned and operated, cannot move toward a less costly grain-handling system.

VOTE OVERWHELMING

The NFU vote in favor of the Amalgamation concept was overwhelming. It supported the block system of grain deliveries, restriction of the value of grain stored in the country and terminal elevators, protein grading of grain, more liberal export credit terms for importing countries and advance announcements by the wheat board on quota levels expected during the next crop year.

The perennial demand for a two-price system for wheat was called for, one price for that used in domestic consumption and another for export sale.

Delegates approved setting a price of $2.25 a bushel for soft winter wheat consumed domestically and a price of $3.50 a bushel on hard red spring wheat used for domestic human consumption. Export sales of the grains would be made at prevailing world prices, usually much lower.

BREAST CANCER: A MEDICAL DILEMMA

Radical surgery has long been regarded by most cancer specialists as the treatment for breast cancer. But — as reported in the December issue of Reader's Digest — a growing minority of cancer experts believe that far less mutilating forms of treatment may give breast-cancer patients an equal, or even better, chance of survival. What lies behind this medical controversy? Should women consent to radical mastectomies? Or should they search instead for surgeons willing to perform more conservative and less disfiguring operations? How can breast-cancer patients maximize their chances of survival? For a frank and honest discussion of these and other questions, read CONTROVERSY OVER BREAST CANCER — in December Reader's Digest. Pick up your copy today.

Conversion Studied

RED DEER (CP) — City Council was told conversion costs of 55 city vehicles to operate on natural gas would be about $1,000 a vehicle. Council was studying a proposal by the engineer's department which recommended the change.

Nelson Beck, director of engineering, said use of natural gas instead of gasoline would result in a saving in fuel and maintenance costs of about $8,000 a year.

Study Break Urged

EDMONTON (CP) — The executive committee of the general faculties council at the University of Alberta has approved in principle a proposal which would cancel classes for one week in March for "the purposes of study, reading and general relaxation."

The break in classes was intended to relieve partially pressure placed on students prior to examinations, Dave Biltek, vice-president of the students' union said.

Hughes Alive and Well

NEW YORK (UPI) — Now it can be told — Howard Hughes is not only alive but has spent the last year touring the Western Hemisphere and transcribing his autobiography on tapes for publication next March.

McGraw-Hill Book Company announced Tuesday it has acquired the world publishing rights to Hughes' 230,000 word manuscript and will bring it out in book form March 27. Prior to hardcover publication, Life Magazine will publish three 10,000-word instalments from the work.

Hughes worked in a face-to-face relationship with author Clifford Irving on the project which included 100 taping sessions "in various motel rooms and parked cars throughout the Western Hemisphere," a McGraw-Hill spokesman said. He added that this definitely meant Hughes has not been spending all his time in seclusion in a hotel in the Bahamas, as was generally believed.

In a statement to the publishing firm, the mysterious billionaire said he decided to write an autobiography because the several biographies written about him have been "misleading and childish."

A Riot Stick Doesn't . . . A Policeman Make

VANCOUVER (CP) — A disguised city police officer's failure to identify himself to a man he was about to arrest was cause for dismissing the case, Judge Les Bewley said Tuesday.

Constable D. A. Boyd arrested Bill Arthur Francis, 22, of Vancouver for obstructing police during the Aug. 7 riot in the Gastown waterfront district.

Boyd testified that Francis refused to move when told to and instead replied with an obscenity. He said he immediately arrested him for obstruction.

Boyd said he was wearing a beard at the time and was dressed in a floral shirt, jeans and sneakers. But he said he was wearing a riot helmet with visor and carried a riot stick.

"I'm not entirely sure how I'd react in such circumstances," said Judge Bewley.

"My first reaction to this strange garb would be to think some hippie had stolen the helmet and stick. There were some most extraordinary apparel for undercover police during this period.

"And since Constable Boyd did not tell the accused he was, in fact, a police officer, though I'm sure this was inferred to him, the accused is entitled to the benefit of the doubt."

BEFORE THE JUDGE

A 30-year-old man was given a suspended sentence with a three-year probation Tuesday for his part in the break-in and theft of $2,800 worth of electronic equipment from an appliance store in November.

Judge William Ostler noted that Jerome M. Olaizola, 2821 Fifth, had no previous criminal record. He said it would have meant a prison sentence if the man had a record.

Olaizola earlier pleaded guilty to breaking into Quadra Appliance Servicentre store, 3514 Quadra, Nov. 18 and taking the equipment.

A policeman testified that the accused and another man entered the store by forcing a rear door.

The officer said the two took three color television sets, one black-and-white set and some stereo equipment and took it to the accused's residence.

They drove back to the store and took a second load home. The officer said the stolen property was recovered in Olaizola's basement.

The other man has also been charged.

Michael J. O'Hanlon, 19, of 1639 Hampshire, was sentenced to 20 days in jail when he pleaded guilty of impaired driving.

Court was told that the offence was the accused's second conviction for impaired driving.

O'Hanlon was stopped on Blanshard about 1:40 a.m. Tuesday after driving erratically.

The accused claimed he had had only six or seven beers and maybe he had been drugged without him knowing it.

He said he was in the Churchill Hotel pub and two men approached him selling "some drug such as THC."

"He must have popped something into my beer."

Chuck Williams, 23, of 11 Eaton, was fined $50 when he pleaded guilty to assault by trespass.

Court was told that the accused refused to leave the licenced premises of the Kings Hotel, 568 Yates, about 8 p.m. Monday.

Ernest Byrne Smith, 65, of 40 Boyd, was fined $350 in traffic court by Judge E. F. N. Robinson for impaired driving.

He was given a partial three-month driving ban.

Lindsay Edwards, 20, of 318 Irving, was fined $350 for impaired driving and given a partial three-month driving ban.

A Dishevelled Start To Dance Program

By AUDREY JOHNSON
Times Staff

For the first half of the program by Contemporary Dancers of Winnipeg at McPherson Playhouse Tuesday, it seemed a toss-up which would go to pieces first — the company or the audience.

But after a dishevelled and somewhat breathless 20 minutes or so the prospect began to improve a little, notably with a disciplined and profoundly expressive solo by artistic director Rachel Browne.

Miss Browne, from crown to toe-tip, has the kind of spare, finely-tuned body that is the sure mark of the first class professional dancer.

She makes visible and meaningful the rhythms to which she dances. Rhythms and sounds — from tapes of songs by Odetta — which are elusive and often capricious.

Some interesting choreography was revealed in Robert Moulton's Kinetic II, danced competently by Richard Sugarman with Donna Kirkbride.

There was some warmth in this portrayal of romantic love but it was impaired by an over-consciousness of the technical means.

Most successful performance was Turn In, Turn On, Turn Out — a ballet danced to various Bach selections. It seems that Bach, like Shakespeare, is indestructible while being adaptable to all sort of serious and tongue-in-cheek contemporary treatments.

This was the longest ballet, taking up the final third of the 90-minute program. It was at its best in the concluding episode in which humor took over.

Japanese Bar Jane Fonda

TOKYO (Reuter) — The immigration department decided today that American actress Jane Fonda and an accompanying theatre group could not enter Japan for planned anti-war theatrical performances because they held only tourist visas.

Officials had been questioning Miss Fonda, 33, and the 15 members of her group, since they arrived at Tokyo airport from Manila Tuesday night.

The actress has appealed the decision to Justice Minister Shigesaburo Maeo.

After being detained at the airport for three hours, Miss Fonda and her group were allowed to go to a Toyko hotel.

The group, which included Canadian actor Donald Sutherland, was scheduled to give anti-war shows in several Japanese cities.

Only Sidney 'Safe'

Safe Driving Week ends at midnight tonight and at noon today Sidney was the only southern Vancouver Island community to remain accident-free.

Sixteen accidents, with three injuries, occurred Monday.

Victoria has the highest accident count for the period — 48 and 10 injuries, followed by Saanich with 26 accidents and the same number of injuries. Oak Bay has had four accidents during the week and Esquimalt, 10.

Sooke has had two, including the only fatality.

Since Dec. 1 there have been 107 accidents in the capital region, 24 injuries and one fatality.

During the same period in 1970 there were 109 accidents, involving 27 injuries.

The youth division of the Capital Region Safety Council has been trying to give away money this week — not too successfully.

Stopping cars, they have been prepared to give a dollar to every person using a seat belt. To date the numbers using them have been about 10 per cent of those checked.

Prairie Test Centre for Farm Machines May Be Resurrected

By JIM NEAVES

EDMONTON (CP) — There are indications a centre to test farm machinery will be re-established on the Prairies, but just when and how remains uncertain.

The agriculture ministers of Manitoba, Saskatchewan and Alberta have held several talks on setting up a testing centre, but that's about as much as they'll say.

Last May, after five years of study, Dr. Clarence L. Barber's one-man royal commission on farm machinery recommended an independent agency be set up to test and develop farm machinery.

Dr. Barber said such an agency would help farmers choose the right machines and models for their operations.

Since then, federal action on the report has been slow and the agriculture ministers—led by Jack Messer of Saskatchewan—started discussing the need, location and administration.

They have declined to reveal specifics, but sources indicate there may be differing opinions on whether it should be administered by an independent organization or through existing university facilities.

TALK ABOUT FINANCE

While Ottawa says only that the Barber report is "being studied as a package" and that talks with the industry are progressing, the ministers have reached the how-to-finance stage in their talks.

Machinery testing was set up by the CCF government of Saskatchewan in the early 1960s.

Called the Agricultural Machinery Administration, it was scrapped in 1964 when Ross Thatcher led his Liberal party to victory ousting the CCF, the fore-runner of the New Democratic Party.

Three years later, United Grain Growers, in a survey of some of its more than 55,000 Prairie members, said 88 per cent of the replies indicated farmers wanted farm machinery sold on the Prairies tested in the Prairies and 70 per cent said manufacturers should be "forced" to test all their machinery.

A. M. Runciman, UGG president, said his board of directors "strongly supports machinery testing."

APPROVES IDEA

E. A. Boden, Saskatchewan Federation of Agriculture president, said his organization also approves the idea.

Dobson Lea, president of Unifarm which represents about 30,000 of Alberta's 50,000 farmers, says he has discussed testing with Agriculture Minster Hugh Horner.

He said Unifarm would not object to the test location being in Saskatchewan.

The development comes when farm-machinery sales—in a slump during the last three years—are on an upswing.

Since 1968 in Saskatchewan, between 150 and 200 dealerships have folded because of economic conditions and consolidation.

But during the first six months of 1971, Statistics Canada said sales of new implements and equipment, including repair parts, increased 30.3 per cent from the same 1970 period in Saskatchewan and 33 per cent in Alberta. In Manitoba during the same period sales declined about two per cent.

IMPORT MORE TRACTORS

There are also indications imported tractors may be making more impact on the Canadian market which, Dr. Barber said, is dominated by Massey-Ferguson Ltd., International Harvester and John Deere.

But the lack of service and parts still poses a problem for the purchaser of an imported unit from Italy, Romania, Russia and Japan. However, sales show a steady increase with Italy sending 918 tractors during the first eight months of 1971 compared with 281 in 1967.

In Winnipeg Canadian Co-Operative Implements Ltd. now is manufacturing Swedish Volvo self-propelled and pull-type combines under contract and sells imported Volvo tractors.

George Hirst, Komeco president, said he started importing three years ago and it "took at least six months before we sold the first six units."

FARMERS CAUTIOUS

"Our farmers were wrong about buying equipment previously untested on the Prairies, but now our first customers are coming back and sales are tremendous."

Mr. Hirst said his "competitors tell me our prices are always about 10 per cent lower but if the Japanese yen is revalued upward the price difference would be reduced."

Page Harrison, from the University of Alberta, says a Western Canada testing centre would cost only $150,000 a year to operate after an initial capital investment of between $500,000 and $1 million.

Cost Split Key Issue in College Vote

By DONNA CLEMENTS

duncan cowichan

DUNCAN — Cowichan District Teachers' Association said today it supports the concept of regional colleges but not the present financing arrangements.

The teachers are supporting Cowichan school trustees who are holding a plebiscite along with the civic elections on Saturday because they do not agree with the cost-sharing agreement for Malaspina Regional College at Nanaimo.

Trustees are asking all voters within the district: are you in favor of the board of school trustees approving, by resolution, the holding of a capital building referendum for Malaspina College?

Trustees are concerned "with the steadily increasing burden the property owner is being asked to carry" and "we must know what the people of the Cowichan Valley want before we decide on this."

Cowichan's college representative, Trustee Stan Turner, said the college is formulating plans for establishment of a permanent campus in Nanaimo. He said the college board will likely be submitting to each participating board a request to proceed with a capitol building referendum.

Turner explained that the initial three-year operation of the college in temporary facilities will expire in 1972.

Before a construction referendum can be held in the regional college district all participating school boards (which includes Lake Cowichan, Nanaimo, Ladysmith and Qualicum must agree to it.

The referendum must have 60 per cent approval within the whole college district to pass.

Turner said the vote will not be broken down into areas and that even if Cowichan taxpayers turn down the construction referendum, and the other districts pass it, it will go through and Cowichan will have to support it.

"This is why we must know what the people want."

Turner said if a new college is not constructed, then the regional college concept will probably "become null and void."

"I am in favor of a community college," Turner said. "The dispute that has arisen is not with the college council or administration. Our problem, as I see it, is with the other participating boards in attempting to find a solution in shareability of the homeowner's dollar."

Turner noted that Cowichan school district taxpayers are paying 26 per cent of the operating costs of Malaspina, while only 10 per cent of the student body come from here.

He added that the board has stated many times "that those who use the college should pay for it, or the college should be relocated so it is closer to the population centre.

"Until we can, in my opinion, find a fair and equitable solution, I shall continue to press for a compatible financial arrangement."

Turner feels that the financing for community colleges should be based on a provincial levy "as are the 111 other colleges in Canada. I wonder if the taxpayer knows that he is being double taxed for university and technical transfer courses by participating in a college?"

Cowichan school teachers noted as well that B.C. is the only province in Canada in which a share of the capital and operating costs of the regional college is borne by the local taxpayer. If the building referendum is passed, the teachers said "these costs would, of course, be in addition to our share for support of the three provincial universities, which are founded from general tax revenue."

"The question, then, to be resolved by the Cowichan taxpayers is whether or not they are in favor of participating in a capital referendum under the present arrangements."

FAMILY SHOW OPENS TONIGHT

DUNCAN — "Top flight family entertainment" will be offered in the Cowichan Valley Theatre Association's presentation of The Shop at Sly Corners which starts tonight, director John Getgood said today.

The play, written by Edward Percy, will also be shown at 8:15 at the Cowichan Senior Secondary School on Thursday, Friday and Saturday evenings.

Proceeds from the three-act play will go to aid the Cowichan Valley Regional Arts Council projects.

Trainer Relates Shipping Plan

A Richmond racehorse owner and trainer told a Victoria county court Tuesday how he agreed to a last-minute arrangement for shipping a horse involved in a fraud case now being heard.

Walter Gilker was testifying during the second day of the trial of David Baxter of Vancouver, another racehorse owner and trainer. Baxter is charged with fraud in the alleged substitution of a horse on the last day of the past summer's meet at Sandown.

The Crown is claiming that on Aug. 21, Baxter substituted a horse named Music Melody in the seventh race for a horse named Last Note.

Both are three-year-old fillies owned by Baxter but Music Melody had a much better racing record.

Gilker told Judge M. L. T. Drake and a jury of 12 men and women that Baxter had approached him at Lansdowne training track in Vancouver the day of the race and asked him if he had room in his truck to take a horse to the Sandown track for him.

Gilker, who had been about to depart, had agreed if arrangements could be made quickly. While on the ferry Baxter had told Gilker the horse was Last Note.

Robert McLean, 16, of Richmond, who helps his father train horses, told the court he had seen Baxter drive aboard the same ferry in a truck with a horse trailer.

The back of the trailer had been shut up but he had looked through a dark glass panel at the front of the trailer and had seen a horse's head.

Under cross-examination McLean said he was not sure of the date of the incident but one of the police officers investigating the case had told him the date later.

The trial continues later today.

Pilots Association Denies Vendetta Against Comox

Victoria wing of the Canadian Owners and Pilots Association (COPA) today denied the wing is conducting a vendetta against CFB Comox in its reaction to a fatal plane crash at Courtenay Nov. 25.

President Eric Franklin of the Courtenay Airpark Association made the vendetta charge in a letter to Courtenay city council Tuesday. He said the Victoria wing has been "conducting a vendetta with the Canadian armed forces for years."

Victoria flight captain Betty Wadsworth said Parrett was not speaking for Victoria COPA members in his attacks on CFB Comox.

"We are dismayed," Wadsworth said. "We have always had good relations with Comox.

"For that matter, we have always considered Courtenay a good little airstrip. No small field is going to be good in poor weather."

COPA's Victoria wing has 120 members.

RCMP Constable Michael Robert Mason, 29, of 1245 Lyall, Esquimalt, was killed in the crash. The pilot, Victoria detective James Macdonald, 27, of Sidney, was seriously hurt and two other policemen were injured.

Many Mayors Ousted In Ontario Voting

TORONTO (CP) — A number of incumbent mayors were defeated Monday as many Ontario towns and cities voted in civic elections.

Among the losers were Herb McClure, mayor of London, for 1½ terms; Merle Dickerson, the colorful mayor of North Bay, who was seeking his third consecutive term, and Nick Kaneb, the veteran mayor of Cornwall.

Also defeated were Aimo Marshall, two-term mayor of Fort Frances, and Ernie Carter, mayor of Kenora since 1967.

With 64 per cent of the vote counted early today, McClure, 53, was trailing city controller Fred Gosnell, 54, by more than 1,300 votes.

Deputy Mayor Bruce Goulet, 49, defeated Dickerson in North Bay by a margin of 666 votes, 7,950 to 7,284.

Dickerson, 58, had been mayor of North Bay on and off for 14 years.

Edward Lumley, 32, a bottling company president and a newcomer to politics, defeated incumbent Kaneb, 54, by more than 7,000 votes to become Cornwall's new mayor. Kaneb had been mayor of the seaway city for 10 of the last 12 years.

In Fort Frances, car dealer Allan Avis polled 1,799 votes to 923 for incumbent Marshal to become the town's new mayor, while in Kenora retired teacher Jim Davidson defeated incumbent mayor Carter.

CHAMPAGNE FOR CHATTER

LONDON (CP) — A clergyman has offered a half bottle of champagne to any member of his congregation to interrupt his sermon.

"I do not care what they disagree with me about," said Anglican Rev. Ben Lewers. "I just want people to take a more active part in the service by discussing what I have to say."

GARBAGE SAID RED MENACE, TOO

VANCOUVER (CP) — Canada and the Soviet Union share problems of pollution, and finding ways of solving the problem is a major concern, a group of Russian fishery scientists said in Vancouver.

The scientists, who held meetings in Nanaimo which ended last weekend, said the problems of pollution of the environment are acute and they were especially interested in pollution caused by the pulp and paperindustry.

Doctors Easy Victims

CHICAGO (AP) — The availability of drugs to doctors and their tendency to self-medication make it easier for them to become dependent on drugs than others, a Philadelphia psychiatrist says.

"The need to distort reality by resorting to drug dependency may occur in the physician just as it does among others who are unable to resolve their problems constructively," Dr. Ralph B. Little writes in the Dec. 6 issue of the Journal of the American Medical Association.

Dr. Little of the department of psychiatry at the Medical College of Pennsylvania says doctors' problems also are compounded by a "false sense of immunity" and a failure to recognize that any drug may lead to drug dependency when used regularly.

The psychiatrist says drug dependence among doctors may be 10 to 20 times more frequent than in other classes of U.S. adults. Most doctors do not become drug-dependent, he says, and those who do have underlying personality problems.

FUTURE SHOCK CLASS GIVEN

For 27 cents apiece, the class of 30 received diplomas printed on brown paper garbage bags, a view of the sunrise from the top of the Toronto Dominion Centre, a blindfolded tour of the Art Gallery of Ontario and other more or less unique experiences.

The course was organized by Frank Ogden, former therapist for LSD patients, helicopter pilot and manager of Montreal radio station CKGM who joined the faculty of the art college last September and is known to some of the students as its "weirdo in residence."

"The idea is to get the students to experience as much as possible," Mr. Ogden said.

The brown-paper diploma says:

"This certificate carries as much value as any university degree: i.e., good for wrapping fish, covering broken holes in plaster, impressing parents and as a last resort for the insecure."

Corrections Academy Established

WILLIAMSBURG, Va. (AP) — Attorney-General John N. Mitchell announced Monday the establishment of a National Corrections Academy to serve as a centre for correctional research and the training of federal, state and local personnel.

In a keynote speech to the opening of the first national conference on corrections, Mitchell disclosed a new federal program of aid to help modernize the U.S. penal system, recently wracked by numerous revolts.

Mitchell said the federal bureau of prisons and the law enforcement assistance administration will work with state and local authorities to establish the new corrections academy, which will offer training for correction personnel at all employment levels.

"I believe it will be the most effective single means of upgrading the profession and assuring that correction is more than a euphemism for detention, he said.

'People Served' By Mayor

HADDOCK

Mayor Courtney Haddock declined an opportunity to grant a taped interview based on questions submitted in writing in advance. He did grant a regular interview of which the following is an interpretive account.

When he was elected in 1969, Courtney Haddock said he would be a "people's" mayor, and he has continued this theme in the present campaign.

SERVED PEOPLE

"I feel that I have served the people," he said.

"I have nothing to gain — I have no property to develop — absolutely nothing to gain. I don't even lunch at the Union Club. I am a very ordinary person."

He also campaigned in 1969 saying he would use his business experience as a department store manager to cut city expences. The small decrease in the mill rate his first year in office was eliminated last spring by the highest mill rate increase in 10 years — a jump of five mills.

Haddock said welfare was responsible for some of this increase —"the city has no control over this."

"The city has no control over that, either," Haddock said.

Asked if there would be another increase next year because of commitments made during the past year, Haddock said the increase would be "very very nominal."

WORTH MORE

Beacuse of a broadening tax base, he said, "our mill rate is going to be worth more" in money.

"We may be able to hold the line. I am still hopeful we will."

Haddock has run into criticism for suggesting the Victoria Conservatory of Music be moved out of Craigdarroch Castle, which could be used as a money-making tourist attraction.

". . . you press put me down as an anti-cultural type, and I'm not," he said.

'WAREHOUSE!'

His most recent suggestion was to move the concervatory to the Maritime Museum, which he says is "still a warehouse."

"What I am trying to do is see if some more bodies can fit into the Maritime Museum."

When he made the suggestion, he said, "all I was doing was probing. All I was doing was asking."

"I am trying to turn those things to earning that up to now have been expenses."

Another is the Visitors' Bureau, which he says should be out at Swartz Bay. Instead it is trying to dispense information on the Causeway where there is no room for cars to park.

"I am not opposed to the tourist industry," he said. "People say I am trying to milk the tourist industry. I alwasy understood a health cow shoud be milked — otherwise it is painful."

On the topic of Thetis Lake Park, Haddock says there is "no way" he will take part in dedicating it as parkland.

GIVEAWAY

"I refuse to give any of Victoria's assets away — dedicating it is giving it away."

The park area should be sold to the regional government, he says, for a price that would have to be negotiated.

What exactly is Haddock's position on development of the Reid waterfront property on Wharf Street?

"I say don't turn down Mr. Reid until all the alternatives are known and all the people know all the alternatives."

CRITICAL

He criticized Ald. Peter Pollen, his major opponent in the mayoralty race, for saying the city had got the wrong end of a bad deal in buying the Ocean Cement property, a key move to spring the Reid development.

"That's nonsense — plain bloody nonsense," Haddock said. "It seemed to me a fairly decent deal . . . let's be happy about it — it hasn't cost us any more money."

He said the Ocean Cement purchase is "the biggest step in the history of the city."

In his 1971 inaugural address, Haddock's major point was the construction of

'New Blood Needed' In Victoria

ISHERWOOD

Lawyer and former Saanich alderman Foster Isherwood says he entered Victoria's mayoralty campaign because there is a need for new blood in civic politics.

Times: You showed little interest in Victoria affairs before you announced your candidacy. It came as a complete surprise.

Isherwood: I think not. First when I announced I would be a candidate in September, we had a very sick administration. The mayor had been laid up for almost three months with a heart attack. Another alderman had been struck down with a heart attack and there was much confusion and conflict in city council at that time.

I have taken a keen interest in public affairs — as an alderman in Saanich I have attended to my duties and I have also taken a keen interest in those things which lap over into the city.

And I'm actively concerned with the regional government and how it is becoming a large layer of government on top of it — and that was another reason why I decided I would run. And I felt also that there was need for new blood.

Times: What is your platform, in specific terms.

Isherwood: It is to bring the city more into the focus of all of the peoples' concerns and actual participation, I feel that council must be reformed, that the people should have greater participation, especially in matters affecting them such as planning. I've always felt this — this is the most important aspect of civic government apart from the day to day administration, and holding down costs and getting the most for the taxpayer's dollar.

And I think there is a legitimate third position in this campaign. Not either one extreme of the administration of the man who has made a plea for re-election or the other extreme, the challenge of whatever you wish to call it, the broad sweeping new ideas of the alderman who challenges the administration. I think there is a happy medium to follow throughout in the city's deliberations and its work, compromise can be effectively brought about and can be for the good of all involved.

Times: You have said Mayor Haddock and Ald. Peter Pollen are fighting this on a personal level.

Isherwood: They have made personal statements . . . they have made them about each other and about each other's work. In some respects I feel everyone who seeks office in politics or in government makes it personal. They have their own personal services to offer. They have more to offer than anyone else. We are all somewhat conceited who seek public office or we probably wouldn't suffer all of the slings and arrows that are thrust at us.

But I do feel that it is quite evident that they have made it a personal campaign by various references to each other's abilities, and how the city is being managed.

Times: What about the issue of parochialism?

Isherwood: Well, I feel that parochialism has been brought into the campaign by the mayor. He refers only to people who live in Victoria and he thinks that only Victoria residents should have a right to talk about what is going on in Victoria.

And I think Victoria is the whole community . . . I think that we all have a very important stake in Victoria. Victoria is the capital. It is the nucleus.

We want to preserve what is good here and protect the very best and design better uses and developments in the future. So whether we live in Victoria or work and own property and are keenly concerned with the welfare of the city is immaterial.

The other thing is . . . you the press, seem to stress parochialism when you keep referring to me as a Saanich alderman . . . I've seen large advertisements in your press even encouraging parochialism.

TIMES: What does "Isherwood for sound government" mean?

Community Interest His Reason

POLLEN

Peter Pollen is 44 years old, married with four children, lives in Oak Bay and operates a car dealership in Victoria. He is completing his first two-year term on city council and is now seeking the mayoralty.

In this interview he expresses his views on a number of current civic questions.

Times: Were you planning all along this year to run for mayor? If not, what made you change your mind?

Pollen: I wasn't planning all along to run for mayor of Victoria. I'm interested in politics. I've made no bones about it. I'm interested in politics because I'm interested in the community. . . .

There is such a complete lack of ability to organize, to rationally discuss, to formulate plans and finances. There's such a complete leadership and knowlledge vacuum, that I think the city is in serious jeopardy . . . That is essentially why I changed my mind.

Times: There is a current of bitterness in this mayoralty campaign. What happened to the friendship between you and Courtney Haddock that was apparent when he ran two years ago and you signed his nomination papers?

Pollen: I don't thing there's any personal fight between the two of us although it might look like this.

I think the mayor has always been obsessed with the fact that I've sad mayoralty qualifications. Even when I signed his nomination papers there was some suggestion that if I were given the community planning chairmanship perhaps I would forego running for mayor for four years. . . .

What I find is a totally inadequate competence — endeavoring to run a city during an extremely critical period . . . on slogans and public relations, like "free enterprise" and "capitalism" and this sort of thing.

I think the mayor himself is a very personable man and a good man. There really isn't any personal conflict that I have — just a challenging of his comprehensive management capacity and ability. That's really the basis of the conflict.

Times: Your criticisms and comments about city business are very broad. Do you think you can satisfy expectations in so many areas?

Pollen: First of all . . . you've got to develop a consensus, an awarness, an understanding, an intelligence among council. . . . You have to look at all aspects, with advice coming from your expertise . . . after you do that then you go with a basic objective and give it to the civil service for a detailed structure. Now there's the process for thought.

Now whether in our particular society you can act in the public interest successfully in the face of strong lobbying pressure from huge international corporations and national corporations, or even cliques within a city, is another thing.

But I would say that more than ever before the city, the province, the federal government need independent thinking people — quite frankly such as myself — that aren't influenced by these massive corporations, people that have a vision and an awareness that insulate you from these great lobbies.

Times: If elected, will you create a permanent rental grievance board?

Pollen: I think there should be a rental grievance board. I should be balanced by other power.

These people are obviously in essense denied avenues to the courts because of prohibitive cost and the duration of time to get into court. And the power vested in a manager of a large apartment block is inordinately greater than a tenant's. So on that basis I would very definitely encourage the development of a rental grievance board.

Times: What do you propose to do about Thetis Lake Park.

Pollen: The park situation is very, very simple.

Obviously, Thetis Park must be recognized as a sacred part of the region. But also, at the same time, the emotional outcry that the council of the city of Victoria is derelict in its duty for not giving the Thetis Park to the region I find completely ire-

Serious Entry Or Gadfly?

SCOTT

William Scott, candidate for mayor of Victoria. Is he a serious entrant or gadfly seeker of the limelight? Is he an unconventional but forward-thinking intellectual or an eccentric?

It would be convenient to pop him into one category or the other and go on from there in making a decision Saturday. Unfortunately, he doesn't fit very well into any of the cubicles already assigned to him by most Victorians.

William A. (Bill) Scott is a successful businessman of 73, owner-operator of a second-hand retail and collateral loan firm downtown and a rest home in Oak Bay, where he lives in a comfortable home at 1066 Newport.

But he was arrested on a charge of trespassing at the Royal Theatre Monday night, where he was singing an operatic aria and quoting Shakespear in a "cultural debate" initiated by him with candidate Foster Isherwood.

Scott has made dramatic and resourceful platform proposals to help with the city's growing urban problems.

PICKETED

He also picketed the June constitutional conference in a wrap-around sign, proclaiming to Prime Minister Trudeau he was a modern-day Diogenes, searching with his lamp for an honest politician.

He has been dismissed as irrelevant by Ald. Peter Pollen, but seems to be treated publicly with deference and respect by Mayor Courtney Haddock.

So what is Bill Scott?

The candidate's election campaign is centred around a pledge to reform the B.C. Municipal Act to allow the city more autonomy in collecting taxes.

SUGGESTED FEE

He wants the act amended to allow Victoria to charge a trade licence fee based on each company's gross revenue. Under the present law, he says small businessmen and low-income earners are bearing the major share of the tax burden, while big companies are paying taxes and fees out of line with the amount they earn.

The fee suggested is 0.05 per cent of gross revenues.

"Let Premier Bennett be premier (mayor?) here for a couple of years and see whether he could improve our financial situation under the Municipal Act in which his government has us imprissoned," Scott says.

"If he can't do it, nobody can. He's a financial wizard."

Scott admits he's a committee man, and would call-in experts to help him set up the machinery for this reform — as he would with all the proposals he puts forward.

He sees more city revenue from another unusual source — students. Scott proposes giving 10,000 students aged 13 to 17 the opportunity to earn $1 each per day. They money would be used to help cover the cost of education in the city.

"It costs more than $1 million a day (in B.C.) to educate our children. And when they are supposedly educated, we condemn a large number of them to unemployment. And worse still, put them on welfare for the homeowner to bear that cost, too.

"How much crazier can we get? Why do we deny our children the opportunity of helping to defray educational costs while they are still at school?"

Scott suggests each school operate its own Cool-Aid-type truck farm, that students get involved in recycling and junk-collecting, in park and beach maintenance and even help reduce the crow population.

DISCUSSION?

"If there are critics who would downgrade this idea, let them discuss it with the students as I have done. They're all for it."

Scott suggests students could also be employed to harvest sea urchins and kelp, which are now being taken, without revenue to the province, by the Japanese.

On other matters, Scott said:

Mayoral Election in Saanich First Since 1967

For the first time in four years there will be a mayoralty contest in Saanich this year.

Voters Saturday will be asked to choose between incumbent Hugh Curtis, who has held the top job for seven years, and candidate A. W. (Bud) Mesher.

There are 10 candidates, including three incumbents, for the four aldermanic seats.

When Curtis was last opposed in 1967 he polled 6,554 votes compared with the 2,573 of his opponent, Gordon Campbell.

In an off-interest year last year with no mayoralty contest the Saanich voting turnout was 14.31 per cent, the lowest in Greater Victoria and probably the lowest ever in the municipality.

CURTIS

Municipal clerk Gordon Hayward said Friday this year's poll is certain to be significantly higher, adding: "It can hardly be any lower."

There are 31,386 voters, an increase of 709 over 1970.

PLATFORMS

The mayoralty candidates' platforms are outlined below:

Hugh Curtis, 39, of 3936 Shorncliffe, is an executive with radio station CFAX. He was first elected a councillor in 1961 and was re-elected in 1963.

He resigned as councillor to run for reeve (the title for mayors at that time) in an October, 1964, byelection and won. He was re-elected by acclamation in 1965, defeated a single opponent in 1967 and won again by acclamation in 1969.

Curtis is chairman of the Capital Region District Board and of the Municipal Finance Authority of B.C. But he announced earlier this week he will resign from the latter post early next year if he is re-elected mayor.

PARKLANDS

He was chairman of the Greater Victoria inter-municipal committee in 1969, and is a past president of the Union of B.G. Municipalities. By reason of his mayoralty office he is chairman of the Saanich police commission.

Curtis lists among "outstanding accomplishments" of council under his leadership the acquisition and continuing expansion of parklands and recreational space, in which respect he claims Saanich has an unequalled record in B.C.; the rehabilitation of Colquitz River and Swan Lake Creek by acquiring stream banks for future recreational use; the municipality's sewer extension program, approved in 1968 and already one year ahead of schedule; the total recreational scene in Saanich — swimming, golf, ice hockey, community activities, senior citizens' programs — developed relatively inexpensively from "literally nothing" in early 1968; and continued progress in beautifying the Gorge waterway.

Curtis says the greatest challenge of his period as mayor has been the massive sewer undertaking launched "to catch up on so many years' inaction and indecision."

COMPLAINTS

He remembers complaints of "backyards soggy with sewage," and children playing alongside effluent-filled ditches. "It was disgusting," he says, noting that the process is now being reversed and once-filthy beaches are clean again.

But Curtis says when the present five-year program is completed in late 1973 "we should pause a little" before considering the next step in sewerage extension. This could be aimed at the Cordova Bay area.

Curtis has no doubts that the Saanich parks program is on the right lines, aimed at expansion of existing parks where necessary and establishment of small neighborhood parks as suitable land becomes available.

"The urban explosion is upon us in this area and open space, green areas, parkland, both developed and undeveloped, is going to be essential for our sanity."

He scoffs at his opponent's public statements that land will be just as available in 40 or 50 years as it is now. "Much of it will be gone within five years," he insists.

He describes himself as "firmly committed" to the cause of preserving Thetis Lake Park from development or encroachment of any kind, and claims there are several ways out of the present impasse in deciding the park's future.

"I think it would be one of the great tragedies of the last part of the 20th century at the community level in Greater Victoria if Thetis Lake park was nibbled at or cut up or otherwise harmed," he adds.

GORGE WATERWAY

The same sort of co-operation by the official bodies concerned is needed in the next stage of reclaiming the Gorge waterway, Curtis believes.

If the co-operation is forthcoming and a concerted drive made on eliminating pollution at both ends of the Gorge — at the Inner Harbor and View Royal — then safe swimming in the waterway is only three years away, he predicts.

Turning to the indoor recreation scene, Curtis notes that the Cedar Hill community centre soon to be built will be the fourth and final project in the recreation program approved by a 1968 referendum. Other facilities already in operation are the George Pearkes arena, the senior citizens activity centre and the Gordon Head recreation centre.

He says the total revenue picture concerning these facilities is "one to be very proud of," because thanks to the healthy profit earned by the Celar Hill golf course they ran at a total operating loss of only some $9,000 in the first 10 months of this year.

PHILOSOPHY

His philosophy on recreation, he says, recognizes not only the obvious benefits but also the fact that "if we are not spending on providing these facilities we will be spending in the police department."

From talking to soccer and baseball coaches and others who worked for youth in the general field of sport, Curtis is convinced that the youngsters participating are not getting into trouble "because they are too busy or too darned tired."

Curtis says he has an open mind on the whole question of amalgamation vis a vis regionalism, but claims it's a "great myth" that amalgamation per se offers the panacea for ever-rising administrative costs.

Present administration costs in Saanich are among the lowest for a community of that size, he claims, but if the municipality merges with the other component parts of Greater Victoria the costs for salaries, equipment and so on will "drift to the highest figure in the area."

REGIONAL CONCEPT

Curtis would like to see the regional concept expand as the need becomes apparent and as the respective areas desire it. He feels this can be achieved without fear of remote, bureaucratic control.

But he believes Winnipeg's new "unicity" system is going to be a "bureaucratic paradise," with career administrators making all the crucial decisions and politicians relegated to a very minor role.

There could well be a levelling-off in taxes in Saanich next year, Curtis says, as a result of a slow-down in the inflationary spiral and infilling development which follows the sewerage extension.

"That was one of the aims of the sewerage enterprise, to encourage this type of development and so to spread the tax load."

He also says he is "more convinced than ever" that the province will soon introduce some form of property tax relief for those on fixed incomes, particularly the elderly.

A. W. (Bud) Mesher, 4772 Spring Road, operates two businesses in Greater Victoria, including an antomobile dealership, and is a former open-line moderator with radio station CJVI.

Mesher says his main reason for running in the mayoralty race is that Curtis has gone unopposed too long and "it's time someone stood against him."

In the campaign to date he has claimed that Curtis' other duties as chairman of the Capital Region District board and of the Municipal Finance Authority make it impossible for him to devote his full time to Saanich affairs.

"I think the municipality needs and deserves a full-time mayor. It has not received this is the past five or six years partly because he (Curtis) has been too busy building a political power structure for his own purposes.

"If I am elected mayor I shall devote my full time and concentration to the job."

Mesher also says if he is elected, the mayor will be "just one of nine decision-makers," and there will be no "overriding" of council.

He rates his chances of success highly, following messages of encouragement that have come from many quarters — including two, he says, from within the present council itself.

FIRST PRIORITY

If elected his first priority will be to examine the effectiveness of the municipal work force, asking the question whether taxpayers are getting value for their dollar.

Any organization with a $3 million payroll, he says, "needs to be looked into once in a while" because there is bound to be some inefficiency and duplication.

"Do we really need 400 em-

'People Served' By Mayor

HADDOCK

Mayor Courtney Haddock declined an opportunity to grant a taped interview based on questions submitted in writing in advance. He did grant a regular interview of which the following is an interpretive account.

When he was elected in 1969, Courtney Haddock said he would be a "people's" mayor, and he has continued this theme in the present campaign.

SERVED PEOPLE

"I feel that I have served the people," he said.

"I have nothing to gain — I have no property to develop — absolutely nothing to gain. I don't even lunch at the Union Club. I am a very ordinary person."

He also campaigned in 1969 saying he would use his business experience as a department store manager to cut city expences. The small decrease in the mill rate his first year in office was eliminated last spring by the highest mill rate increase in 10 years — a jump of five mills.

Haddock said welfare was responsible for some of this increase —"the city has no control over this."

"The city has no control over that, either," Haddock said.

Asked if there would be another increase next year because of commitments made during the past year, Haddock said the increase would be "very very nominal."

WORTH MORE

Beacuse of a broadening tax base, he said, "our mill rate is going to be worth more" in money.

"We may be able to hold the line. I am still hopeful we will."

Haddock has run into criticism for suggesting the Victoria Conservatory of Music be moved out of Craigdarroch Castle, which could be used as a money-making tourist attraction.

". . you press put me down as an anti-cultural type, and I'm not," he said.

'WAREHOUSE!'

His most recent suggestion was to move the concervatory to the Maritime Museum, which he says is "still a warehouse."

"What I am trying to do is see if some more bodies can fit into the Maritime Museum."

When he made the suggestion, he said, "all I was doing was probing. All I was doing was asking."

"I am trying to turn those things to earning that up to now have been expenses."

Another is the Visitors' Bureau, which he says should be out at Swartz Bay. Instead it is trying to dispense information on the Causeway where there is no room for cars to park.

"I am not opposed to the tourist industry," he said. "People say I am trying to milk the tourist industry. I alwasy understood a health cow shoud be milked — otherwise it is painful."

On the topic of Thetis Lake Park, Haddock says there is "no way" he will take part in dedicating it as parkland.

GIVEAWAY

"I refuse to give any of Victoria's assets away — dedicating it is giving it away."

The park area should be sold to the regional government, he says, for a price that would have to be negotiated.

What exactly is Haddock's position on development of the Reid waterfront property on Wharf Street?

"I say don't turn down Mr. Reid until all the alternatives are known and all the people know all the alternatives."

CRITICAL

He criticized Ald. Peter Pollen, his major opponent in the mayoralty race, for saying the city had got the wrong end of a bad deal in buying the Ocean Cement property, a key move to spring the Reid development.

"That's nonsense — plain bloody nonsense," Haddock said. "It seemed to me a fairly decent deal . . ., let's be happy about it — it hasn't cost us any more money."

He said the Ocean Cement purchase is "the biggest step in the history of the city."

In his 1971 inaugural address, Haddock's major point was the construction of

'New Blood Needed' In Victoria

ISHERWOOD

Lawyer and former Saanich alderman Foster Isherwood says he entered Victoria's mayoralty campaign because there is a need for new blood in civic politics.

Times: You showed little interest in Victoria affairs before you announced your candidacy. It came as a complete surprise.

Isherwood: I think not. First when I announced I would be a candidate in September, we had a very sick administration. The mayor had been laid up for almost three months with a heart attack. Another alderman had been struck down with a heart attack and there was much confusion and conflict in city council at that time.

I have taken a keen interest in public affairs — as an alderman in Saanich I have attended to my duties and I have also taken a keen interest in those things which lap over into the city.

And I'm actively concerned with the regional government and how it is becoming a large layer of government on top of it — and that was another reason why I decided I would run. And I felt also that there was need for new blood.

Times: What is your platform, in specific terms.

Isherwood: It is to bring the city more into the focus of all of the peoples' concerns and actual participation, I feel that council must be reformed, that the people should have greater participation, especially in matters affecting them such as planning. I've always felt this — this is the most important aspect of civic government apart from the day to day administration, and holding down costs and getting the most for the taxpayer's dollar.

And I think there is a legitimate third position in this campaign. Not either one extreme of the administration of the man who has made a plea for re-election or the other extreme, the challenge of whatever you wish to call it, the broad sweeping new ideas of the alderman who challenges the administration. I think there is a happy medium to follow throughout in the city's deliberations and its work, compromise can be effectively brought about and can be for the good of all involved.

Times: You have said Mayor Haddock and Ald. Peter Pollen are fighting this on a personal level.

Isherwood: They have made personal statements . . . they have made them about each other and about each other's work. In some respects I feel everyone who seeks office, in politics or in government makes it personal. They have their own personal services to offer. They have more to offer than anyone else. We are all somewhat conceited who seek public office or we probably wouldn't suffer, all of the slings and arrows that are thrust at us.

But I do feel that it is quite evident that they have made it a personal campaign by various references to each other's abilities, and how the city is being managed.

Times: What about the issue of parochialism?

Isherwood: Well, I feel that parochialism has been brought into the campaign by the mayor. He refers only to people who live in Victoria and he thinks that only Victoria residents should have a right to talk about what is going on in Victoria.

And I think Victoria is the whole community . . . I think that we all have a very important stake in Victoria. Victoria is the capital. It is the nucleus.

We want to preserve what is good here and protect the very best and design better uses and developments in the future. So whether we live in Victoria or work and own property and are keenly concerned with the welfare of the city is immaterial.

The other thing is . . . you the press, seem to stress parochialism when you keep referring to me as a Saanich alderman . . . I've seen large advertisements in your press even encouraging parochialism.

TIMES: What does "Isherwood for sound government" mean?

POLLEN

Peter Pollen is 44 years old, married with four children, lives in Oak Bay and operates a car dealership in Victoria. He is completing his first two-year term on city council and is now seeking the mayoralty.

In this interview he expresses his views on a number of current civic questions.

Times: Were you planning all along this year to run for mayor? If not, what made you change your mind?

Pollen: I wasn't planning all along to run for mayor of Victoria. I'm interested in politics. I've made no bones about it. I'm interested in politics because I'm interested in the community. . . .

There is such a complete lack of ability to organize, to rationally discuss, to formulate plans and finances. There's such a complete leadership and knowlledge vacuum, that I think the city is in serious jeopardy . . . That is essentially why I changed my mind.

Times: There is a current of bitterness in this mayoralty campaign. What happened to the friendship between you and Courtney Haddock that was apparent when he ran two years ago and you signed his nomination papers?

Pollen: I don't thing there's any personal fight between the two of us although it might look like this.

I think the mayor has always been obsessed with the fact that I've had mayoralty qualifications. Even when I signed his nomination papers there was some suggestion that if I were given the community planning chairmanship perhaps I would forego running for mayor for four years. . . .

What I find is a totally inadequate competence — endeavoring to run a city during an extremely critical period . . . on slogans and public relations, like "free enterprise" and "capitalism" and this sort of thing.

I think the mayor himself is a very personable man and a good man. There really isn't any personal conflict that I have — just a challenging of his comprehensive management capacity and ability. That's really the basis of the conflict.

Times: Your criticisms and comments about city business are very broad. Do you think you can satisfy expectations in so many areas?

Pollen: First of all . . . you've got to develop a consensus, an awarness, an understanding, an intelligence among council. . . . You have to look at all aspects, with advice coming from your expertise . . . after you do that then you go with a basic objective and give it to the civil service for a detailed structure. Now there's the process for thought.

Now whether in our particular society you can act in the public interest successfully in the face of strong lobbying pressure from huge international corporations and national corporations, or even cliques within a city; is another thing.

But I would say that more than ever before the city, the province, the federal government need independent thinking people — quite frankly such as myself — that aren't influenced by these massive corporations, people that have a vision and an awareness that insulate you from these great lobbies.

Times: If elected, will you create a permanent rental grievance board?

Pollen: I think there should be a rental grievance board. I should be balanced by other power.

These people are obviously in essense denied avenues to the courts because of prohibitive cost and the duration of time to get into court. And the power vested in a manager of a large apartment block is inordinately greater than a tenant's. So on that basis I would very definitely encourage the development of a rental grievance board.

Times: What do you propose to do about Thetis Lake Park.

Pollen: The park situation is very, very simple.

Obviously, Thetis Park must be recognized as a sacred part of the region. But also, at the same time, the emotional outcry that the council of the city of Victoria is derelict in its duty for not giving the Thetis Park to the region I find completely ire-

Serious Entry Or Gadfly?

SCOTT

William Scott, candidate for mayor of Victoria. Is he a serious entrant or gadfly seeker of the limelight? Is he an unconventional but forward-thinking intellectual or an eccentric?

It would be convenient to pop him into one category or the other and go on from there in making a decision Saturday. Unfortunately, he doesn't fit very well into any of the cubicles already assigned to him by most Victorians.

William A. (Bill) Scott is a successful businessman of 73, owner-operator of a second-hand retail and collateral loan firm downtown and a rest home in Oak Bay, where he lives in a comfortable home at 1066 Newport.

But he was arrested on a charge of trespassing at the Royal Theatre Monday night, where he was singing an operatic aria and quoting Shakespear in a "cultural debate" initiated by him with candidate Foster Isherwood.

Scott has made dramatic and resourceful platform proposals to help with the city's growing urban problems.

PICKETED

He also picketed the June constitutional conference in a wrap-around sign, proclaiming to Prime Minister Trudeau he was a modern-day Diogenes, searching with his lamp for an honest politician.

He has been dismissed as irrelevant by Ald. Peter Pollen, but seems to be treated publicly with deference and respect by Mayor Courtney Haddock.

So what is Bill Scott?

The candidate's election campaign is centred around a pledge to reform the B.C. Municipal Act to allow the city more autonomy in collecting taxes.

SUGGESTED FEE

He wants the act amended to allow Victoria to charge a trade licence fee based on each company's gross revenue. Under the present law, he says small businessmen and low-income earners are bearing the major share of the tax burden, while big companies are paying taxes and fees out of line with the amount they earn.

The fee suggested is 0.05 per cent of gross revenues.

"Let Premier Bennett be premier (mayor?) here for a couple of years and see whether he could improve our financial situation under the Municipal Act in which his government has us imprissoned," Scott says.

"If he can't do it, nobody can. He's a financial wizard."

Scott admits he's a committee man, and would call in experts to help him set up the machinery for this reform — as he would with all the proposals he puts forward.

He sees more city revenue from another unusual source — students. Scott proposes giving 10,000 students aged 13 to 17 the opportunity to earn $1 each per day. They money would be used to help cover the cost of education in the city.

"It costs more than $1 million a day (in B.C.) to educate our children. And when they are supposedly educated, we condemn a large number of them to unemployment. And worse still, put them on welfare for the homeowner to bear that cost, too.

"How much crazier can we get? Why do we deny our children the opportunity of helping to defray educational costs while they are still at school?"

Scott suggests each school operate its own Cool-Aid-type truck farm, that students get involved in recycling and junk-collecting, in park and beach maintenance and even help reduce the crow population.

DISCUSSION?

"If there are critics who would downgrade this idea, let them discuss it with the students as I have done. They're all for it."

Scott suggests students could also be employed to harvest sea urchins and kelp, which are now being taken, without revenue to the province, by the Japanese.

On other matters, Scott said:

Mayoral Election in Saanich First Since 1967

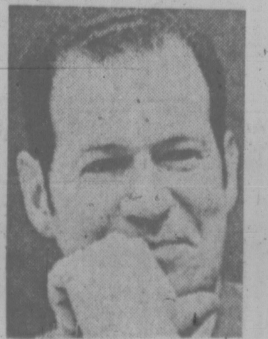
For the first time in four years there will be a mayoralty contest in Saanich this year.

Voters Saturday will be asked to choose between incumbent Hugh Curtis, who has held the top job for seven years, and candidate A. W. (Bud) Mesher.

There are 10 candidates, including three incumbents, for the four aldermanic seats.

When Curtis was last opposed in 1967 he polled 6,554 votes compared with the 2,573 of his opponent, Gordon Campbell.

In an off-interest year last year with no mayoralty contest the Saanich voting turnout was 14.31 per cent, the lowest in Greater Victoria and probably the lowest ever in the municipality.



CURTIS

Municipal clerk Gordon Hayward said Friday this year's poll is certain to be significantly higher, adding: "It can hardly be any lower."

There are 31,386 voters, an increase of 709 over 1970.

PLATFORMS

The mayoralty candidates' platforms are outlined below:

Hugh Curtis, 39, of 3936 Shorncliffe, is an executive with radio station CFAX. He was first elected a councillor in 1961 and was re-elected in 1963.

He resigned as councillor to run for reeve (the title for mayors at that time) in an October, 1964, byelection and won. He was re-elected by acclamation in 1965, defeated a single opponent in 1967 and won again by acclamation in 1969.

Curtis is chairman of the Capital Region District Board and of the Municipal Finance Authority of B.C. But he announced earlier this week he will resign from the latter post early next year if he is re-elected mayor.

PARKLANDS

He was chairman of the Greater Victoria inter-municipal committee in 1969, and is a past president of the Union of B.C. Municipalities. By reason of his mayoralty office he is chairman of the Saanich police commission.

Curtis lists among "outstanding accomplishments" of council under his leadership the acquisition and continuing expansion of parklands and recreational space, in which respect he claims Saanich has an unequalled record in B.C.; the rehabilitation of Colquitz River and Swan Lake Creek by acquiring stream banks for future recreational use; the municipality's sewer extension program, approved in 1968 and already one year ahead of schedule; the total recreational scene in Saanich — swimming, golf, ice hockey, community activities, senior citizens' programs — developed relatively inexpensively from "literally nothing" in early 1968; and continued progress in beautifying the Gorge waterway.

Curtis says the greatest challenge of his period as mayor has been the massive sewer undertaking launched "to catch up on so many years' inaction and indecision."

COMPLAINTS

He remembers complaints of "backyards soggy with sewage," and children playing alongside effluent-filled ditches. "It was disgusting," he says, noting that the process is now being reversed and once-filthy beaches are clean again.

But Curtis says when the present five-year program is completed in late 1973 "we should pause a little" before considering the next step in sewerage extension. This could be aimed at the Cordova Bay area.

Curtis has no doubts that the Saanich parks program is on the right lines, aimed at expansion of existing parks where necessary and establishment of small neighborhood parks as suitable land becomes available.

"The urban explosion is upon us in this area and open space, green areas, parkland, both developed and undeveloped, is going to be essential for our sanity."

He scoffs at his opponent's public statements that land will be just as available in 40 or 50 years as it is now. "Much of it will be gone within five years," he insists.

He describes himself as "firmly committed" to the cause of preserving Thetis Lake Park from development or encroachment of any kind, and claims there are several ways out of the present impasse in deciding the park's future.

"I think it would be one of the great tragedies of the last part of the 20th century at the community level in Greater Victoria if Thetis Lake park was nibbled at or cut up or otherwise harmed," he adds.

GORGE WATERWAY

The same sort of co-operation by the official bodies concerned is needed in the next stage of reclaiming the Gorge waterway, Curtis believes.

If the co-operation is forthcoming and a concerted drive made on eliminating pollution at both ends of the Gorge — at the Inner Harbor and View Royal — then safe swimming in the waterway is only three years away, he predicts.

Turning to the indoor recreation scene, Curtis notes that the Cedar Hill community centre soon to be built will be the fourth and final project in the recreation program approved by a 1968 referendum. Other facilities already in operation are the George Pearkes arena, the senior citizens activity centre and the Gordon Head recreation centre.

He says the total revenue picture concerning these facilities is "one to be very proud of," because thanks to the healthy profit earned by the Celar Hill golf course they ran at a total operating loss of only some $9,000 in the first 10 months of this year.

PHILOSOPHY

His philosophy on recreation, he says, recognizes not only the obvious benefits but also the fact that "if we are not spending on providing these facilities we will be spending in the police department."

From talking to soccer and baseball coaches and others who worked for youth in the general field of sport, Curtis is convinced that the youngsters participating are not getting into trouble "because they are too busy or too darned tired."

Curtis says he has an open mind on the whole question of amalgamation vis a vis regionalism, but claims it's a "great myth" that amalgamation per se offers the panacea for ever-rising administrative costs.

Present administration costs in Saanich are among the lowest for a community of that size, he claims, but if the municipality merges with the other component parts of Greater Victoria the costs for salaries, equipment and so on will "drift to the highest figure in the area."

REGIONAL CONCEPT

Curtis would like to see the regional concept expahd as the need becomes apparent and as the respective areas desire it. He feels this can be achieved without fear of remote, bureaucratic control.

But he believes Winnipeg's new "unicity" system is going to be a "bureaucratic paradise," with career administrators making all the crucial decisions and politicians relegated to a very minor role.

There could well be a levelling-off in taxes in Saanich next year, Curtis says, as a result of a slow-down in the inflationary spiral and in-filling development which follows the sewerage extension.

"That was one of the aims of the sewerage enterprise, to encourage this type of development and so to spread the tax load."

He also says he is "more convinced than ever" that the province will soon introduce some form of property tax relief for those on fixed incomes, particularly the elderly.

A. W. (Bud) Mesher, 4772 Spring Road, operates two businesses in Greater Victoria, including an antomobile dealership, and is a former open-line moderator with radio station CJVI.

Mesher says his main reason for running in the mayoralty race is that Curtis has gone unopposed too long and "it's time someone stood against him."

In the campaign to date he has claimed that Curtis' other duties as chairman of the Capital Region District board and of the Municipal Finance Authority make it impossible for him to devote his full time to Saanich affairs.

"I think the municipality needs and deserves a full-time mayor. It has not received this is the past five or six years partly because he (Curtis) has been too busy building a political power structure for his own purposes.

"If I am elected mayor I shall devote my full time and concentration to the job."

Mesher also says if he is elected, the mayor will be "just one of nine decision-makers," and there will be no "overriding" of council.

He rates his chances of success highly, following messages of encouragement that have come from many quarters — including two, he says, from within the present council itself.

FIRST PRIORITY

If elected his first priority will be to examine the effectiveness of the municipal work force, asking the question whether taxpayers are getting value for their dollar.

Any organization with a $3 million payroll, he says, "needs to be looked into once in a while" because there is bound to be some inefficiency and duplication.

"Do we really need 400 em-

Check House Plants For Tiny Insects

It pays to take an extra long and extra careful look at house plants just now before you become enmeshed in various other things. You may find a few tiny insects before they commit noticeable damage to your favorite winter plants.

Some are small enough to require magnifying with a hand reading lens, especially if you habitually use glasses for reading.

On a Christmas flowering cactus (Schlumbergero bridgesii) for instance you may find a small white speck tucked into the joint of one stem where it joins another. This is likely the "wool" or protective covering of the even tinier grey aphis.

Remove it with the end of a toothpick; if you wish, wrap the end in absorbent cotton and dip in rubbing alcohol (methylated spirits).

Inspect every joint on top end from the underside; mostly the aphis hide underneath, but I find they come out on top when winter sunshine strikes the plant.

Look closely also at the juncture of the flower buds with the stems. Occasionally bud-drop can be traced to these little aphis sucking the juices from the stems.

Other plants to look over now for grey aphis are the different species of Crassula. One is known as Chinese Jade, a tree-like form which should be full of flower buds at the tip of every branchlet. These open soon into exquisite pinky white jewelled stars.

With pre-Christmas activities comes tremendous interest in the sparkling red and green of home garden holly.

We want to send sprigs away to people who have never seen it growing, but we like to be reasonably sure of its good condition on arrival.

There is one fairly easy method of treatment. A 59-cent packet of a product called Fruitone (available at most local florists) has directions on it for a dipping solution and method of use.

First a few other hints.

Take from the branches only the sprigs bearing the berries. They keep better than long branches and this is excellent pruning for a holly from the time it starts berrying.

If you wish to leave the tree looking as lovely as it was before you start cutting, take pieces from all aras in succession not from only one side. The new growth comes in twofold for every cut you make.

Take the holly to a cool place for the shipping and packing, being sure to have the box, the inside paper and the wrapper as cold as possible while working.

Once packed, get it away at once, having decided beforehand whether you send by air or freight. If by freight, add a complete newspaper section as wrapper under the outside wrapping paper to keep out a few degrees of prairie or eastern cold.

SOLUTION THURSDAY

The Bridge Expert

By FRED KARPIN

Today's deal is a real tough one to play in winning fashion. The hand came up in the blue-ribbon Life Masters Pairs Championship event held during the Summer National Championships of 1971. Only one South declarer, Roger Lord, of St. Louis, succeeded in fulfilling his minor-suit slam contract. East-West vulnerable. North deals.

The bidding:

North	East	South	West
Pass	Pass	1 ♠	Pass
1 NT	Pass	3 ♣	Pass
3 ♢	Pass	3 ♡	Pass
4 NT	Pass	5 ♠	Pass
6 ♣	Pass	Pass	Pass

Opening lead: Jack of ♢.

In the system that North-South were employing, North's one notrup response was a forcing bid. After the 4-4 fit was found, cue bids in the red suits by North and South led to a reasonable small slam contract.

The opening diamond lead was captured by dummy's ace, after which the king and ace of trumps were cashed. When East discarded a diamond on the second trump lead, West was revealed as the possessor of a sure trump trick. South's contract was now in dire jeopardy. But he proceeded to play the hand as though the East-West cards were an open book.

A low spade was led next out of the South hand, and when West followed with the three-spot, the board's ten was finessed successfully. A diamond was then ruffed with South's nine of trumps.

Dummy was now re-entered via the king of spades, and the queen of hearts was led. When East played low, South did likewise, with the queen. He then ruffed a spade with dummy's next-to-last trump.

He next re-entered the South hand via the heart ace, and cashed the ace of spades, discarding a diamond from dummy. Up to this point, declarer had taken 11 tricks: three spades, two hearts, the diamond ace, and five trump tricks (two outright, two in the South hand by trumping diamonds, and one in the North hand by ruffing a spade).

South's last two cards were the eight of hearts and the spade jack. West had the J-5 of trumps. Dummy had the heart jack and the trump ten. When South now led the spade jack to trick 12, dummy's ten of trumps could not be prevented from winning the twelfth, and slam-going, trick

FUN WITH FIGURES

By J. A. H. HUNTER

We have 2268 for the game today. Using all four digits each time, two 2.s, one 6 and one 8, you form expressions for consecutive numbers from one up.

Any arithmetical signs may be used but no summation or factorial symbols. Don't forget decimals, powers and roots (no extra digits). For example, 28 x 6 equals 2 is a solution for 32.

The limit without a break in continuity seems to be 100. I shall be glad to check solutions, and will send hints to help in future games if requested.

ployees? Maybe we do, maybe we don't, but I'd like to have it proved to me one way or another." However, he points out he is not advocating any cutbacks in essential services such as the police and fire departments.

Mesher also promises he will take a "very close look" at municipal expenditure in the whole field of social services, where he is convinced abuses of the system are going undetected.

Noting that welfare accounts for about $800,000 of Saanich's social services budget of over $1 million, he says he is strongly in favor of welfare payments to those who really need them.

WELFARE EXCESSES

But he believes there are "excesses" in payments under the present system, and argues that the trend toward forming unions and low-income groups to "demand certain rights" is driving away taxpayers who fear an ever-increasing tax burden.

"I can't reconcile myself to the idea that people who get out and produce, who are the doers, if you like, should be penalized through supporting people who are the non-doers. Fair is fair."

Mesher thinks a second referendum is needed on the recreation question, to get an expression of public opinion on whether the present scale of spending is justified.

"I often drive past parks and playgrounds where the facilities just aren't being used. I think Saanich has more than enough parkland already and it's only five minutes' drive from anyone's doorstep."

He says he is generally in favor of providing open space and parks, but opposes the idea of "buying land for 100 years hence" by saddling today's home-owner with extra taxes.

LIGHT INDUSTRY

Land will be available in the future if it's needed, Mesher says, because many houses in Greater Victoria will became decrepit in 40 or more years' time and the sites will come on the market.

He would like to see light industry attracted to Saanich, but restricted to industrial estates by tight zoning requirements.

He accepts highrises as one answer to population growth and development, while ensuring that the green belt concept is retained. "I think development of all sorts, provided it fulfills a need in the community, should be encouraged."

But as far as municipal spending is concerned Mesher says he is for "holding the line, a breathing spell" until there is an improvement in the country's economic situation.

Why should money be spent "right and left," he said, when many people are out of work and others are finding it difficult to meet their tax bill.

Mesher says if he is elected he will try to promote talks with the provincial government on the possibility of trading the home-owner grant for relief in educational taxes.

He is convinced amalgamation will save money by avoiding duplication of services. He also favors amalgamation rather than an extension of the regional form of government because he feels the former gives "a more personalized form of representation."

Facelift For Old Queen

HONG KONG (Reuter) — The old British liner Queen Elizabeth is getting what is probably the world's most extensive and expensive facelift, costing about $10 million and involving 1,400 workers.

The vessel is anchored in Hong Kong harbor where shipping magnate C. Y. Tung and his Island Navigation Co. are converting the 31-year-old former Cunard liner into a floating university and cruise ship.

Hundreds of workers are tearing out old wiring, chipping old paint and scraping off the rust of two years acquired when the liner was an unsuccessful tourist attraction at Fort Lauderdale, Fla.

Welders are fitting new metal parts, upholsterers are repadding chairs, mechanics are rendering the elevators and engineers are repairing the four engines.

The liner has been renamed SS Seawise University, a pun on Tung's initials, and has been registered in Nassau, Bahamas.

When the liner sails next March it will be under the colors of the courtly, 60-year-old shipping magnate's Orient Overseas line, which already operates 14 passenger ships including two of 18,000 tons.

KEEP ATMOSPHERE

"We are trying to keep the original atmosphere," says Capt. Christopher Lou, passenger services supervisor for the Far East. "Passengers who want a modern atmosphere can take one of the latest liners.

"Our major passenger market is the United States, and especially the grandparents who have the time and money for a vacation at sea. We will give them personal treatment mixed with Oriental courtesy."

The cabins will have all the old Cunard fittings, mostly modernized, and the first-class dining room will remain unchanged. But telephone and piped music are being installed in all cabins and upper bunks are being dismantled.

Seawise University is due to start Pacific cruises in March, groups will be 1,500 members of the Japanese Stop-Smoking Society.

In September, it is scheduled to open as a university carrying about 400 students from Chapman College, in Orange, Calif.

TO THE VOTERS IN THE MUNICIPALITY OF SAANICH:
The Finerty Cove outfall is of prime interest to me as is any area that is being polluted. Even though the Capital Regional District is partially responsible for outfalls and treatment plants, I do not believe that council has been prompt enough in asking the Capital Regional District to come up with a better disposal system if the present system is inadequate which many experts claim it to be. A study presently in progress hopefully will be available to the public in the very near future and we may see some changes but will they be adequate for future needs?

Super Wave on Top

TORONTO (CP) — Super Wave, winner of a record $481,293 in his four-year racing career, has been named Harness Horse of 1971 in the annual poll of race secretaries by the Canadian Trotting Association.

The five-year-old pacer, owned by Dr. George K. Boyce of London, Ont., and trained and driven by Jack Kopas, a native of Lumsden, Sask., topped the list of champions announced by the CTA Tuesday night.

Other winners:

Two-year-old pacer: Strike Out.

Three-year-old pacer: High Ideal.

Aged pacer: Super Wave.

Two-year-old trotter: Garma Fiery.

Three-year-old trotter: Star's Song.

Aged trotter: Fresh Yankee.

Super Wave, retired to stud after winning his 12th race in 26 starts this year at New York, Oct. 9, finished with the highest lifetime earnings of any Canadian-owned harness horse and added a North American record of 1:58 3-5 for a half-mile track to his earlier continental mark of 1:57 over a mile circuit.

The five-year-old son of Shadow Wave finished no worse than second in his last 14 starts, winning eight.

Fresh Yankee, topping Canad's aged trotters for the fourth year in a row, won similar honors in the United States, where she was named Harness Horse of the Year in 1970.

Prisoner Release Planned

SAIGON (AP) — The South Vietnamese government is planning another big prisoner release in an effort to get Hanoi to free American prisoners, official sources disclosed today.

The sources said both North Vietnamese and Viet Cong would be free during Christmas, New Year's and the Tet celebration of lunar new year in mid-February. bruary.

The Saigon government also will announce ceasefires for the three holidays, the sources said. The Viet Cong already has declared three-day ceasefires for Christmas and New Year's and four days for Tet.

The number of prisoners to be freed has not yet been determined, the sources reported. But the Saigon newspaper Xay Dung said the government is considering releasing about 3,000 North Vietnamese and Viet Cong and granting amnesty to another 5,000 Viet Cong.

a cultural centre worth $7.5 million to be built on the Crystal Garden site. Asked what had happened to it, he replied: "The cultural centre will come."

Haddock suffered a heart attack in mid-July and did not return to full duties as mayor until the end of September.

He says he has recovered. "I have clearance from my doctors. I have been playing golf for two months and I'll take anybody on."

He was asked why he had refused to allow the interim rental grievance board to become a permanent body, as its members had requested.

"I haven't refused. I say that we want to know if one is necessary." He wants the board to show who the people are who are making complaints to the board, because he believes the majority are on welfare.

He said the provincial Landlord and Tenant Act, which the grievance board has tried to see enforced, discriminates against the landlord.

"As soon as you start to put clamps on the apartment owner," he said, he cannot compete. The tenant has the advantage because he can always move out of an apartment if he dislikes the arrangement, Haddock said.

Haddock said waterfront development problems will be tackled soon by a committee made up of municipal and provincial officials, but he will not yet disclose details of the committee.

. . . ISHERWOOD

and responsible government. You've missed the other world. Responsible to the wishes of the people, responsible to the needs of the business community.

Times: Isn't this going on now?

Isherwood: This is not going on, no. Council procedure is almost irresponsbile. I find it absolutely shocking that aldermen don't even know how the price is arrived at on the Ocean Cement property, and are complaining bitterly about the negotiations that the city has been conducting for months.

And there seems to be either an element of irresponsibility on the part of the aldermen, or they're not running their government in a sound, businesslike manner . . . all should be fully informed and aware of all business transactions of that size and momentous nature.

Times: What are your views about Thetis Lake Park?

Isherwood: I personally feel that the certain alderman and mayor who have taken the position that it is an asset to the city are very follish. It's an asset to the whole region. The city got it for a song in a water deal.

And the water was for everyone. And to say the park belongs to the city only is taking advantage of the history and the historical coincidence that the city inherited. I feel it should be handed over to the region. I do feel the city should get what moneys it has spent in maintaining that park for the last six years. That would be fair. Plus one dollar and that would be the token payment . . .

Times: Do you not think the city should decidate the land as parland for ever?

Isherwood; I'm not for dedication by the city. I'm for the city turning it over to the regional board. And I'm for the regional board making a deal as fast as possible for the watershed land before they dedicate it as park. Because they should buy that land as cheaply as they can — not just what a promoter thinks he should get out of it because he got a piece of land next to a park.

sponsible and without intelligent foundation. By that I mean simply this: there's no reason on earth why the taxpayers of the city should be asked to give Thetis Lake, which is worth literally millins of dollars, to the region when at the same time they are negotiating the purchase of 3.3 acres of foreshore property in the Inner Harbor from the federal government for $170,000.

As a mayor I would take strong opposition to giving the park to the region. On the other hand, I would take very, very strong action to prevent the park from ever becoming anything more than a park. . . .

Times: You have been highly critical of the city's decisions on planning. Can you get the planning department to work for you? Won't the grand schemes you envision require extensive changes in this department?

Pollen: I can see perhaps a moderate expansion of our city planning department, but you have two options. You have an expansion of the planning department through a amalgamation with Saanich or expansion through amalgamation of the planning of the regional government and Saanich. Obviously these people cannot continue to plan in isolation and pockets . . . there must be a rationalization of planning.

Specifically in our planning department, I would make no prejudgments of our planning competence, our planning capacity until I've been given a thorough opportunity to request expertise or suggestions on development from this paticular department. . . .

Pollen: This is fundamental to my outline of the governmental process. Just because there's a hole that is an industrial wasteland on the Inner Harbor it doesn't mean you have to build a 20 or 30-storey buiding on it. I do believe that development should occur on the Inner Harbor. I have never been against development on the Inner Habor. I'm certainly strongly against the three-tower concept and the three-tower concept. I think these are just over-building.

I'm sure we've never seen any type of feasibility study on the Reid centre — its economic basis, its financing, its composition of hotels versus shops versus residences. . . . In my opinion we've got two options. We can allow the development as it is generally formulated, which I think would be a disaster. The other option is to make Mr. Reid adhere to very strict density standards as established in the Acres Western report. Acres Western people say they did not recommend the building of a highrise or highrises on the Inner Harbor, yet this report is used as a pretext, as a legitimizer to this constrosity by unthinking people connected with it. . . .

But there's no justification for this highrise.

Times: Did you change your mind about the Reid centre at one point?

Pollen: It's not a matter of changing your mind . . . obviously — and let's be very frank and very basic about it — I fought the rape of the Inner Harbor and the building of this monstrosity all by myself. Gradually as people became more and more aware of the environmental consequences and the total absurdity of the thing — I became more encouraged . . . perhaps I had a chance to stop this thing.

During this process, if I couldn't have the Reid centre eliminated, then there had to be an area of compromise. The other thing — quite frankly, as one goes through this very exhaustive detailed process of controversy, one has a tendency to change one's mind in view of facts presented. Initially all I really wanted was the Reid centre to be built back from the foreshore. Then I realized after a certain amount of thought that the building was also too high.

Reid Centre: "I admire it as a fine piece of architecture; but in the wrong place. I would go to the experts — set up a comprehensive planning board to decide where we want high-rise and where we don't, and what would be best for the inner harbor area.

"My personal opinion is that the area would be better used for a cultural and convention centre, built with funds made available under a reformed Municipal Act.

"But that would be my own opinion, and I wouldn't want it given any more weight than any other legitimate view expressed to the experts."

Traffic: There should be areas on the perimeter of the city where cars could be parked en masse. From there, commuter buses, mini-buses, could get the people downtown and back with less fuss and bother than is facing us now in increasing amounts.

"Maybe the major retail outlets could operate their own buses to and from their stores.

Electioneering: "One of my supporters suggested that it might be a good idea to get out and knock on doors, meet the people. That's nonsense.

"Door-knocking is for when you're dealing with people who can't read or write. In this day and age, It's what you could do for the city that they're interested in . . . not you personally, standing on the doorstep."

City Hall: "One of the problems now is that our city hall is mealy-mouthed, a dead spot in a city which is fast becoming a cemetery — the only cemetery in the world with a business section.

"It has been said that the candidates in this election are exhibitng a curious detachment.

"I refuse to accept that for my own part. It is not true now and would not be true if I were elected."

Turini Tonight

Those who obviously yearned to hear more from Canadian pianist Ronald Turini at this week's sold out Victoria Symphony concerts will get their chance tonight.

At McPherson Playhouse, the artist-virtuoso will present a brilliant program that will include two Bach-Busoni Chorales, a Schubert Sonata, Chopin Etudes and the F minor Ballade and groups of works by Rachmaninov and Liszt, the latter's splendid Hungarian Rhapsody No. 13 concluding the recital.

The recital is the second in Victoria Symphony Society's 1971-72 international artists' series.

Tonight's recital begins at 8:30.

Cuba Grabs Ships

HAVANA (Reuter) — The Cuban navy has captured a ship it says was used in three landings of anti-Castro forces from the United States on Cuba.

An armed forces communique Tuesday in the official daily newspaper Granman, said the Layla Express, flying a Panamanian flag, was captured Sunday near Cuba's northeast coast.

It did not say how many crew members were on the ship, or give their nationalities, but said they included some "direct participants to various criminal actions against our country."

The communique said the 690-ton tanker was owned by "the Babún family" which it said were well-known counter-revolutionary elements who participated in the Bay of Pigs invasion in 1961.

The communique said the ship had ben used by the U.S. Central Intelligence, Agency for three landings of "counter-revolutionary elements" on Cuba — in October and November, 1968, and May, 1969.

Jobs, Profits Prime Concern of Heath

BRITISH COMMONS FACING UNPREDICTABLE CONFRONTATION

By HAROLD MORRISON

LONDON (CP) — Britian faces a year of great political and historic change in 1972, with promising new alliances to be formed and shoddy old ones repaired and with the sound of gunfire nearby adding an ominous eruptive quality to a quarrelsome parliamentary balance.

No one can measure at this stage how closely Prime Minister Heath may skirt political landmines as he drives the final Common Market legislation through Parliament where the Opposition is preparing guerrilla warfare and where fringes of Heath's own Conservative party are ready to renew revolt.

But Opposition Leader Harold Wilson's own position is far from enviable. He promises a final Common Market battle inch by inch, all through the fine print of the accession treaty, but he cannot be absolutely certain that his warriors will remain loyal.

They split with an embarrassing jolt during the first-stage Common Market vote Oct. 28, when Heath won an enormous victory on the Common Market entry principle. And while Labor loyalty has been fervently repledged, there is lingering suspicion that a number of Labor hearts are not in the struggle.

MAJORITY LIKELY

So it appears that when the shouting is over, Heath will emerge with a majority sufficient for Britain to embrace her new Common Market sisters Jan. 1, 1973.

Amid the parliamentary struggle over this closing episode of debate will be events in Rhodesia where a British hand-picked team will attempt to find out whether the blacks as well as the whites support the proposed new Anglo-Rhodesian relationships.

While the majority blacks shout "sell-out," there is already confidence in official London quarters that the team will turn in an affirmative report, with Britain going through the motions of formally recognizing Rhodesia's independence, seized by white leader Ian Smith six years ago.

And while the United Nations expresses shock over the settlement, Britain will quietly withdraw her sanctions against the former colony, renewing old investment and trade links similar to those which have flourished in Britain's relations with South Africa.

Setting aside political and diplomatic idealism and concentrating on economic links that will pay off in wealth, jobs and profits appears to be the dominating policy of the Heath government.

ECONOMY SHATTERED

But the repetitive echo of the Ulster bullet and bomb, and the mounting toll of dead, suggests that Heath has still a long way to go before he achieves the tranquility on his doorstep that will allow him to concentrate on pure economic strength.

The Ulster crisis is, in a sense, bleeding the United Kingdon economy. Despite the increased flow of British troops and increased recruitment of Ulster defence forces, the economy of Northern Ireland remains virtually devastated, shattered by Irish Republican Army bomb-throwers and snipers who seek to unite Ireland by force.

The British Army maintains it is getting on top of the situation. It points to arrests and increased discoveries of arms caches to attest to its control.

But the daily toll of street slayings, including troops, continues. The split between Roman Catholic and Protestant in the north has widened and become more rigid. The pleadings of Ulster Prime Minister Brian Faulkner fall on deaf ears, adding doubts to the effectiveness of his government.

DIFFER ON SOLUTION

And now the old bipartisan unity over Northern Ireland appears to be coming to an end with Heath insisting on supporting the Faulkner administration and Wilson talking of some form of united Ireland under the Commonwealth. Many Ulster Protestants swear they will die first before submitting to a Dublin government.

The fear among some of Heath's own ministers is that the Ulster struggle, threatening to rupture into civil war, may spread to the mainland where underground anarchists are ready to exploit any issue to advance their objectives.

The 1971 bombings of the Post Office tower in London, as well as the homes of high officials, testified to the undercurrent of unrest in this country.

But with Britain and other countries going through cycles that bring increasing unemployment, the resentment has intensified. Heath has moved hastily with big injections of tax and other aid in an attempt to reduce the one million jobless — a post-war record four per cent of work force.

This government intervention does not suggest, at least to investors, that Heath's own policies are failing. A spectacular rise in Britian's official currency reserves accompanied by a quick pay-off of foreign loans accumutated by the previous Labor administration testify to growing world confidence in the British pound and Britain's economic future.

As he faces the historic job of realigning Britain's role within Europe, Heath is likely to be able to muster the reluctant support of a majority of Britons who, on average, say they are opposed to European Common Market membership but who feel that role is inevitable. Within a year that role is likely to be irrevocable.

Graveyard Shift on Montreal Subway Far From Monotonous

MONTREAL (CP) — It's midnight and the night shift has just come in.

A few bleary-eyed stragglers wait for the last subway trains to take them home.

All around them men are scraping chewing gum off the floors and mopping up the day's footprints from the platforms of what claims to be the world's cleanest subway system.

On the third floor of a square building near Berri-de Montigny station, the central exchange point for Montreal's Metro, night shift personnel are quietly at work at Centralized Control answering telephones and watching optical control boards.

Centralized Control—the subway's nerve centre—is an ultra-modern, almost futuristic room with low ceilings where the regularity of the trains is watched and measured against a computerized clock.

If a train is behind schedule, it can be speeded up with the mere push of a button. And any of the six men on night duty can communicate with the drivers via the system's central intercom or signals in the stations.

CAUSES FOR DELAY

And there can be lots to talk about. A train can have door trouble, a defective brake or a sick passenger. There might be a driver wanting to use the washroom.

Then there are suicides.

In such a case, Centralized Control notifies the communications centre a few steps away on the same floor. Police are called in, and a bus is put into service to replace the train.

Many more things keep the night crew—which numbers about 100—busy in the early hours of the morning.

Apart from the Centralized Control team, there are signal men, inspectors at each station, cleaners, ticket men, track maintenance staff, engineers in power control and Metro police.

And someone has to oil the escalators and drive the trains.

QUIETER AT NIGHT

During the day, when 31 of the Metro's 40 trains are in use over 13.7 miles of track, the staff numbers about 1,000.

It's different at night, quieter and less hectic. In the early hours, the men make their own coffee and send out orders for pizza.

In his office at Henri Bourassa station in the city's north end, Denis Bilodeau is sitting in his office thumbing through his night reports. He's the inspector and responsible for the ticket sellers, good behavior and service to the public.

At the other extreme, Longueuil station on the south shore of the St. Lawrence River opposite downtown Montreal, Benoit Asselin sips his night coffee. He's a standby driver—a man waiting for a train.

Three nights a week, diesels follow the last trains to grease the tracks. And the trains have to be washed and swept.

At 5:30 a.m. the first train, washed and swept, comes down the track at Berri-de Montigny. A cluster of men carrying lunch boxes and an elderly woman who has fallen asleep on a bench are in the station.

Marcel Rose, the man in charge of all the cleaning, also is there.

"In the winter it's the salt," he says.

Trade Accord Seen

Times News Services

OTTAWA (CP) — Meetings in Washington have left Prime Minister Trudeau and senior ministers looking for an end in the near future of international trade and money crises and the U.S. surcharge on dutiable imports.

Although differences apparently remain on the future exchange rate of the Canadian dollar, trade disputes between the U.S. and Canada are expected to be resolved simultaneously.

But Mr. Trudeau said the greatest significance in his one-day meeting with President Nixon Monday was the U.S. president's assurance that his country had no wish to dominate Canada economically or politically.

That statement, made at a Washington news conference Tuesday and reiterated in the Commons, brought howls from NDP Leader David Lewis that Mr. Trudeau humiliated Canada on his trip.

The prime minister's report was "one of the most distressing declarations by any prime minister of this country."

STANFIELD MILDER

Opposition Leader Robert Stanfield, however, criticized the Commons statement by Mr. Trudeau more mildly.

The prime minister was to be commended for bringing back good news of Mr. Nixon's attitude toward Canada. But Mr. Trudeau provided too many generalities and not enough specifics.

Mr. Trudeau said the purpose of his trip had been to seek reassurance from Mr. Nixon that the U.S. had no desire to infringe on Canadian economic independence.

Mr. Lewis said Canadians did not want assurances from the U.S. about their independence. They wanted assurances from the Canadian government that it would "not continue to sell Canada out to the multinational corporations and so destroy our independence.

Andre Fortin (SC-Lotbiniere) said Mr. Trudeau had come back empty-handed. An artificial crisis had been created to take attention from domestic problems.

U.S. EAGER

Finance Minister Edgar Benson said outside the Commons U.S. officials were eager to reach agreement on the international monetary crisis and there is a "very real possibility" of a settlement before the end of the year.

"There is a very real possibility that a settlement can be reached in the next month or two—if not at the Group of Ten meeting in Washington Dec. 17 and 18, then very soon thereafter."

Benson also indicated progress was made towards changes in the 1965 U.S.-Canadian auto trade agreement. He gave no details however, and said officials would still have to work out many aspects.

HORSING AROUND in the snow can be fun and a sure way of getting to school. While the "beatle" slips and slides to its destination, Vicke Cook gets a sure-footed ride from Tammy in the three to seven-inch snowfall which enveloped the capital region overnight.

Snow Will Go, Says Weatherman

Snarled traffic, cancelled air flights, power outages — that was the dismal picture today after winter's first icy curtain enveloped Vancouver Island overnight.

Greater Victoria escaped comparatively unscathed, with only a few inches of snow in most areas, but up-Island communities reeled under heavy falls up to a foot deep.

Snow tires or chains are mandatory on the Malahat which, RCMP said, has a "heavy snowpack," and also on the new Cowichan Valley highway.

Motorists violating the law will be charged, police warned.

Snow was still falling steadily this morning, but the forecast was that it would turn to rain by afternoon and decrease to a few showers tonight, with low temperatures in the mid-thirties.

OTHER AREAS

The snow began to fall Tuesday evening in Victoria and Tuesday afternoon in other areas.

Police today reported a rash of minor accidents mainly caused, as one police spokesman said, "because motorists were caught napping without their snow tires."

Tow truck operators were kept busy hauling cars out of ditches, and most police stations had reports of rear-end collisions.

Victoria, Oak Bay and Esquimalt all had clean accident slates this morning, but Saanich police reported one minor accident involving no injury.

Most of the problems on the roads were in the outlying areas. Colwood RCMP said: "We've had a lot of cars in trouble, mostly ditch calls and rear-enders."

FIVE INCHES

At Sooke, where the snow covering was about five inches, RCMP said many motorists got into difficulties as they headed for work from their homes on side roads.

B.C. Hydro bus services were running to schedule, but the Sooke Stages 7 a.m. run from Colwood Corner was delayed 20 minutes by a fallen tree on Latoria Road.

Driver Jim Golightly didn't wait for help to arrive. Aided by a passenger, he got to work with an axe until he'd cleared a path for his bus.

Trees falling on power lines were also blamed by B.C. Hydro for power outages this morning affecting Sooke, Saseenos, Colwood and Langford. Residents were without power from about 6 a.m. to 10 a.m.

Tuesday night Victoria was hit by a power blackout in an area within Government, Douglas, Herald and Bay streets, lasting about two hours. Parts of Blanshard, Queens and Victoria West were also affected by the blackout.

Air Canada said its early morning flight to Vancouver today was cancelled and another was 75 minutes late.

Pacific Western Airlines reported several flights cancelled with no air traffic able to use the airports at Campbell River, Powell River and Port Hardy.

There was scant consolation for would-be passengers phoning the airline's office in Victoria. After the usual explanation that the line was busy, the recorded female voice said in seductive tones:

"If you are not looking forward to winter this year Pacific Western has some fabulous sunny holidays in Mexico, Hawaii and Jamaica . . ."

STAY HOME

In Duncan today, RCMP were advising motorists to stay home if possible, and only to drive if it was really necessary.

Overnight snowfall ranged from five inches in Ladysmith to over 16 inches on the Old Lake Cowichan Road.

All schools in Chemainus except St. Joseph's Roman Catholic school remained open, but buses were running late.

Baird Funeral Friday

Victoria Ald. Robert Baird died suddenly Tuesday night in St. Joseph's Hospital.

Funeral services will be held at 2:30 p.m. Friday in St. Andrew's Presbyterian Church.

Baird, 65, collapsed in a city restaurant while addressing the annual meeting of the Capital City Speakers Group. He was taken to hospital by ambulance.

Baird suffered a severe heart attack in early September in Seattle and his speech, as guest speaker Tuesday night, was about his illness.

Mrs. Baird was at the Golden Cup Restaurant on Yates when her husband collapsed.

Baird was entering his eighth year of service as alderman on Victoria city council.

He had attended a few civic functions since his September heart attack and had recently been told by his doctors he could begin to work again and drive a car.

Baird was an investments salesman with Doherty, Roadhouse and McCuaig.

China Set For Battle

MOSCOW (AP) — China will not permit India to maintain a military occupation of East Pakistan, informed non-Soviet diplomatic sources reported Tuesday.

The informants, who are in regular contact with Peking but declined to be identified, said the Chinese government will not intervene militarily in the war as long as Pakistani forces continue fighting.

However, should Pakistan show it is unable to hold out against the Soviet-backed Indian war machine, one said: "We will have a tailor-made situation for a people's war.

"China is not going to give it up."

The sources would not detail what form the Chinese action might take, but indicated that Peking would support and supply guerrilla forces that could turn East Pakistan into an Indian-style Vietnam.

The Chinese have firmly supported Pakistan in its conflict with India and sharply castigated the Soviet Union Tuesday for "bullying Pakistan . . . in collusion with the Indian expansionists."

"There is very little that Moscow has done for India, that Peking has not done for Pakistan," one source remarked.

The Pakistani government is reported to be maintaining continuous consultations with Peking on the war and the developing situation in the United Nations, where the Soviet Union in the last two days has vetoed two ceasefire and Indian withdrawal resolutions in the Security Council.

The Kremlin expressed fear Sunday that China may act even before East Pakistan falls to Indian troops.

Diplomatic observers pointed to Moscow's declaration Sunday that the war constituted a threat to its security because of its proximity to the Soviet frontier. Moscow also warned that all countries should stay out of the conflict.

The sources agreed that the Soviet statement was mainly directed at China. They noted that Peking could also talk of a threat to its borders because it shares a frontier with Pakistan and India stretches more than 1,250 miles. The Soviet Union has no common border with either.

Indians Nearing Dacca

Times News Services

Indian troops thrust to within 22 miles of Dacca today, an official spokesman reported in New Delhi, as 20 invading columns fought their way across river obstacles in the heart of East Pakistan.

Judging by official Indian reports, the race to get first to Dacca, capital of East Pakistan, is going to the troops driving west from Assam, who have reached the river towns of Daudkandi, Chagpur and Brahmanbaria.

The first is 22 miles from Dacca, the two others each 40 miles from the provincial capital. India also reported capturing the airport at Comilla, 30 miles southeast of Dacca.

The loss of the important military bases of Jessore and Sylhet as well as of Brahmanbaria now is admitted in Dacca, but on the western front the Pakistanis are still deeply entrenched in the Chhamb sector of southern Kashmir, captured from India in a fierce tank battle.

More than 1,000 miles separates East and West Pakistan. India-held Kashmir borders West Pakistan to the north.

An air force spokesman in Rawalpindi, Pakistan, reporting that more than 250 Pakistani civilians had died under Indian air attack, said if the raids continue the Indians will be given "a bit of their own medicine."

SAYS NAPALM USED

Rescue workers have recovered 275 bodies of men, women and children from a township near Dacca, that was bombed by Indian aircraft Saturday, Radio Pakistan reported today.

The radio said another 150 persons were taken to hospital.

This is the biggest civilian death toll announced by Pakistan so far and is more than double the 112 reported killed in a raid on Karachi Monday night.

An army spokesman declared that the conflict with India was now a Moslem holy war and said "any Pakistani who lays down his life in the conflict lives for ever in glory."

Only a few hours after the "cabinet" of the self-proclaimed government of Bangla Desh (Bengal nation) held a meeting Tuesday on East Pakistani territory captured by Indian troops, President Yahya Khan announced the creation of Pakistan's first civilian government since 1958.

It will be headed by an East Pakistani, 78-year-old Nurul Amin, a veteran politician who will have as his deputy premier and foreign minister the able and ambitious Zulfi-

Police Asked Twice To Forget Charges

Mayoralty candidate Foster Isherwood said today he asked city police to drop charges against opponent William Scott after Scott was arrested Monday night while singing to symphony patrons entering the Royal Theatre.

Scott, 73, pleaded not guilty Tuesday in court to a charge of assault by trespass and was remanded to Jan. 3.

Isherwood, who was handing out electioneering material to patrons at the time of the incident, said he contacted police immediately afterwards and suggested to an inspector "the affair was not so serious from what I could see and that the matter should be dropped."

Isherwood said he then made a second attempt to have the charges dropped and was told that because the manager of the Royal Theatre, M. W. E. Cave, had laid the formal complaint, and because the police had formally laid charges, the matter could not be dropped.

Scott said today that he has had about 50 phone calls from people asking him who prompted the manager to lay the complaint.

Cave refused to discuss the matter today but the court clerk's office verified that the charges were laid by the police acting on Cave's complaint.

Scott said it's "an unsolved mystery" to him how and why the theatre's management was so prompted to act. He said he and everybody entering the theatre were in "a good mood."

"I assaulted them with culture and was imprisoned for it," Scott added that he wasn't trespassing because he had a season's ticket. He said he also had tickets for the two university students who were helping him to distribute pamphlets.

In his statement today on the incident, Isherwood said "I was not involved in any impromptu debate nor was I involved in any of Scott's actions. How he conducts himself is his own affair."

Isherwood said he prepared his statement because "Mr. Scott involved me in the incident and the press did not contact me for verification."

'SHOW CULTURE'

Scott said his performance started after he invited Isherwood "to show our cultural attributes to the patrons of the arts" instead of handing out political propaganda.

Scott said he never had another word with Isherwood but added that his opponent was "quite friendly" and never made any objections to his performance.

Scott said he was treated harshly by the police and made to stand for two hours without shoes, in a cell before his bail was arranged.

MAYORALTY VIEWS GIVEN

Election day is Saturday with polls open from 8 a.m. to 8 p.m.

NEWS BRIEFS

Fire Emergency

LOS ANGELES (UPI) — The fire department declared a "major emergency" today as gale force winds spread a score of brush fires through the populous northeastern rim of the Los Angeles basin, but firefighters held off the flames and only a few homes were damaged.

No Estate Tax

CALGARY (CP) — Alberta will not introduce a provincial estate tax when revision of the federal tax system takes effect Jan. 1, says provincial treasurer Gordon Miniely.

Currently, estates not passing between spouses are subject to federal succession taxes of which the provinces receive 75 per cent.

Dollar Tumbles

LONDON (UPI) — The U.S. dollar tumbled to a new four-year low in relation to the British pound today but the price of the U.S. currency improved in West Germany, Switzerland, Belgium and Holland.

PC Policy Shadowed By Hoopla, Election

OTTAWA (CP) — Progressive Conservatives closed their two-day policy convention Tuesday with the hoopla of pre-election optimism and the election of a new executive over-riding the policy talks themselves.

Over and over the 1,500 delegates repeated the prediction of Leader Robert Stanfield that with hard work and unity the party would form the federal government after the next election, widely expected next year.

They went on to elect Don Matthews, 45, a London, Ont., businessman, as national association president to give campaign strength to the party's organization.

But, as a western MP put it, the hours of poorly-attended policy discussions Monday, and the 370 resolutions voted on Tuesday did not "mean a damned thing."

RESULTS NOT BINDING

Most of the resolutions were written by a headquarters committee headed by Thomas Symons, chancellor of Trent University, and which included Mr. Stanfield.

The rest were added after committee debates Monday.

Results of the balloting—which may not be known until February—will not be binding on the party's Commons caucus.

The resolutions ranged over the whole field of public policy, including foreign investment, legalization of marijuana and the right of any province to self-determination.

Publisher Faces Monopoly Charges

BURTON, N.B. (CP) — K.C. Irving Ltd. was charged in provincial court here today under the Combines Investigation Act with operating three New Brunswick publishing companies as a monopoly.

And, in the Commons, the consumer affairs branch disclosed it is investigating sales of newspapers to the Thomson and Southam groups.

Donald Tolmie, parliamentary secretary to Ron Basford said details cannot be released until a report is made to the restrictive trade practices commission or court action is taken by the justice department.

The charges, laid before Provincial Court Judge Charles Tweeddale, allege that the company operated the New Brunswick Publishing Co. Ltd. of Saint John, Moncton Publishing Co. Ltd. and the University Press of Fredericton as a monopoly.

Judge Tweeddale set Dec. 22 for the next court appearance.

The New Brunswick Publishing Co. publishes the Telegraph-Journal and Times-Globe in Saint John; University Press publishes the Daily Gleaner in Fredericton and Moncton Publishing publishes the Times and Transcript.

The newspapers, the only five English-language dailies in the province, are owned by interests of Saint John industrialist K. C. Irving.

SEARCHED OFFICES

Today's court action follows searches made by federal combines investigators and RCMP officers of newspaper offices in the three cities in April. The investigators were acting with a warrant signed by Judge Tweeddale.

In Fredericton, they searched desks and files of Gleaner executive with a warrant giving them authority to look for documents pertaining to the sale of University Press to Irving interests.

In Mancton, the warrant authorized a search for documents and other company records relating to the incorporation of Moncton Publishing and to the exercise of control over it by K. C. Irving Ltd. from Jan. 1, 1947.

Similar searches were conducted in 1969.

Following last spring's searches Mr. Justice Albany Robichaud of the New Brunswick Supreme Court ruled against an application by K. C. Irving Ltd. to quash the search warrants.

But Mr. Justice Robichaud did quash three warrants used to search the homes of Saint John publisher Ralph Costello, Mr. Irving and Michael Wardell, publisher of the Daily Gleaner at that time.

On Oct. 22, 1969, F. C. Gascoigne, deputy director of investigation and research of the Combines Investigation Act, signed an order authorizing an inquiry into the production, supply and distribution of newspapers in New Brunswick.

Small Investor Drops Out

NEW YORK (AP) — It is widely believed that mutual funds are made up primarily of the pooled assets of millions of small investors with a desire for professional portfolio management and diversification.

Even the Investment Company Institute, trade association of the funds, seems to accept the notion. This is how it describes the role of its members:

"Management investment companies seek to do for the individual what he might do for himself if he had the time, the inclination, the background, the experience and sufficient . . ."

But who are these investors who increasingly have been buying fund shares in lots of $100,000 or more? Small investors? People of insufficient experience and resources?

Third-quarter figures show that more than one-third of the industry's sales were made up of single investments of $100,000 or more compared with 21 percent a year earlier.

Small investors who earlier found themselves pummelled by volatile price changes resulting from the infighting of big institutions in the stock market will be watching for the same thing in mutual funds now.

But clearly they are doing more than just watching. In several recent months, for example, despite purchases by big investors, the industry has suffered an excess of redemptions over sales.

After viewing the figures, Standard and Poor's Corp. made this observation:

"This means two things: One, $100,000-and-over buyers almost doubled their purchases of funds, to $370 million in the 1971 period from $205 million in the third quarter last year; and, two, small investors at the same time actually cut back on their fund buying, to $730 million in the latest quarter from $770 million."

Small investors also have been withdrawing gradually from direct stock investments, as related by the steady excess of small lot selling in relation to buying. Many observers feel that this behavior represents more than just caution; instead, they feel, it signifies disillusionment.

"There are all sorts of people that I run into that don't want to buy any stock at all," William McChesney Martin told a meeting of the New York Financial Writers.

Martin, author of a recent report that recommended reforms in the market, added that the integrity of the investment industry must be restored following disclosures of excesses and abuses and sins of omission.

No longer is there any mystery about what the 'small' investor is doing; he's getting out. And no longer is there any doubt about the consequences to the market for this behavior.

From Bottom to Top on 10c

OTTAWA (CP) — Nine years ago Gerry Bisson was at rock bottom. He owed $325,000, had 55 judgments against him and his wages as a car salesman were garnisheed.

Today, he owns 15 gasoline stations in eastern Ontario, plans to open three more next spring and believes he will have 500 across Canada by 1980.

The reason for Gerry Bisson's meteoric rise is the same reason many gas station operators appear to see a bleak future for themselves: Discount gasoline.

To discount operators like Mr. Bisson, low-price gasoline outlets have brought prosperity. But operators of brand-name stations say they are worried about the widening gap between their higher prices and those of the cut-rate, no-frills discount outlets.

Gasoline sold by discount outlets is usually provided by brand-name companies with surplus they are willing to dispose of at low prices.

The discount outlets get the gas at a reduced price, but do not get any benefit from the companies' advertising since the gas is not sold under a brand name.

TEN CENTS LESS

Roy Rump, who operates a brand-name station here, says most discount outlets sell for 10 cents a gallon less than the regular stations. Some discount operations in communities near Ottawa at one point were charging 34.9 and 35.9 cents a gallon. Others on the suburban fringe charged 39.9 cents a gallon.

On the average, the discount outlets sold gas for a cent less than Mr. Rump bought it.

"If they can afford to sell it to the discounters for that, then they can afford to sell it to us for the same price," said Mr. Rump. "If not, the fellow buying his gas from me must be subsidizing the fellow buying it from the discounter."

If there are gasoline surpluses, he asked, why don't the companies give a discount to the regular dealers, who can then pass it on to their customers?

MORE FAILURES

He estimates he will lose 35,000 gallons in individual sales this year because of five discount outlets opened within a mile of his station. He forecasts that many of Ottawa's 300 regular operators will go bankrupt this winter if the 10-cent price spread continues.

A 25-per-cent failure rate among service station operators would likely rise to 35 per cent in the current hard times.

The starting point was April, 1967, when he opened a gas bar outside a speedway he owned near Ottawa. The gas bar gave him cheap gas for his own vehicles. But even at three cents a gallon below the price of his nearest competitor, it brought in few outside customers.

In November, 1967, he dropped his gas prices. Weekly gross sales jumped from $400 then to $8,000 in July, 1968. A second outlet was opened in 1969 in Quebec.

Gross sales were $78,000 in 1968 and $3 million this year and are expected to be at least $4 million in 1972.

That may be one reason why Mr. Bisson was able to get his entire investment on one station back in 30 days and on another in 60. All profit is ploughed back into the company.

REGULATIONS TIGHTENED

TORONTO (CP) — Securities commissions in Ontario and Western Canada have tightened regulations concerning reporting by corporations of material changes in their affairs.

A statement said the new regulation will require companies to report to the securities commission. Previously, companies could report either to the commission or the stock exchange listing their shares.

Companies will be required to report on such matters as proposed takeovers, mergers, amalgamations or changes in capitalizations.

Letters to Clients Sometimes Helpful

TORONTO (CP) — Many of Canada's financial firms maintain extensive research departments which issue regular advice for clients.

Wood Gundy Ltd. — Against an improving background we reiterate our brief that major buying opportunities are presenting themselves in equities, and that investors should be searching out bargains and instituting a selective buying program.

We advise a positive approach and the adoption of a viewpoint that extends beyond tomorrow. Often the most successful buyer is the one who acts ahead of the crowd. Now, more than ever, is the time to be thinking and acting positively.

Bongard Leslie and Co. Ltd. — There is a great deal of value in many Canadian stocks at current levels. Corporate tax reductions will benefit reported earnings for both the second half of 1971 and the full 1972 calendar year. Early removal of the Nixon surcharge would provide a further stimulus to investor confidence on a near-term basis.

Bank of Nova Scotia—The perspective of the Canadian oil and gas industry over the past few years has greatly changed. . . . Increasing attention now is being focused on the problems of finding additional reserves. Whatever the general outcome of the adjustments bound up with the big questions of trade and investment relationships between the United States and Canada, the Canadian oil and gas industry faces great opportunities in the period ahead.

Richardson Securities of Canada—Most of the stimulus to the Canadian economy by the current expansionary monetary and fiscal policies will begin to have their impact in late 1971 and early 1972.

In the longer run a growing U.S. economy should help to . . . insure a satisfactory growth rate in 1972 for the Canadian economy.

MUSEUM KISS CHEERS HIS LORDSHIP

LONDON (UPI) — Lord Beaumont, who recently saw teen-agers kissing in a London museum, told the House of Lords he approves of such buildings being used for petting purposes.

"They (the young persons) were perfectly well-behaved and obviously had nowhere more agreeable to meet. I believe it was instilling in them an interest in the musum which would grow as thy grew older," he said.

Alberta Records Steady Growth

EDMONTON (CP) — Firm growth in most parts of the Alberta economy during the first nine months of 1971 was reported in statistics released today by the provincial government.

The value of manufacturers' shipments for the January to September period was $1.4 billion, four per cent higher than during the same period in 1970. The statistics were contained in the November issue of Alberta Business Trends.

The publication said production increases were noted in the livestock market, lumbering, petroleum products and in coal.

Only sulphur showed a decrease because of world oversupply, the publication said.

Preliminary figures to the end of Octover indicate the value of building permits issued in the province reached $445 million compared with $329 million last year.

Cash receipts from farming operations increased to $560.7 million, eight per cent better than the three-quarter period last year.

Retail trade during the first eight months was up 5.8 per cent over the previous year with department stores registering the greatest increase, followed by grocery stores and service stations.

The publication said the consumer price index for Ednonton and Calgary declined by .2 per cent during October, but the October, 1971, level of 128.8 was 2.5 per cent higher than in October 1970.

Talks Declined

VANCOUVER (CP) — The B.C. Federation of Labor has declined an invitation to discuss policy with Liberal MLAS. In a letter to provincial Liberal leader Pat McGeer, federation secretary Ray Haynes said: "As long as the Liberal party maintains its support for compulsion in labor-management relations and basic provisions of Bill 33, there is no useful purpose in discussing policy."

Restore St. Roch

VANCOUVER (CP) — Work is to start Friday on the first phase of the $316,000 restoration of the RCMP schooner St. Roch. The job, expected to be completed by February, involves replacement of decks and chemical treatment of the hull to prevent rot. The restoration is to take place in six phases to be completed in 1974.

The Wheels Are Wings When the Sun Beckons

Considering what a genuinely pleasant and altogether charming couple they are, it's astonishing how quickly you may learn to hate Maurice and Ethel Wright. If you happened to be retired and bored or nearing retirement and bored with that you might learn to hate them in no time at all.

I came to meet and hate the Wrights because, on my last birthday, the realization dawned on me that I might make it to the retirement age. After all, not many newspapermen do, you know. In Uruguay, for example, where they've humanely studied the mortality rates, journalists are compulsorily put out to pasture at the age of 50. Still, the long odds shorten with every year and so my thoughts have wheeled in that direction more and more for surely, if there's anything in a man's life that needs to be carefully planned, this is it.

It was Gordon Forbes, on our city desk, a man who also has his beady eyes on a mobile life after work, who suggested we go and see the Wrights.

"If anybody's found the answer it's Maurice and Ethel," said he, and so we made a date and Maurice greeted us at the door, a big, amiable, ruddy-complexioned man of 66, and handed me his card. "Maurice Wright, Retired," it read. "No business. No address. Open for golf . . . and bridge." I could see right away that he was going to be hateful.

The choice that the Wrights made two years ago when Maurice retired from the Queen's Printer here was, in a way, remarkable, considering a background of 30-odd years of solid, suburban respectability, a rut so comfortable that vast numbers of citizens, arriving at the retirement age, are content simply to snuggle a little deeper into its well-worn grooves.

The Wrights, deliberately, calculatingly, broke free. They became gypsies, caravan dwellers, trailerites, followers of the golden sun. And if you spend a couple of hours with them where they're parked now out on Craigflower Road you may just find yourself with a whole new slant on that day when there'll be 65 candles on your cake.

The most traumatic wrench in any such decision, the Wrights agree, would be the sale of the house, the house that's meant an adult lifetime of family, stability, roots.

"That really is the big moment in burning all your bridges," recalls Ethel now, a tall, handsome woman gracefully adjusted to a trim aluminum home on wheels that's just 24 feet in length. "Until that day you never realize how much you've accumulated and what a clean break it demands. But you're not losing your roots in a trailer. You simply take the roots with you. You come home to a trailer just as surely as you ever came home to a house."

This particular trailer is the Rolls-Royce of road-running caravans, an Airstream, made in California, as self-sustaining as a space capsule, right down to its three-piece bathroom. The Wrights chose it after trying others and have this advice: "Whatever the make, decide what size you need — then buy the next size larger."

Their's was purchased second-hand in Florida for $6,200 and since the Wrights remained in the United States for more than a year there was no Canadian duty when they came back to their home base. (A British Columbia-made trailer called the Aluma Coach, very similar to the Airstream, is now being manufactured in Richmond and the Wrights think it may be significantly competitive for the Canadian buyer.)

Maurice and Ethel can count on an income of around $600 monthly, but they say that a retired couple with half that and a talent for penny-pinching (presuming the sale of a home has financed the purchase of a suitable car and caravan) could join the fraternity.

Getting there to where the sun shines and back when it elects to shine here would be the sternest test on a lower budget. The Wrights figure on a minimum of $10 a day for gas when they're travelling and overnight stops in private trailer parks run around $3. (Most over-65 caravanners are leery, justifiably or not, of the state parks and, in any event, prefer the electrical, water and sewage hook-ups of the private parks.)

These costs settle down when the gypsies settle down. In one of Florida's most magnificent trailer parks — swimming pool, putting green, sun rooms, laundromats, shops, the works — the Wrights paid $200 for three months for their space and services.

With a little practice, it seems, there's no great trick to towing a trailer up to 30 feet in length. The Wrights will tell you of one 83-year-old Edmontonian still migrating south when the snows come. His wheels are his wings, just as they are for an ever-increasing number of retired people who refuse to vegetate.

For those who might be intimidated by travel abroad there's an ideal introduction through group tours with other trailerites. The late Wally Byam, who founded the Airstream company, pioneered these on a global scale and now several other manufacturers, including the Canadian AlumaCoach people, are following suit.

It was just such an adventure that the Wrights were contemplating when Forbes and I visited them. Come Jan. 17 they'll rendezvous with some 300 Airstream owners, most of them retired, at Tucson, Arizona, and then head on into sunny Mexico.

Maurice reached a long arm across to one of the built-in drawers (there must be a place for everything in a 24-foot trailer and everything must be in its place) and drew forth the itinerary . . . Nogales to Guaymas to Los Mochis to Mazatlan and on to Puerta Vallarta and Acapulco and Mexico City until the caravanners go their separate ways from Laredo, Texas, in early March.

Seldom have I seen a man of 66 with such a downright euphoric expression or so easy to hate.

Ferry Subsidy Continues

By DOUG MacRAE
Times Staff

The federal subsidy for ferry service to remote ports on the west coast of the Island will be continued for another six months, Trarsport Minister Don Jamieson announced this afternoon.

Jamieson made the announcement in the Commons in reply to a question from Comox-Alberni MP Tom Barnett.

The Canadian Transport Commission had said earlier this month the $400,000 annual federal aid to two shipping companies serving 12 remote coastal ports would end Dec. 31.

Barnett, an NDP member, said he had been "digging persistently, but not screaming" to get the CTC to review its decision to end the subsidies.

The commission will "reassess" the situation during the 12-month continuation period, "with a view to deciding whether there are any alternatives or whether the subsidy should be continued indefinitely."

B.C. Municipal Affairs Minister Dan Campbell said Ottawa had acted on wrong information in cutting off the subsidies.

Campbell said Ottawa had been told by their inspectors that the areas concerned are connected by road, which is incorrect.

"Our point is that if that's the basis on which they made their decision, they should certainly re-examine it right away."

Reaction to the government move was swift and critical.

Mark Atleo, an adviser to the Ahoustat Indiand Band, said the decision was "cruel" to isolated Indian and logging communities entirely dependent on the ships.

Ahousat, on Flores Island 18 miles north of Tofino, has a population of 700.

Other communities dependent on ocean freight include Hot Spring Cove, Zeballos, Tahsis, Nootka, Kyuquot, and a number of small logging communities along the sounds and inlets of the rugged west coast.

DON'T KNOW

Atleo said federal authorities "don't know what they're talking about" when they claim alternative supply methods are available.

He said food prices would skyrocket, and bulk or other heavy freight — including fuel oil — would simply not be available.

Ferry cancellation would force loggers and fishermen to take dangerous runs in small boats through frequent winter and spring gales.

Esson Young, president of Nootka Sound Service Ltd., said that even if a first-class road were built to the two communities, shipping still would be needed to serve isolated logging communities.

"They depend on us for food and machinery parts, and they need them quickly, otherwise operations stop," Young said. His firm carries 400 tons of freight per month, as well as hundreds of passengers.

Four Music Leaders Pledge $400 for Arts-Concert Centre

Four of Victoria's musical leaders Wednesday night provided the first boost for an art centre-concert hall fund by pledging $100 each.

Accepting the pledges of $100 each from conductor Laszlo Gati, UVic music chairman Phillip Young, Dr. George Corwin, director of the university chorus and the university singers, and Conservatory of Music principal Robin Wood, was Allan M. Purdy, president of the Community Arts Council of Greater Victoria.

Drawing attention to the facilities of the Royal for large events, Gati said the 280 musicians behind him, were sardine-packed with scarcely room to breathe or draw bow.

Need for an adequate concert hall in B.C.'s capital city has been the subject of numberous committees, commentaries by mayors, public polls, offers of financial participation by Premier W. A. C. Bennett and hundreds of sands of written words.

The latest attempt was made this year when Victoria's civic administration hoped that a federal loan might be available for a start in October. However the city didn't meet the March deadline for application.

In accepting the pledges Tuesday, Purdy commented: "It is no longer a question of whether we should or must have an arts centre and concert hall. It has become a matter of how soon do we start."

The Community Arts Council he stated, is now dedicated to finding a means to get going on the project in 1972.

Benefit Nets Estimated $1,000

As a result of the benefit concert provided by the 280 musicians involved in the current Victoria Symphony program, symphony finances will be improved by an estimated $1,000.

Complete figures are not yet available, reports Laszlo Gati, but he says that there is no doubt that it was a profitable and worthwhile project.

The special concert took place Tuesday night at the Royal Theatre.

There was a queue-up at the box office before starting time and a good sized and enthusiastic audience present.

The same program, with one minor exception, had been responsible for two previous sell-outs, Sunday and Monday.

Ronald Turini, the international guest pianist was given a rousing reception on all three occasions, and will be brought back in the 1972-73 season, according to Gati.

Hospital Pact Talks To Resume Thursday

Negotiations between the Hospital Employees' Union and the B.C. Hospitals Association will continue Thursday in Vancouver under mediation officer Clark Gilmour.

Talks resumed Tuesday under Gilmour, but the two sides did not see each other face to face.

Bill Rolfe, director of technical services for the union, said Gilmour sought the adjournment until Thursday so the B.C. Hospitals Association could consider further a provincially-imposed ceiling of 6.5 per cent increase in salaries and fringe benefits in 1972.

Earlier, the union said it was prepared to resume negotiations but would walk out immediately if the hospitals association was not bargaining "constructively."

A union official said this meant "coming to grips with monetary items without the constraint of a limit imposed by the provincial government."

The B.C. Hospital Insurance Service told hospitals last week it will not pay for increased fringe benefits (except unemployment insurance and superannuation) beyond 6.5 per cent next year.

Jan. 1 Target For St. Joseph's

Jan. 1 is the target date for launching St. Joseph's Hospital into a new era as a publicly-owned hospital with room to expand.

But there's no certainty that date can be met, Dr. A. J. Wood said today. He is president of the Southern Vancouver Island Hospital Society, the public group scheduled to take over operation of the hospital from the founding Sisters of St. Ann.

A complicated transaction involving four parties must be completed before the hospital can move on its new course and the necessary land surveying and legal documentation has been under way since all parties agreed to terms last July.

Wood said there are "1,0001 details to be dealt with and some papers require signing by three parties" but the necessary steps are proceeding rapidly and it is hoped the official turnover could come by Jan. 1.

The parties involved are the society, the Sisters, who own the land alongside the hospital being bought for expansion as well as a major equity in the hospital itself, the Capital regional hospital board, which must raise the money for the land, and the provincial government, which will hold title to hospital and land.

One of the terms of the agreement will see the province lease the hospital to the society.

Wood said there will be some sort of ceremony to mark the gift of the Sisters to the community of an equity in the hospital of about $4 million but details have yet to be settled.

The Sisters started the hospital in 1876. Its operation has become so large and complex they decided in recent years to withdraw from management. Like all public hospitals in British Columbia it is supported almost entirely by public funds administered by the provincial government.

LAST POST FOR CARDS

Today is the closing date for mailing Christmas cards to distant points in Canada and the United States.

Post office information officer Ken Stofer said although there is no guarantee that cards sent after today will reach their destinations in those areas in time for Christmas mail can still be guaranteed outside the Victoria area — from Vancouver Island to the prarie provinces. Closing date for this mail is Monday.

Closing date for local mail is Dec. 17.

Cards will still reach destinations in England on time if envelopes are sealed and 15 cents in postage used.

Closing date for this type of mail is Tuesday.

In order to help clear the Christmas mail rush all post offices in British Columbia will provide house-to-house delivery on Saturday, Dec. 18. Full wicket service will also be provided.

Full wicket service — but no carrier service — will be provided next Saturday. This will also apply on Tuesday, Dec. 28.

Monday, Jan. 3, will be a full holiday for all postal employees.

200 Claims Made For Job Subsidies

Municipal Affairs Minister Dan Campbell said today 200 claims from employers have been received under the provincial job opportunity program and another 200 are expected shortly.

A heavier flow of claims for 50 per cent job subsidies for welfare recipients under the program should be in evidence by the end of the month, Campbell said, expressing satisfaction with the program to date.

The minister also said he is pleased that B.C. telephone Ltd. has hired 17 utility clerks under the plan. Earlier, Campbell had said large industry wasn't participating enough in the program.

Hot Time At Ice Plant

Chief Eric Simmons said the cause of the fire at B. Wilson Co. Ltd., 536 Herald, is believed to be electrical. Damage is estimated at $1,500.

The fire was confined to the lunchroom of the building.

POLICEMAN'S HAT is as good a place as any to show off a welcome cheque, as Shirley Baker's smile shows. Chairman of the United Appeal's residential campaign, she received a $62 cheque from the Saanich Police Organization — for Teens (SPOT), which swelled the 1971 Greater Victoria total to over the $600,000 mark.

'An Altogether Charming Place'

Bastion Square Wins Massey Award

Victoria's Bastion Square today received an official stamp of excellence when it became one of 12 Canadian plazas, malls and parks to be given a Vincent Massey award for urban development.

The five-member jury headed by Ottawa town planner Humphrey Carver, described the square as "an altogether charming place."

The initial idea to restore Bastion Square was contained in an architectural student's thesis.

The $245,000 cost of restoration work was shared among the federal and provincial governments, the city of Victoria and the B.C. Hydro and Power Authority. Another $900,000 in private investments has been added since the initial work was completed.

Developed as a pedestrian promenade on several levels, Bastion Square is next to the site on which rose the original pallisades of Fort Victoria. The restored buildings were constructed just before the turn of the century.

This was the first series of Vincent Massey awards for urban development.

One of them went to the Bloedel Conservatory in Vancouver. The steel and glass hemisphere was pictured as a place "of rich and marvellous beauty" by the jury.

Also receiving recognition were Ottawa's Sparks Street Mall, a square in Trois-Rivieres, a neighborhood park in Montreal's Westmount district, Toronto's city hall square, Rockwood Park in Saint John.

Quebec City's Escalier Petit Champlain and Rue Saint Louis was also a winner, Saskatoon was commended for its new Midtown Plaza and Edmonton's Mayfair Park also took top marks. Calgary was praised for its Plus 15 simplified traffic system.

North Vancouver's recreation centre also received an award.

Special mentions were given Ottawa's Rideau Canal, Hamilton's Dundurn Castle, Winnipeg's Assiniboine Park Zoo and Metro Plaza, the University of Saskatchewan's campus in Saskatoon and the Japanese garden in Lethbridge, Alta.

Probe Asked On Import Car Prices

OTTAWA (CP) — Consumer Affairs Minister Ron Basford was asked Tuesday to investigate charges that imported-car dealers "steal thousands of dollars" from customers by misrepresenting the date of a vehicle's manufacture.

Barry Mather (NDP—White Rock) sent Basford a letter he had received from the Automobile Protection Association alleging dealers update the advertised model year of cars left in stock each September.

The association, a three-year-old group affiliated with consumer advocate Ralph Nader, says "last-year" models are legally represented as current model-year cars and sold at the usually higher price of new models.

The customers, says the association, "only discover they have been tricked when they return to their dealer the next year and discover that their car has been depreciated by two years — almost 50 per cent — rather than the expected one year — 30 per cent."

The letter quotes a recent Nissan Company Ltd. statement that purchasers of its Datsun automobiles know of the redating practice.

"When we followed the . . . practice, we have always expected our dealers to explain to their customers about this practice in import sales to avoid any possible misunderstanding."

The consumer group rejected the company statement.

"Obviously by the number of people complaining to the Automobile Protection Association the customers are not being told the truth."

Other companies included in the association charges were Ford, British Leyland, Fiat, Volvo and Renault.

The association called for legislation to end the updating practice and creation of a rebate system to refund to the dealer part of the cost of expired-model-year cars. This manufacturers' refund would be passed on to purchasers of the old models.

"If the government can stop grocers from selling month-old bread to consumers, it can surely prevent the import-car industry from selling year-old cars and, like Cinderella's fairy godmother, transform them into the latest models."

AT NEW YORK advances and declines were running neck and neck.

Analysts attributed the market's downswing to profit taking and consolidation on recent sharp gains. They also said that many investors were staying out of the market until the international monetary conference is held next week.

U.S. Steel, which received approval for an average of 3.6 per cent price increase, rose ½ to $28⅝.

Prices included Natomas up ⅝ at $62⅝, Eastern Air Lines up ¼ at $22⅞, Boise Cascade off ¼ at $16⅜, International Nickel off ¾ at $39¼ and Litton Industries off ¼ at $20¾.

AT LONDON the market was quietly mixed today. Small interest around noon was not sustained and leading issues tended to fall back in places.

British Petroleum reduced an opening loss of 23 pence to 14 pence while Shell and Ultramar were little changed. Burmah, and associated issue Woodside Oil, firmed.

Leading issues were narrowly mixed while electricals and engineerings moved in a similar way. P and D, Hudson's Bay and Chrysler were lower but Bowater and Woolworth firmed.

AT VANCOUVER, prices were down. Volume was 1,480,225 shares.

In the industrials, International Visual was unchanged at $1.25 on volume of 7,000 shares. Imperial Mines was down .06 to .81, Kaiser resources was at $4.

In the oils, Vargas was down .10 at .56 on volume of 49,000 shares. Five Star was up .01 to .14, Rand Resources was up .02 to .49.

In the mines, Afton mines was down .20 to $1.10 on volume of 417,700 shares. Laronge Mining was up .04 at .50 and North Pacific was down .09 at .41.

AT MONTREAL, banks and industrials led moderate advances.

Combined volume on the Montreal and Canadian Stock exchanges at 1 p.m. was 497,200 shares, compared with 639,300 at the same time Tuesday.

Great Lakes Paper rose $1½ to $17, Murphy Oil $1¼ to $12½, Rio Algom $1⅛ to $14⅛. B.C. Forest Products $1 to $18, B.C. Telephone $1 to $63 and Stelco ⅞ to $24¾.

Inco lost ½ to $28, ¾, International Utilities ⅝ to $40⅝, IAC ¼ to $19⅞ and Noranda ¼ to $29.

Trade Accord Seen

Times News Services

OTTAWA (CP) — Meetings in Washington have left Prime Minister Trudeau and senior ministers looking for an end in the near future of international trade and money crises and the U.S. surcharge on dutiable imports.

Although differences apparently remain on the future exchange rate of the Canadian dollar, trade disputes between the U.S. and Canada are expected to be resolved simultaneously.

But Mr. Trudeau said the greatest significance in his one-day meeting with President Nixon Monday was the U.S. president's assurance that his country had no wish to dominate Canada economically or politically.

That statement, made at a Washington news conference Tuesday and reiterated in the Commons, brought howls from NDP Leader David Lewis that Mr. Trudeau humiliated Canada on his trip.

The prime minister's report was "one of the most distressing declarations by any prime minister of this country."

STANFIELD MILDER

Opposition Leader Robert Stanfield, however, criticized the Commons statement by Mr. Trudeau more mildly.

The prime minister was to be commended for bringing back good news of Mr. Nixon's attitude toward Canada. But Mr. Trudeau provided too many generalities and not enough specifics.

Mr. Trudeau said the purpose of his trip had been to seek reassurance from Mr. Nixon that the U.S. had no desire to infringe on Canadian economic independence.

Mr. Lewis said Canadians did not want assurances from the U.S. about their independence. They wanted assurances from the Canadian government that it would "not continue to sell Canada out to the multinational corporations and so destroy our independence.

Andre Fortin (SC-Lotbiniere) said Mr. Trudeau had come back empty-handed. An artificial crisis had been created to take attention from domestic problems.

U.S. EAGER

Finance Minister Edgar Benson said outside the Commons U.S. officials were eager to reach agreement on the international monetary crisis and there is a "very real possibility" of a settlement before the end of the year.

HORSING AROUND in the snow can be fun and a sure way of getting to school no matter how deep the snow gets. Vicke Cook gets a sure-footed ride aboard Tammy in the Royal Oak area. From three to seven inches of snow fell in the capital region overnight.

Snow Will Go, Says Weatherman

Snarled traffic, cancelled air flights, power outages — that was the dismal picture today after winter's first icy curtain enveloped Vancouver Island overnight.

Greater Victoria escaped comparatively unscathed, with only a few inches of snow in most areas, but up-Island communities reeled under heavy falls up to a foot deep.

Snow tires or chains are mandatory on the Malahat which, RCMP said, has a "heavy snowpack," and also on the new Cowichan Valley highway.

Motorists violating the law will be charged, police warned.

Snow was still falling steadily this morning, but the forecast was that it would turn to rain by afternoon and decrease to a few showers tonight, with low temperatures in the mid-thirties.

OTHER AREAS

The snow began to fall Tuesday evening in Victoria and Tuesday afternoon in other areas.

Police today reported a rash of minor accidents mainly caused, as one police spokesman said, "because motorists were caught napping without their snow tires."

Tow truck operators were kept busy hauling cars out of ditches, and most police stations had reports of rear-end collisions.

Victoria, Oak Bay and Esquimalt all had clean accident slates this morning, but Saanich police reported one minor accident involving no injury.

Most of the problems on the roads were in the outlying areas. Colwood RCMP said: "We've had a lot of cars in trouble, mostly ditch calls and rear-enders."

FIVE INCHES

At Sooke, where the snow covering was about five inches, RCMP said many motorists got into difficulties as they headed for work from their homes on side roads.

B.C. Hydro bus services were running to schedule, but the Sooke Stages 7 a.m. run from Colwood Corner was delayed 20 minutes by a fallen tree on Latoria Road.

Driver Jim Golightly didn't wait for help to arrive. Aided by a passenger, he got to work with an axe until he'd cleared a path for his bus.

Trees falling on power lines were also blamed by B.C. Hydro for power outages this morning affecting Sooke, Saseenos, Colwood and Langford. Residents were without power from about 6 a.m. to 10 a.m.

Tuesday night Victoria was hit by a power blackout in an area within Government, Douglas, Herald and Bay streets, lasting about two hours. Parts of Blanshard, Queens and Victoria West were also affected by the blackout.

Air Canada said its early morning flight to Vancouver today was cancelled and another was 75 minutes late.

Pacific Western Airlines reported several flights cancelled with no air traffic able to use the airports at Campbell River, Powell River and Port Hardy.

There was scant consolation for would-be passengers phoning the airline's office in Victoria. After the usual explanation that the line was busy, the recorded female voice said in seductive tones:

"If you are not looking forward to winter this year Pacific Western has some fabulous sunny holidays in Mexico, Hawaii and Jamaica . . ."

STAY HOME

In Duncan today RCMP were advising motorists to stay home if possible, and only to drive if it was really necessary.

Overnight snowfall ranged from five inches in Ladysmith to over 16 inches on the Old Lake Cowichan Road.

All schools in Chemainus except St. Joseph's Roman Catholic school remained open, but buses were running late.

Baird Funeral Friday

Victoria Ald. Robert Baird died suddenly Tuesday night in St. Joseph's Hospital.

Funeral services will be held at 2:30 p.m. Friday in St. Andrew's Presbyterian Church.

Baird, 65, collapsed in a city restaurant while addressing the annual meeting of the Capital City Speakers Group. He was taken to hospital by ambulance.

Baird suffered a severe heart attack in early September in Seattle and his speech, as guest speaker Tuesday night, was about his illness.

Mrs. Baird was at the Golden Cup Restaurant on Yates when her husband collapsed.

Baird was entering his eighth year of service as alderman on Victoria city council.

He had attended a few civic functions since his September heart attack and had recently been told by his doctors he could begin to work again and drive a car.

Baird was an investments salesman with Doherty, Roadhouse and McCuaig.

China Won't Allow India Occupation

MOSCOW (AP) — China will not permit India to maintain a military occupation of East Pakistan, informed non-Soviet diplomatic sources reported Tuesday.

The informants, who are in regular contact with Peking but declined to be identified, said the Chinese government will not intervene militarily in the war as long as Pakistani forces continue fighting.

However, should Pakistan show it is unable to hold out against the Soviet-backed Indian war machine, one said: "We will have a tailor-made situation for a people's war.

"China is not going to give it up."

The sources would not detail what form the Chinese action might take, but indicated that Peking would support and supply guerrilla forces that could turn East Pakistan into an Indian-style Vietnam.

The Chinese have firmly supported Pakistan in its conflict with India and sharply castigated the Soviet Union Tuesday for "bullying Pakistan . . . in collusion with the Indian expansionists."

"There is very little that Moscow has done for India, that Peking has not done for Pakistan," one source remarked.

The Pakistani government is reported to be maintaining continuous consultations with Peking on the war and the developing situation in the United Nations, where the Soviet Union in the last two days has vetoed two ceasefire and Indian withdrawal resolutions in the Security Council.

The Kremlin expressed fear Sunday that China may act even before East Pakistan falls to Indian troops.

Diplomatic observers pointed to Moscow's declaration Sunday that the war constituted a threat to its security because of its proximity to the Soviet frontier. Moscow also warned that all countries should stay out of the conflict.

Indians Nearing Dacca

Times News Services

Indian troops thrust to within 22 miles of Dacca today, an official spokesman reported in New Delhi, as 20 invading columns fought their way across river obstacles in the heart of East Pakistan.

Judging by official Indian reports, the race to get first to Dacca, capital of East Pakistan, is going to the troops driving west from Assam, who have reached the river towns of Daudkandi, Chagpur and Brahmanbaria.

The first is 22 miles from Dacca, the two others each 40 miles from the provincial capital. India also reported capturing the airport at Comilla, 30 miles southeast of Dacca.

The loss of the important military bases of Jessore and Sylhet as well as of Brahmanbaria now is admitted in Dacca, but on the western front the Pakistanis are still deeply entrenched in the Chhamb sector of southern Kashmir, captured from India in a fierce tank battle.

More than 1,000 miles separates East and West Pakistan. India-held Kashmir borders West Pakistan to the north.

An air force spokesman in Rawalpindi, Pakistan, reporting that more than 250 Pakistani civilians had died under Indian air attack, said if the raids continue the Indians will be given "a bit of their own medicine."

SAYS NAPALM USED

This is the biggest civilian death toll announced by Pakistan so far and is more than double the 112 reported killed in a raid on Karachi Monday night.

An army spokesman declared that the conflict with India was now a Moslem holy war and said "any Pakistani who lays down his life in the conflict lives for ever in glory."

Only a few hours after the "cabinet" of the self-proclaimed government of Bangla Desh (Bengal nation) held a meeting Tuesday on East Pakistani territory captured by Indian troops, President Yahya Khan announced the creation of Pakistan's first civilian government since 1958.

It will be headed by an East Pakistani, 78-year-old Nurul Amin, a veteran politician who will have as his deputy premier and foreign minister the able and ambitious Zulfi-

Police Asked Twice To Forget Charges

Mayoralty candidate Foster Isherwood said today he asked city police to drop charges against opponent William Scott after Scott was arrested Monday night while singing to symphony patrons entering the Royal Theatre.

Scott, 73, pleaded not guilty Tuesday in court to a charge of assault by trespass and was remanded to Jan. 3.

Isherwood, who was handing out electioneering material to patrons at the time of the incident, said he contacted police immediately afterwards and suggested to an inspector "the affair was not so serious from what I could see and that the matter should be dropped."

Isherwood said he then made a second attempt to have the charges dropped and was told that because the manager of the Royal Theatre, M. W. E. Cave, had laid the formal complaint, and because the police had formally laid charges, the matter could not be dropped.

Scott said today that he has had about 50 phone calls from people asking him who prompted the manager to lay the complaint.

Cave refused to discuss the matter today but the court clerk's office verified that the charges were laid by the police acting on Cave's complaint.

Scott said it's "an unsolved mystery" to him how and why the theatre's management was so prompted to act. He said he and everybody entering the theatre were in "a good mood."

"I assaulted them with culture and was imprisoned for it," Scott added that he wasn't trespassing because he had a season's ticket. He said he also had tickets for the two university students who were helping him to distribute pamphlets.

In his statement today on the incident, Isherwood said "I was not involved in any impromptu debate nor was I involved in any of Scott's actions. How he conducts himself is his own affair."

Isherwood said he prepared his statement because "Mr. Scott involved me in the incident and the press did not contact me for verification."

'SHOW CULTURE'

Scott said his performance started after he invited Isherwood "to show our cultural attributes to the patrons of the arts" instead of handing out political propaganda.

Scott said he never had another word with Isherwood but added that his opponent was "quite friendly" and never made any objections to his performance.

Scott said he was treated harshly by the police and made to stand for two hours, without shoes, in a cell before his bail was arranged.

NEWS BRIEFS

Fire Emergency

LOS ANGELES (UPI) — The fire department declared a "major emergency" today as gale force winds spread a score of brush fires through the populous northeastern rim of the Los Angeles basin, but firefighters held off the flames and only a few homes were damaged.

No Estate Tax

CALGARY (CP) — Alberta will not introduce a provincial estate tax when revision of the federal tax system takes effect Jan. 1, says provincial treasurer Gordon Miniely.

Currently, estates not passing between spouses are subject to federal succession taxes of which the provinces receive 75 per cent.

Dollar Tumbles

LONDON (UPI) — The U.S. dollar tumbled to a new four-year low in relation to the British pound today but the price of the U.S. currency improved in West Germany, Switzerland, Belgium and Holland.

PC Policy Shadowed By Hoopla, Election

OTTAWA (CP) — Progressive Conservatives closed their two-day policy convention Tuesday with the hoopla of pre-election optimism and the election of a new executive over-riding the policy talks themselves.

Over and over the 1,500 delegates repeated the prediction of Leader Robert Stanfield that with hard work and unity the party would form the federal government after the next election, widely expected next year.

They went on to elect Don Matthews, 45, a London, Ont., businessman, as national association president to give campaign strength to the party's organization.

But, as a western MP put it, the hours of poorly-attended policy discussions Monday, and the 370 resolutions voted on Tuesday did not "mean a damned thing."

RESULTS NOT BINDING

Most of the resolutions were written by a headquarters committee headed by Thomas Symons, chancellor of Trent University, and which included Mr. Stanfield.

The rest were added after committee debates Monday.

Results of the balloting—which may not be known until February—will not be binding on the party's Commons caucus.

The resolutions ranged over the whole field of public policy, including foreign investment, legalization of marijuana and the right of any province to self-determination.

Publisher Faces Monopoly Charges

BURTON, N.B. (CP) — K.C. Irving Ltd. was charged in provincial court here today under the Combines Investigation Act with operating three New Brunswick publishing companies as a monopoly.

And, in the Commons, the consumer affairs branch disclosed it is investigating sales of newspapers to the Thomson and Southam groups.

Donald Tolmie, parliamentary secretary to Ron Basford said details cannot be released until a report is made to the restrictive trade practices commission or court action is taken by the justice department.

The N.B. charges, laid beore Provincial Court Judge Charles Tweeddale, allege that the company operated the New Brunswick Publishing Co. Ltd. of Saint John, Moncton Publishing Co. Ltd. and the University Press of Fredericton as a monopoly.

Judge Tweeddale set Dec. 22 for the next court appearance.

The New Brunswick Publishing Co. publishes the Telegraph-Journal and Times-Globe in Saint John; University Press publishes the Daily Gleaner in Fredericton and Moncton Publishing publishes the Times and Transcript.

The newspapers, the only five English-language dailies in the province, are owned by interests of Saint John industrialist K. C. Irving.

SEARCHED OFFICES

Today's court action follows searches made by federal combines investigators and RCMP officers of newspaper offices in the three cities in April. The investigators were acting with a warrant signed by Judge Tweeddale.

In Fredericton, they searched desks and files of a Gleaner executive with a warrant giving them authority to look for documents pertaining to the sale of University Press to Irving interests.

In Moncton, the warrant authorized a search for documents and other company records relating to the incorporation of Moncton Publishing and to the exercise of control over it by K. C. Irving Ltd. from Jan. 1, 1947.

Similar searches were conducted in 1969.

Following last spring's searches Mr. Justice Albany Robichaud of the New Brunswick Supreme Court ruled against an application by K. C. Irving Ltd. to quash the search warrants.

But Mr. Justice Robichaud did quash three warrants used to search the homes of Saint John publisher Ralph Costello, Mr. Irving and Michael Wardell, publisher of the Daily Gleaner at that time.

On Oct. 22, 1969, F. C. Gascoigne, deputy director of investigation and research of the Combines Investigation Act, signed an order authorizing an inquiry into the production, supply and distribution of newspapers in New Brunswick.

ployees? Maybe we do, maybe we don't, but I'd like to have it proved to me one way or another." However, he points out he is not advocating any cutbacks in essential services such as the police and fire departments.

Mesher also promises he will take a "very close look" at municipal expenditure in the whole field of social services, where he is convinced abuses of the system are going undetected.

Noting that welfare accounts for about $800,000 of Saanich's social services budget of over $1 million, he says he is strongly in favor of welfare payments to those who really need them.

WELFARE EXCESSES

But he believes there are "excesses" in payments under the present system, and argues that the trend toward forming unions and low-income groups to "demand certain rights" is driving away taxpayers who fear an ever-increasing tax burden.

"I can't reconcile myself to the idea that people who get out and produce, who are the doers, if you like, should be penalized through supporting people who are the non-doers. Fair is fair."

Mesher thinks a second referendum is needed on the recreation question, to get an expression of public opinion on whether the present scale of spending is justified.

"I often drive past parks and playgrounds where the facilities just aren't being used. I think Saanich has more than enough parkland already and it's only five minutes' drive from anyone's doorstep."

He says he is generally in favor of providing open space and parks, but opposes the idea of "buying land for 100 years hence" by saddling today's home-owner with extra taxes.

LIGHT INDUSTRY

Land will be available in the future if it's needed, Mesher says, because many houses in Greater Victoria will became decrepit in 40 or more years' time and the sites will come on the market.

He would like to see light industry attracted to Saanich, but restricted to industrial estates by tight zoning requirements.

He accepts highrises as one answer to population growth and development, while ensuring that the green belt concept is retained. "I think development of all sorts, provided it fulfills a need in the community, should be encouraged."

But as far as municipal spending is concerned Mesher says he is for "holding the line, a breathing spell" until there is an improvement in the country's economic situation.

Why should money be spent "right and left," he said, when many people are out of work and others are finding it difficult to meet their tax bill.

Mesher says if he is elected he will try to promote talks with the provincial government on the possibility of trading the home-owner grant for relief in educational taxes.

He is convinced amalgamation will save money by avoiding duplication of services. He also favors amalgamation rather than an extension of the regional form of government because he feels the former gives "a more personalized form of representation."

Future Looks Bleak For Victoria Yards

By AB KENT
Times Staff

Hopes for new major contracts at Victoria's two largest steel fabricating plants continue to dangle as tradesmen gradually run out of work and are laid off.

Both Yarrows Ltd. and Victoria Machinery Depot Co. Ltd. are competing vigorously with other heavy steel industries on the mainland for what little work comes up in the petroleum, petrochemical, pulp and paper, shipbuilding and deep submersible fields.

But aside from a couple of outfield prospects at this point, neither see other than routine ship repair and mill maintenance jobs for the foreseeable future.

VMD president Harold Husband said the 110 men remaining on the payroll at his Bay Street yard will be progressively reduced as work in hand progresses.

CONTINUE BIDDING

His planning and engineering stafff continues to bid on big contracts, but even if a large job were landed immediately there would be a pause to enable material to be assembled and fabrication logistics to be worked out.

"If anything did develop, it wouldn't be applicable immediately," Husband said.

Five days ago VMD laid off 30 boilermakers. At the same time Yarrows discharged 35, leaving that yard with about 250 hourly-paid staff.

Yarrows, with shipyard and industrial divisions, has been busier lately because of ship repair work, which may come in larger or smaller amounts depending on shipping and the toll of Pacific storms.

Also, Yarrows has just finished fabricating the framework and parabolic reflector for the 100-foot earth-satellite antenna for Telsat Canada at Lake Cowichan. It has subcontracted the erection, which is about half finished.

The most interesting prospect for Yarrows in the shipbuilding division is still in the wishful stage.

FISHING FLEET

Along with other shipbuilding, Yarrows is hoping to take part in building a fleet of 12 deep sea fishing vessels for duty based on the Atlantic coast.

The proposal is that of a diversified company with experience in other fields, and firm details are lacking at this point.

However, Yarrows expects to hold discussions with the firm shortly. A vice-president of the company reached in Edmonton said plans are at a delicate point and he thought further comment should come from the president.

George Forbes, technical manager at Yarrows, said there had been some indication that prototype vessels might be built on this coast and the rest on the Atlantic seaboard.

TWO YEARS

In any case, a couple of ships of the rumored description would be good for two years of construction work, he estimated.

Prospects for VMD are similarly uncertain, but much effort has gone into plans and submissions for the large scroll cases for four turbines needed for B.C. Hydro's Mica dam project, which Dominion Engineering Ltd. bid on.

A contract has not been awarded, but if engineers sent by Hydro to Russia report favorably, it appears the Soviet Energomachexport company will be the turbine builder, leaving Dominion Engineering and six foreign firms out of the running.

Dominion, third lowest bidder, has an agreement with VMD to supply the scroll cases, the chambers which funnel water from penstocks into turbines.

Husband has said such a contract would provide about 18 months' employment at his yard.

Neil Hindle, business agent for one of the largest unions in the yards, said many of his boilermakers have been sent to the interior for steel fabricating jobs at mines and pulp mills. A few have been sent to Hydro dam sites.

REMAIN IDLE

Relatively few are able to find alternative work in this area because the smaller shops have full staffs or little work. Others who have been laid off may choose to remain idle until after Christmas.

Hindle said he was concerned for VMD, whose 1967 action in shutting down its shipbuilding and repair division remains clear in the minds of many who were thrown out of work.

"If I were a local politician I would be concerned not to let the VMD go down the drain," the union agent said.

"Manufacturing is the muscle of our economy, but it needs continuity. If it stops, it is hard to get going again."

Takeover Bid 'Strands Many'

A Vancouver stock dealer has offered encouragement to minority shareholders of Growers' Wine Co. Ltd. who have protested a takeover offer by Imasco Ltd., which prior to the bid held 64 per cent of issued stock.

Preferring anonymity until the stance of his employer is clarified, the stockbroker pointed out that there are few large shareholders involved in the offer.

"There are an awful lot of small shareholders," he said. Many bought their holdings at a higher price than what is offered by Imasco and have done without dividends while the company reinvested profits to increase capacity.

STRANDED

When a company the size of Imasco makes an offer for the small holdings, it does so for a reason and is not bothered by the plight of these shareholders, he said.

"They are stranding share holders on the way, taking their shares without any return on their money after holding the stock six or seven years," the broker said.

(In fact, Growers' did pay a total of 11 cents a share in the years 1966 and 1967 on its B class voting stock, none since. On class A stock, dividends have been paid annually since 1964, but holders are not entitled to vote unless payments are in arrears.)

Most of the shares outstanding are in B stock, for which Imasco offers $3.75 a share, 25 cents less than the offer for A stock.

48,000 NEEDED

The broker said that according to a list of shareholders he had seen, only about 15 individuals represent some 70,000 shares, with the remaining 372,000 shares in the hands of many individuals.

Persons representing at least 90 per cent of the value of publicly-held shares would have to tender their stock under Imasco's offer in order for the takeover to become binding on the rest.

According to the Vancouver broker, about 48,000 opposing shares could block a 100 per cent takeover.

"If there is any way minority shareholders can make a stand, they might as well take it," the broker said.

Costs of its offer to Imasco would be $1.68 million if all shares are tendered.

Imasco, formerly Imperial Tobacco Ltd. with interests in food processing, packaging and other consumer fields, has said its offer is a fair one.

Growers' has been informed the tender of shares to Imasco is "going very well," although figures were not made available."
